MEW-TORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26, 1870. The Ball this Evening. The modern jubilee which culminates in a ball ought to be satirized by a modern Juvenal, to colminate in a Jenkins. We are going to have this evening a big ball, which is intended to throw into the background everything else of the kind that has taken place this season. It is the fifth grand ball, "pare and travesti," of the Cercle Francals de l'Harmonie. We shall not be so free as they were at the opera bouge affair," said the fascinating agent, Mr. Koppel, to me, "and we shall be so steef" (with an unimaginable shrug of the shoulders) "as they were at the Baxter Hop." How free is the Cercle Français de l'Harmonie going to be, I wonder? If it is possible for a woman to be at once very decorous and very decolletee? I have no doubt the Cercle de l'Harmonie's claim to plety will be considerable. One of the new things that will be introduced is the quadrille of "Koko-ri-ko," in which the poultry-lover will trace some identity with the moral song that "Duke Sifroy" sings in the early part of Genevieve de Brabant. This will be danced by the pupils of Professor Markowski, and a new Parisian extravaganza, entitled Cresopanpopivas, will be introduced. Whatever else will be bad or commonplace, the music will be good, for it will be furnished by Theodore Thomas' orchestra. Syraped Scraphs.

Mrs. Winslow-like Dr. Landis-after having had f a long run with impunity, is at length arraigned at the bar of public opinion and convicted of a species of assault and battery upon bables, by which they die "soothed" into their graves. One of those "communicationists" who are always finding out something to somebody else's disadvantage, has just discovered that an indefinite number of bables are every year "done to death" by the use of this anodyne. He finds that it contains morphine in large quantities, and that no high-minded nurse or right-minded mother would use it upon any account. Can this be true? Is there no balm in Gilead for infant colic? Is this panacea in which we have for so many years placed our trust but another sham, contributing to swell one's cynicism and disbelief in anything genuine? Hitherto it has been supposed that the man who would lay his hand upon Mrs. Winslow, or utter one word against his grandmother, would beat his grandmother or speak disrespectfully of his mother-in-law. Yet if all that is said against her be true, she has syruped more sweet seraphs off to heaven than all the other causes of infant mortality combined. And if she does deal a little in narcotics, I don't believe that she has had much to do with promoting softness of brain among the rising generation. If little Oliver had known what he was about, instead of asking for more he would have asked for more-phine ! As it was, he only missed it by a syllable. Mrs. Winslow's double 8 was the companion of my cradle infancy, and, as Mrs. Gamp says, I will not sit by without standing up when I hear an old friend "abuged." Mrs. Howard Paul.

You will be interested in learning how Mrs. Howard Paul conducted herself on Monday and Tuesday evenings as "La Grande Duchesse." I could hardly have believed that even all the art of stage make-up could have effected such a difference in her appearance. Naturally hers is rather a coarse beauty, inevitably so from the exceeding mobility of her features, which unables her to descend, whenever she wishes to, below the level of commonplace ladyhood, and to grasp the vulgar requirements of a vulgar individualization. So far as the personal appearance of the "Grande Duchesse" was concerned, she succeeded in transmuting herself into a very pretty onde. Her appearance, with up and head thrown back, was very warmly greeted, and the lapse of a few moments was sufficient to prove that she depended for none of her "points" upon those of any other deleneator of the character. Nay, it seemed as though she had even gone out of the way, perhaps, so as to give the public no excuse for attributing to her any of the well-known Tosteelan tricks. The "Ah! il est charmant!" for instance, was wholly abandoned, and the insinuating movements which Tostee so freely indulged in were entirely dispensed with. The impersonation was fuller of fun, and not so full of freedom, and the singing brought to observation all the beauties and eccentricities of Mrs. Paul's remarkable register. Her wig was blonde, falling in long curls behind, and if she was less airy than Tostee, she was stronger and more healthy. The original "General Boum" was very warmly received. The "Fritz" was remarkable for a pair of pants. They were the only portion of his role which can be said to have sat too well upon him. Supernatural Botany

At the corner of Broadway and Thirty-second street, Neil Bryant, brother of Dan, the same who has been in the Bryants' Den for several #seasons, keeps some billiard saloons, and above them are the headquarters of some of the New York spiritualists. One of the recent lights of the establishment imported thither from Lawrence, Mass., is a Mrs. Blair, who has only one arm, but makes up for this circumscribed sense of touch by being especially gifted with supernatural eyesight. She can see infinitely more with her eyes bandaged, padded, and packed than other people can with their optics open, and is besides a talented "sketchist" of flowers that bloom in angel land, for they were certainly never seen here. The soil where the originals bloom doubtless resembles the bank whereon the wild thyme grows, for these, like the medium who sketches them, have a decidedly "wild" appearance. However, in attempting the feat the other evening the lady failed to come up to "thyme." The paper flowers wouldn't come, and one of the audience present scandalized the proceedings by declaring that he saw the medium "cheat" by pushing up with her fingers the bandage that was supposed to conceal her eyes. The people left in disgust. Is not the day of seances over? Or will there always be a large residue of fools, people who are anxious to give away their money and get nothing in
