THE DAILY EVENING FELEGRAPH-PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1869.

PHILADELPHIAISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23, 1869, OFFICE "EVENING TELEGRATE."

If I were asked to express, in as few words as possible, my opinion of the City of Brotherly Love, morally and architecturally considered, I should say, "Philadelphia, you're a brick!" Human beings generally may be manufactured of common and unmanipulated clay. With the Philadelphian the clay is always burnt. He walks on bricks, he lives in bricks, he gazes upon bricks-he is a brick!

These thoughts were suggested to me on my first view of Philadelphia after an absence of twenty years in the suburb of New York. I arrived here at 5 o'clock on a dismal Sunday morning, having been detained several hours on the road by an interesting amash in the Trenton depot. The train which left New York at 9 o'clock on Saturday evening was followed at full tilt by the one which left at twenty minutes after 9. The first train arriving at Trenton, halted a while to "liquor up." Train number two apparently disapproved of this proceeding, and came thundering in and improvised a collision before half the sleepy passengers well knew what had taken place. I must do the engineers the justice to say that the thing was extremely well done. There was no hit-or-miss about it. The rearmost car, as is the fashion with the Great Locomotive Contortion Act, escaped without much damage. It was the antepenultimate car that suffered most. Half of it was knocked into splinters, and the roof was jammed forward over that of the car in advance. One old man had his eye cut; one mild-looking young man, with a broadbrim hat on, sustained a similar injury in his hand; one of the stokers had his ankle severely sprained. My own injuries are serious, and I intend to sue the company for assault and battery with intent to kill. My hat (one that I greatly prize from the fact of its having been in the family for several generations) sustained a compound fracture of the skull; and my umbrella (which I never trust out of my possession on account of its being a borrowed one) had severa I ribs-I mean whalebones-broken, and was severely injured by the escape of water from the ice-cooler Owing to there never having been any water in th spout when I put it up there, it had not got quite used to the article.

Passing over the bricks-and in a pedestrian sense I have passed over many of them since I have been here-I might remark that the first thing I noticed in this strange city was the impossibility of meeting a Quaker. It may be unnecessary to inform my readers that in New York Philadelphia is always spoken of (with profound respect) as the Quaker City, and that that sobriguet is considered synonymous there with everything that is loud, fast, progressive, and enterprising. I expected to see all the houses painted grey, and all the drinking utensils with broad brims to them. I expected to see every other woman with a coal-scuttle bonnet on; but the nearest approach to this coalscuttle arrangement is the ash-barrels that adorn the side-walks, and which are a very touching and beautiful arrangement. At the theatre I was confident the principal danseuse would twirl her thumbs instead of her legs, and I have secretly maintained that the strongest invective to be heard from the mouth of any bootblack at the corner of Sixth and Chesnut streets was "Thee Little You, thee !" in place of the visual maledictions which garnish the conversation of the annins of Gotham.

During the thirty hours in which I have remained in Philadelphia I have met one Friend, and he was so extremely un-friendly in appearance that had any one told me he was the Mayor's Pet, or a fugitive from Wall street, New York, I should equally have belleved him.

There are various points of contrast between Philadelphia and New York. One of them is that you have no Big Fence, and are not going to have any new Post Office. I hear nothing about a bridge to Camden, an Underground Railway, a Pneumatic Tunnel, and an Elevated Railroad. In Philadelphia I neither hear of nor see these things. In New York I hear of them all the time, but I don't see them. Neither does anybody else. Then again you have no Sorosis-which rhymes with No-Go-Sis-the very thing it has proved to be. I think the Philadelphia Press Club-a noble contrast to the Bohemian tagrag arrangement in New York-ought to be counterbalanced by a feminine fraternity, a sororal sodality of that kind, to save it from literary lopsidedness.

If there is one thing in Philadelphia I admire more

IS IRELAND "IRISH ?" To the Editor of the Beening Telegraph

To the Eatter of the Beening Telegraph. "In the seventy years which have passed since the Yellow Catechiam was written. Ireland has almost emptied herself of those who issued it. They are Fenians in New York or Montreal, but not in Cork. Their place is filled, more than they are willing to acknowledge, by imported small farmers from Scot-land and the lower English shires."-EVENING TRLEGRAPH, Dec 27, 1869. Paragraphs similar to the above are constantly write to rounds of our newsmanners. Editors are going the rounds of our newspapers. Editors are expected to know everything; but they do not, and it is truly wonderful they know so much. Ireland is as much an enigma as a woman, and, of course, as difficult to comprehend. A few years ago the London Times, for some purpose or other, asserted that Ireland was being filled up with English and Scotch farmers. This statement was immediately accepted as fact by the press of this country. Was it true? A little research will tell. From the fling of the first petition under the Encumbered Estates Act, in October, 1849, to the month of August, 1859 (it is only under the operation of this act that the land of Ireland in moderate farms changes hands), £25,190,839 worth of land was sold (over $125,000,000 in gold).

