THE DAILY EVENING FELIGRAPH-PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1870

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Corvespondent, NEW YORK, Jan. 25, 1870.

Henry Placide. As long as I remember anything I remember the name of Henry Placide. He died on Sunday morning at 2 o'clock, at his residence in Babylon, Long Island, where he has lived in pleasant, not to say elegant, retirement for quite a number of years. He was perhaps better known than any other actor in the same line of characters, and there are plenty of those living who will remember how perfect was his characterization of "Peter" in the Loan of a Lover. One of his latest appearances in Philadelphia was that ten years ago, at the Academy of Music, when Mrs. D. P. Bowersproduced there the memorable Black Agate, a piece which was the occasion for an interesting theatrico-newspaper row between her and the critic of the Press. It is currently believed, indeed, that his retirement from the stage-subsequent to which he put in no appearance anywhere at all-was in 1853, seventeen vears ago. Mrs. Bowers, however, had the address to snap him up, and cause him to appear to advantage as "Sir Peter Teazle" to her "Lady Teazle." Mrs, Rufus R. Blake, wife of the late Mr. Blake, the eminent comedian, was his sister, and the late Miss Jane Placide, who died a few years ago at New Orleans, was another sister. Miss Placide was the contemporary of Hackett, Flynn, Jack Reeves, and the elder Booth, and was one of the last links that bind us to the ancien regime of excellent light comedy.

Morning Star Talmage. Certain spiritual spitfires in Brooklyn are "down" on the Rev. Mr. Talmage, recently of your city, for having used an expression that, for the last hundred nights, has been current among the minstrels at Bryant's Opera House, in Fourteenth street, adjoining Tammany. The expression was-

"I feel, I feel, I feel, I feel like a merning star !"

Those who are fond of finding fault with the ministry aver that this exclamation was made use of in the pulpit. This is false. It was used by Mr. Talmage at a children's Christmas party, and with just as much innocent inadvertency as though he had said "Merry Christmas," or some other of the thousand efflorescences that blossom to the llps at such a time. In fact, what is there wrong in saving that one feels like a "morning star?" In itself it is a beautiful, not to say sublime, expression. The public like it so well that for the last one hundred nights they have been thronging Bryant's for the purpose of hearing it sung by Dan" Bryant and Nelse Seymour. As for Mr. Talmage, he is one of those ministers who are none the less spiritual for being, in the better sense of the term, "on the make." He came to his Brooklyn charge, I presume, because he thought it would pay him better than remaining at his Philadelphia one, and few would blame him for so doing. Whether he takes as good care of his bodily health as he used to do in Philadelphia, I don't know. Then I used habitually to see him turning somersaults, or performing evolutious upon the horizontal bars, at Hillebrand & Lewis' Gymnasium. English Enting-houses.

One of the great questions among the moderate class of people in New York is where to get a good meal without indulging in hotel extravagance on the one hand, or without exposing oneself to the living sulcide of the boardinghouse on the other. To get a mutton-chop cooked eatably at a restaurant, unless you go to Delmonico's, or perhaps to Taylor's, is almost impossible, if you entrust your appetite to the run of New York restaurants in general. There is one solution to all this mystery of dissatisfac-

standard. That the piece did not make the most | favorable impression, however, was in a great measure due to the inefficiency of the performers, most of whom were in a blissful state of what they had to sing, say, and do. The production of The Little Duchess was delayed last week on account of insufficient rehearsals, and it would have been only justice to the public to have waited a few nights longer until the actors could find time to learn their parts. There are always some allowances to be made for the inequalities of the first night of a new piece, but the blunders of last evening were inexcusable, and it is scarcely worth while to attempt to criticize a performance when the prompter is the only person who appears to have any correct ideas about the dialogue. Planche's Follies of a Night 1s a very amusing little comedy, and there is no reason why, if set to appropriate music, it should not succeed as an opera, whether under the title of The Little Duchess or anything else that may be deemed suitable; but when the public are invited to witness a dress rehearsal, there ought to be an uno'clock. derstanding to that effect, and then there will be His are functional the function of the state of the second strength of the function of the second strength of the function of the function of the function of the strength of the strength street, on Wednesday afternoon at a object of the strength street. no disappointments.

The Road is 62 miles long, connecting Fredericksburg vis Orange Court House, with Charlottesville, which is the point of junction of the Chesspeake and Ohio Railroad to the Ohio river, and the extension of the Orange and Alexandria Bailroad to Lynchburg. It forms the shortest connecting link in the system of roads leading to the entire South, Southwest and West to the Pacific Ocean. It passes through a rich section of the Shenandoah Valley, the local traffic of which alone will support the Road, and it must command an abundant share of through trade from the fact of its being a
