SATURDAY, JANUARY 22, 1870.

ROBIN O'BOBBIN BERGNER. ROBIN O'BOBBIN BERGNER, of Harrisburg, is in trouble. In this age of spoils-hunting he has demonstrated his capacity to absorb more public plunder than any other man in the State, and there is danger that his insatiate maw will not be as well filled this winter as usual. We have deemed it our duty, from time to time, to make an approximate estimate of Bergner's greed, but really we fear the task is beyond our capacity. If he were to swallow up the whole Commonwealth he would still, like his great prototype, complain of an aching void in his abdominal regions. Most men would be content with the spoils of the post-office at the State capital, but our Pennsylvania Robin O'Bobbin merely wheta his appetite with the tit-bit he receives from the National Government. It is impossible for any single public treasury to satisfy his insatiable longings, so he turns from the strong-box of the nation to the strong-box of the State, as greedily as the calf that sucked two cows. We published some months ago a list of his receipts from the State Treasury of the test-oath requirements, and the era of during the fiscal year ending November 30, 1868, as it is given in the Auditor-General's report. The sum total was $53,090 19, much of which was for practically worthless service. His receipts for last year, as published in the Auditor-General's report of 1869, show a material reduction, amounting in the aggregate to but little more than $20,000. and we should be inclined to sympathize deeply with the unfortunate man if we did not notice that $12,000 of this sum is merely a payment on account for publishing the Daily Legislative Record, and after this bill is made up and settled in full, the taxpayers will be fortunate if any balance is left in the Treasury. But to return to our mutton, or rather to our Treasury-devouring Robin O'Bobbin. His particular grievance at this moment is the indisposition of a portion of the Legislature to permit him to exact the usual amount of plunder from the State this year, on the pretense that he publishes a legislative record. In the fear that Bergner cannot be got rid of in any other way, a number of members favor the idea of abolishing the Record altogether, and we do not wonder at this disposition in view of the following exposure made by a Harrisburg correspondent of the Post this morning. He says:-

Mr. Bergner, who has owned the job for several years past, has grown rich en it, and is of course exceeding loth to have it discontinued. The folly of continuing the publication is apparent on its very of continuing the publication is apparent on its very face, and members have condemned it on its own exhibit. The State has paid lifteen dollars per page for printing it, and of course it was to the advantage of the printer to extend it over as many pages as possible. This was done. The Record for 1869 was made to drag its weary length over more than 1600 pages. This was accomplished by elongation and a total disregard for typographical decency and good taste. Take any number of the Record and you will find hundreds of such examples as the following: find hundreds of such examples as the following: The first section was read and

Agreed to, The second section was read and Agreed to. The third section was read and Agreed to. The fourth section was read and

And again you will find this rescally expansion: The bill was read and Agreed to. The title was read and Agreed to. On transcribing the bill, it was Agreed to.

The first and sections were read and Agreed to. The title was read and Agreed to. On transcribing the bill, it was Agreed to.

Any one will be able to furnish the reason for such elongation. The specimens given above show the fraud that had been annually practised on the Stale Treasury, and the members of the present session do not propose to perpetuate it any longer. Robin O'Bobbin ought to have been satisfied with charging the taxpayers fifty per cent. more than a fair price for this work; but, as he insisted on having his linked sweetness long drawn out, even the legislators are beginning to think that too much of a good thing can be stuffed down Bergner's throat. Consequently that wonderful patriot and immaculate champion of Republicanism is sounding the tocsin of alarm. He sees treason in every attempt to check his greed, and denounces this journal as "a disgrace and an injury to the party" because it will not by silence countenance his schemes of fraud and extortion. Robin O'Bobbin's denunciations are, under the circumstances, compliments of which we feel proud, and we hope the time may never come when our course will meet the approval of this incarnation of greed and systematic champion of corruption.