The Irish bought £24,100,780. The English and Scotch, who were said to be buying up all the land in Ireland, bought £1,090,039. The proportions are stated in Appleton's Encyclopedia" as being £22,090,-600 and £3,000,000; but the figures given here are carefully collected from "Thom's Official Directory" for 1861. The reason of the mistake in the "Encyclopedia" is apparent ; many of the English and Scotch purchasers failed to comply with the terms of sale, and the lands in such cases remained unsold, or were sold to Irish purchasers.

It would thus appear that Ireland was likely to continue "Irish."

than anything else (and is it necessary for me to say this is the case with almost every object brought to my notice?) it is the mules on Market street. For the first time in my life, however. I felt the absence of a sympathy which I could not find, and I have already telegraphed to Mr. Bergh to come on here at once. On more than one occasion he has been seen weeping on Broadway, and, when questioned, all that could be got out of him was the solitary word, "Alexander!" As Mr. Bergh was well-gloved at the time, the suspicion that he might possibly be alluding to the kid fist-coverers known as Alexander's, at once fell to the ground. (N. B .- A horse fell to the ground simultaneously.) Upon further investigation it was found that he referred to the historical Alexander, who had handled the gloves so well that at an early age he wept for more worlds to conquer, and that he was likening himself to that lachrymose hero. I beg to inform Mr. Bergh that I have found another world for him. It exists on Market street, and is populated by mules, who writhe under the batons of relentless Balaams. ALI BABA.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The City Amusements.

THE ITALIAN OPERA .- The music-loving public of Philadelphia have certainly not had a surfeit of Italian opera for the past two or three seasons, and with the attractions that Mr. Maretzek offers, the Academy of Music ought to be crowded every night during the brief season of fourteen performances that is announced to commence on next Monday evening. The price for subscription tickets is certainly remarkably low, and at but a little more than a dollar for reserved seats for each entertainment. there is no excuse for lovers of the opera not indulging their tastes. Mr. Maretzek will introduce to our public a new tenor, Signor Lefranc, who, if report speaks truly, is one of the finest voices that has ever been heard here. Madame de Briol, another new artiste, is said be a dramatic singer of unusual alibity, and with Miss Kellogg, Signor Ronconi, Signor Reyna, and others, there is every reason to expect that the performances will be up to a high mark of excellence. In addition to the artists already announced, Signor Lotti, the tenor, who has just arrived in New York from South America, has been engaged by Mr. Maretzek, for his season in this city. Among the attractions of the season will be the production of Rossini's great opera of William Tell, with handsome appointments, and with Signor Lefranc in the role of "Arnoldo." The new opera Pipele, by Ferrari, with Miss Kellogg as the heroine, will also be brought out. The sale of subscription tickets will continue to-day and tomorrow at Trampler's.

AT THE CHESNUT the dramatiza tion from Dickens under the title of Christmas Ecc; or, The Miser's Dream, makes an effective holiday performance. It will be repeated this evening for the last time, with the fairy piece of Beauty and the Beast. To-morrow a new play, written by Laura Keene and Matilda Heron, entitled Champagne; or, Step by tep will be brought out.

AT THE WALNUT Miss Bateman will appear this evening as "Leah." On Monday next the grand military drama of Not Guilty, by Watts Philips, will be brought out. This piece had a great success in London when it was first performed last winter, and as the management of the Walnut are making unusual preparations to produce it in bandwome style it output to prepaproduce it in handsome style, it ought to prove equally attractive here. This scene is laid in Eng-land and India, and the drawa is said to be full of incidents of the most exciting character. At THE ARCH Mrs. Wallace's drama of Little Dorrit performed this evening.

AT DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S OPERA HOUSE a variety of comic performances will be given this evening.

AT THE ELEVENTH STREET OFERA HOUSE the pantomime of The Old Woman who Lived in the Shoe will be repeated this evening. SIGNOR BLITZ and his son will give a magical entertainment at the Assembly Building this evening.

A matinee to-morrow.
