TUESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1870.

VIRGINIA REDIVIVUS.

CONTRARY to general expectation, the House of Representatives yesterday afternoon concurred in the Senate substitute for the bill restoring Virginia to representation in Congress, by a vote of 136 yeas to 57 nays, the party lines being strictly drawn, and every Democratic member arraying himself against the measure.

There can be no doubt that the President will give his ready, although not cordial, assent to the bill as it has passed both houses. He has within a few days past expressed himself as preferring to see the Old Dominion restored to her place in the Union without any prescriptive conditions imposed upon her.

But, even with this cloud hanging over her, the future prospect of the Old Dominion is infinitely brighter than her past record. She will lose a measure of her fair prestige as "the mother of Presidents," but she has also been purged of the deep and damning disgrace of being the breeding pen of the slave oligarchy.

OUR NEXT PRESIDENT.

We always liked Geary, "Governor Geary," as Bergner's sheet calls him, or the "Gory Geary," as the New York World sanguinarily suggests his astounding military exploits, or as Dr. Gibbon once said, standing in awful reverence before his portrait in the Capitol, the "God-like Geary."

The Gory, God-like Governor Geary has been nominated for the Presidency by a deputation of four gentlemen from the interior who called upon him last week. Need we say that the G. G. Geary accepted? He did. He three times stroked his Rubensesque beard, thrice he smiled, then attentively regarding his magnificent form in the gubernatorial shaving-glass, he murmured, "Gentlemen, you flatter me, but I—accept. See Brewster and ask him to write a letter of acceptance, couched in choice English."

We always liked Geary; the readers of THE TELEGRAPH know that we always liked Geary. We were among the few that first gave him the "credit of, single-handed and alone, winning the "battle above the clouds," and planting the flag on the topmost peak of Lookout Mountain.

Antietam, Gettysburg, Vicksburg, and Appomattox Court House—victories which McClellan, Meade, and Grant sought to wrest from the Gory, God-like Governor Geary. We were also among the few who more friendly enough to give him advice—advice which, for the reputation of the Republican party, we regret he did not accept.

We want the Governor and the friends of the Governor to bear witness that we endorse him for the Presidency. Our first choice was Mrs. Cady Stanton, but she has already the Revolution to look after, and she must give place to Geary.

We even go further, knowing that we cannot fare worse. We nominate Dr. Gibbon for Vice-President. Geary would be nothing without Gibbon. Geary will emphatically declare that black is white, and Gibbon will swear to it. These noble soldiers, patriots, and statesmen must not be separated.

For President—JOHN W. GEARY. For Vice-President—JOHN H. GIBBON. And now we want to be appointed a Notary Public.

THE HOE PRESS.

WHILE the propriety and expediency of extending patents beyond the term for which they are originally granted may be disputed in the majority of instances, there are occasions when such extension is but a simple act of justice to men who have conferred inestimable benefits on their fellows.

There is a very marked discrepancy in the number of officers of the army and navy in proportion to the force which they command, as the following tabular statement will show:—

The ingenious statement of James Fisk, Jr., before the Congressional Committee with regard to the famous gold "corner" of September proves two or three things of interest to the public. In the first place, it is shown very conclusively out of the mouth of the said Fisk that he is by no means as brilliant a financier as he would have the world imagine; in the second place, it demonstrates the fact that President Grant had nothing at all to do with the affair; and thirdly, Fisk, Jr., with the naïvete of a young man just from the country, convicts himself of having been the plant tool in the hands of Corbin, the brother-in-law of the President, who made use of his supposed influence at the White House to blind the eyes of the innocent Fisk and the greater part of those proverbially sharp gentlemen known as the "bulls" and "bears" of Wall street.

There are 193 vessels in the navy, including receiving-ships, store-ships, tugs, sloops, and a large number of unfinished vessels that have never been launched, and there are 477 commanding officers. This gives 2 91-193 commanding officers for each vessel in the service. In the army of 50,000 men there are but 305 officers above and including the rank of major, while in the navy of 10,000 (one-fifth the size of the army) there are the large number of 477 officers above and including the rank of major. In the army a general officer represents 162 2-13 men, in the navy a general officer represents but 91 8-109 men.

A BILL was yesterday introduced in the State Senate to add two new judges to the Supreme Court of the State. It is well known that the Judges of the Supreme Court are overburdened with work, and with the utmost diligence they at times find it scarcely possible to get through with the accumulation of business.

Rev. James Bruyn Hardenbergh, D. D. The death of the Rev. James B. Hardenbergh, D. D., on Saturday morning, January 23, in New York city, is announced. Dr. Hardenbergh, at one time well known to Philadelphians, was born June 28, 1800, and studied at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., and at the Reformed Dutch Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N. J.

Mr. Samuel G. Turner, of Luzerne, yesterday made an attempt in the State Senate to have the franking privilege restored, but we are happy to state that, in a momentary fit of virtue, the Legislature refused to grant his desires. The Senate indeed did pass Mr. Turner's bill repealing the law of 1869, but at a later hour it resolved to recall it from the House.

THE OFFICERS OF THE ARMY AND NAVY. THERE is a very marked discrepancy in the number of officers of the army and navy in proportion to the force which they command, as the following tabular statement will show:—

Table with columns: Rank, Active, Retired, Total, Assn'd rank. Rows for Army and Navy, including Admiral, General, Major-General, etc.

The above tables are compiled from the navy and army registers for the year 1869, and show the relative number of commanding officers, with their rank, in the two branches of the public service.

Table with columns: Rank, Corresponding Army Rank, Ratio of Officers to Men. Rows for Navy and Army ranks.
