STATE REVENUE.

The Revenue Derived from Philadelphia by the State-Its Amount and Source-Some Items of City Expenditure.

From the annual report of Major-General John F. Hartranit, Auditor-General of Pennsylvania, on the finances of the Commonwealth for the year ending November 30, 1869, we compile important items which, in one way and another, have a special bear-The Ament and Source of the Revenue Derived by the State from the City.

It is impossible to ascertain the precise amount of revenue derived by the State government from the city and county of Philadelphia, but in the following statement are given the receipts during the year ending November 30, 1869, from the sources most easily distinguishable, in comparison with the receipts of the previous year:-1000

BURGLARY IN THE THIRTEENTH WARD-TWO OF THE OPERATORS CAPTURED—THEY EXCHANGE SHOTS WITH POLICEMEN,—At 3 o'clock this morning John Shields, private watchman on Franklin, Eighth, and Poplar streets, and formerly a polleemen under Mayor McMichael, observed three men loitering on his beat, and having about this time last year had trouble with a party whom he suspected of burglary, he gave them a close watch. Becoming convinced that they were there for no good, he went to Girard avenue and came across Sergeant Shuler and Police-man Taylor, of the Twelfth district. The three re-turned to Franklin and Poplar streets, and while standing there saw a fellow come out of an alley near Seventh street. Shields necked him and gave him in charge of Policeman Taylor. The officers then examined the different houses on Poplar street and found everything right.

rtly afterwards a Union car came up Seventh street, and on arriving at Poplar screet, a fellow jumped off. As he alighted he yelled "built" oult!" and took to his heels up Poplar street to Franklin. Two fellows then jumped a fence below Seventh street, and followed after the man who gave the two shots each while running, but did not hit either of the "three. The scoundrels then turned and returned the firing. They ran down Franklin street. Hattles were sprung, and in response Sergeant Me-Donald, of the Eighth district, came to hand and fired after the burglars, but the shots did not take effect. alarm. Sergeant Chuler and watchman Shields fired

On reaching Parrish street, one of the thieves ran into the arms of Policeman Chandler, of the Eighth district. The other two continued on their way, and succeeded in escaping. The two arrested "were taken to the Central Station, where they will have a hearing this afternoon. The policeman discovered that the fellows had got into the pawnbroking establishment of Mr. Freidenberg, at Seventh and Poplar streets, by climbing through the transom over the door. They had succeeded in blowing open the safe, but the timely arrival of Watchman Shields with the police prevented them getting away with any valuables. The burglars give the names of George Morris and Charles Grey, but are known as professional "cracksmen," and by other names at police headquarters. into the arms of Policeman Chandler, of the Eighth headquarters.

The Nine Mises.—It is very satisfactory to learn from Messis. Earie & Sons, as they advertise to-day, that they open for exhibition, some time next week, the paintings by Yagnani of the types of American beauty, entitled "The Nine Muses." We have heard for a long time past a very great deal said about these pictures, both favorable and unfavorable, very little of the latter, however; but the attraction and excitement attendant have been remarkable, and for a series of months in Bostonthey were visited by crowds, and during the intense heat of last summer. There are few mythological legends more striking and picturesque than that which relates to the nine daughters of Jupiter and Mnemosyne. It has ever been a favorite subject with both painter and poet, and the idea of this representation of the Muses first occurred to the artist on hearing a foreigner remark that America afforded no examples of the purely that America afforded no examples of the purel classic face so often encountered in the Old World

AT A MEETING of the Garment Cutters' Associa tion, held on Thursday evening, the following resolution was passed:—

Intion was passed:

Whereas, This association have heard with pleasure that Mr. John Wanamakor refused to reduce the wages of his cutters, thereby rebuking the hasty action of some of the other clothing houses in taking advantage of the time and people's necessities to take from them a part of their hard-earned money, this noble act on the part of Mr. Wanamaker should create sentiments of gratitude in the breast of the laboring classes, and particularly the garment outers; therefore, be it

THE PROCTOR CASE.

The Latest Particulars $50,000 and Proctor Both Disappeared How the Thing was Managed.