THE PROSPECTS OF VIRGINIA. GENERAL BUTLER has achieved a signal triumph in the Senate, by securing the adoption of such amendments to the bill providing for the restoration of Virginia to representation in Congress as render it substantially the same as the one reported to the House by the Committee on Reconstruction, and set aside by that body for Mr. Bingham's substitute, by a vote of 98 to 95. If General Butler had been in his seat on Saturday last, he would doubtless have been able to change at least one vote, which would have been sufficient to prevent the adoption of Mr. Bingham's unconditional measure, and in all probability the bill would have passed the House as it came from the committee, and in a shape that would have commanded the endorsement of the Senate. But the vote on the final passage of the amended bill in the House, 142 yeas to 49 nays, shows that the majority of the Republican members either regarded the conditions imposed by the Reconstruction Committee with indifference, or else were so anxious to secure the return of the "erring sister" as to accept any measure which promised to bring it about. The contest is now transferred back to the House of Representatives, and the speedy restoration of Virginia may be regarded as extremely doubtful. The fight over the amendments proposed by the Senate will be both bitter and protracted, and, in view of the decided vote by which the Bingham substitute finally passed the House, the issue is involved in great doubt. Aside from the political issues at stake, there will be a grand tilt between Butler and Bingham, who entertain towards each other sentiments quite the reverse of friendly. Bingham has not yet forgotten the charge brought against him by the hero of Fort Fisher that Mrs. Surratt was an innocent woman, who encountered death on the scaffold through his stupidity and obstinacy, and will be nerved by the remembrance of this, even more than by his professions of liberality towards the Southern people, to exert himself to the atmost to secure the defeat of the Senate measure; while Butler's proscriptive ideas will be reinforced by his hatred of Bingbarr, and the desire to show the country that the latter's influence in the House is of very little weight. It is to be regretted that the fate of this vital measure should depend in great measure upon the merits of a personal quarrel which is of no concern whatever to the public. If the Butler faction, however, should get the best of the contest in the House, and the bill as amended by the Senate should be passed. Virginia will resume her former place in the Union, with some wise conditions imposed upon her. But these conditions will be more than counterbalanced by the utter folly good feeling between the different classes of the population will, by their operation, be indefinitely postponed. If, on the contrary, Bingham achieves another triumph by the rejection of the Senate amendments, the issue between the two houses be so pronounced that the fate of Virginia may possibly hang in the balance for months to come. It is to be sincerely hoped that a compromise may be effected without any delay whatever, the House yielding to the guarantees of a future compliance in good faith with the provisions of the present Constitution of Virginia, and the Senate receding from the exaction of those farcical test oaths which can be productive of but little good, and will be sure to result in a continuance of the hostility between the two races.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE. Some of the members of the Senate and House of Representatives who are loth to surrender the franking privilege are endeavoring to get up a feeling of indignation against the Postmaster-General. They complain, especially, of his alleged free circulation through the post offices of petitions asking for the proposed reform. We do not know whether the last charge is true or not, but it is clear that the course taken by Mr. Creawell is substantially correct. He deserves the thanks of the American people for his efforts to suppress an abuse which even England is no longer compelled to submit to, and which is, in principle and practice, one of the most odious relics of old-time aristocratic privileges. It gives to over-generous or n pulous Congressmen the power to compel the Post Office Department to render gratuitous service for all their especial friends as well as for themselves, and they connive at these petty frauds to an enormous extent. In Great Britain even the Queen must affix a postage stamp instead of her frank to a letter, but a transient partisan triumph so completely turns the heads of some of our shallow-pated politicians, that they fancy their dignity is insulted when they are asked to stop the system of petty pilfering which they have too long encouraged. Mr. Wilson took the true ground, in the Senate yesterday, when he said that "Congress should feel grateful to the Post Office Department for its efforts to aid in abolishing that which experience had shown to be a burden rather than a privilege for Congressmen." Every honest man in and out of the public service should desire the abolition of a privilege which, from its very nature, must necessarily be abused and made the cover of innumerable frauds.

REV. SIMON M. LANDIS, M. D., "Pastor of he First Progressive Christian Church," who was convicted a few days ago of vending obscene literature, was this morning refused a new trial, and was sentenced by Judge Pierce to undergo the severest punishment that the law allows in such a case. Landis will go to the Penitentiary for the term of one year and will pay a fine of $500. Every decent man and woman in the community will rejoice that this filthy seoundrel has at length obtained a portion of his deserts, and Judge Peirce is entitled to thanks for giving him the severest punishment that it was in his power to impose. Landis has been a nuisance in this city for years, and the only regret we have in this case is that he will not obtain all he deserves by the comparatively mild sentence to which the too merciful law restricts the Judge. Another vendor of obscene literature was sentenced at the same time as Landis, and the probabilities are that such carrion will in future be more careful when they put their fitthy wares before the public.