Heth Disappeared How the Thing was Mannged.

A visit to the premises No. 220 Chesnut street this morning revealed but little change in affairs. Since yesterday it has been discovered that the absentee had been preparing for departure ever since the 20th of October. Subsequent to that date no payments that could be avoided have been made, notes have been suffered to go to protest, bills have been dishunored, and even the rental unsettled—in fact, the gross receipts were all pocketed and reserved for personal use, with but the dimmution of about $300 per week, which was required to pay hands and actual store expenses. Mr. Proctor left the store for the last time on the night of the 4th inst., taking with him the keys of the safe, a very unusual proceeding, as previous to that they had always been left in charge of the confidential book-keeper, Mr. Wallace.

Mr. Wallace the next morning called on Mrs. Proctor, and informed her that Mr. Proctor had taken the keys, when she expressed astonishment, and hurriedly said she would at once telegraph Mr. Proctor at New York, whither he had stated he was going. One week afterwards she found the keys in one of his coat pockets. For some time past Mr. Proctor has been losing heavily in business, and it is supposed that he determined to at least take care of No. 1. It is now understood that he took at least $50,000 in clear cash with him, being careful at the same time to destroy all traces of the amount. The present stock, which will be disposed of at regular sale, and we might say at bargains, is valued at about $25,000. This, it is supposed, is the sum total of assets.

Fortunately the parties upon whom the loss falls.

about $25,000. This, it is supposed, is the sum total of assets.

Fortunately the parties upon whom the loss falls are all able to stand the brunt; and whilst it will hereafter cause them to guard against all such customers, it will not injure their business in any material way. The $20,000 obtained from Mr. Henry Ashiey, of the firm of Henry Ashiey & Co., is entirely a personal loss, none of the money having been drawn from the firm's account.

The only real sufferers by this disastrous failure are the salesmen employed by Mr. Proctor. Whilst not dependent upon the bounty of their employer, they are not entirely independent. Like the majority of mortals, curselves included, they are forced to pursue some avocation for a livelihood, and upon it they in a great measure depend.

it they in a great measure depend.

Mr. Proctor, in his selections, employed none other but first-class, competent hands, and had this affair occurred one month ago, none of them would have bothered their brains one moment about it, but now, with two mouths at least of dull times staring them in the face, their positions are not to staring them in the face, their positions are not to be envied.

One-haif the hands are to be discharged to-night, and the others, perhaps, will soon follow suit, although the store will not be allowed to lie idle; and as it will most probably, be devoted to the same line, it appears to us that the successor, whoever he may be, could do nothing better than retain the old hands, who are well acquainted with the trade, and who, of course, are all interested in rebuilding the concern. the concern.

Two men were caught in the act of making the counterfeits. A considerable amount of finished and unfinished work was captured, as well as moulds and other implements. The parties were locked up in the Union Street Station for the night.

This morning, at 10 o'clock, they were brought before United States Commissioner Phillips for a heāring. Their names are respectively Edgar Bishop and John Hughes. John A. W. Clarvoe, special agent of the Treasury Department, testified that last night about 8 P. M. he went to a house in Water street near Dock, and entered the basement, where the prisoners were found. Bishop was sitting down trimming counterfeit five-cent pieces. Hughes opened the door. They said they were doing nothing. Found a ladle in the stove full of composition. Moulds were found in the stove, also some under the stove. Those under the stove had five-cent pieces in them, which were still warm. There was a quantity of pieces in a pan, which had been moulded. Took possession of the moulds and coin and some plaster for making moulds. The coin, moulds, and some other utensils were exhibited.

Licutenant Haggerty testified to making the arrest Lieutenant Haggerty testified to making the arrest in company with the secret officers, and also corrol'ook the prisoners to the Union Street Station

United States Deputy Marshal Schuyler testified to being with the party making the arrest. Helped to search the place. Hughes told witness that last night was his first attempt at counterfelling, and also the first of his working in that place. Saw the moulds and the ladie with metal in it.

The prisoners were committed in default of $500
