The Groat Paris Shooting Case-Full Details of the Affair-The Action of the Corps Legislatif.

The Interview-The Shooting of Victor Noir. The Liberte, of Paris, edited by M. Emile de Girardin, January 12, contains the following details of the shooting of M. Victor Noir by Prince Pierre Bonaparte: --

On learning the report of the affray one of the staff immediately set out for the office of the Marseillaise, and there found the following despatch:-

"AUTEUIL, S P. M. - Dreadful attack - My witness, Victor Noir, killed by a pistol shot by Pierre Bona-parte. He has just expired. PASCAL GROUSSET."

We immediately left for Autouil, passing by the Corps Legislatif. The session was over, but the hall was crowded. The report had been spread, but no one would believe it. nevertheless it was remarked that M. Rochefort precipitately left the Palais Bourbon and entered a carriage in company with M. Gustave Flourens. Prince Pierre Bonaparte lives in No. 59 Rue Auteuil. A crowd had assembled before the house, and a guard of some ten gendarmes were stationed before it. M. Noir had strength enough to descend the stairs, and was carried to a pharmacy, where he immediately expired. The ball had penetrated the heart.

While MM. Victor Noir and Ulric de Fouvielle waited upon the Prince, MM. Paul Grousset and George Santon awaited the issue of the interview below in the street. On leaving the house M. Noir fell a few steps from where his friends were standing, and crept a few yards on his knees.

Immediately afterwards, M. de Fouvielle rushed out, calling "Murder!" Seeing that the police, who had no orders to arrest the Prince, were satisfied with keeping him in sight, we returned to Paris, where the further particulars were gathered from M. de Fouvielle in person.

His statement runs as follows:

January 10, at one o'clock, M. Victor Noir and himself went to Prince Pierre Bonaparte's house, in order to demand satisfaction respecting certain articles published by him against M. Pascal Grousset in the Avenir de la Corse. Our cards were handed to two servants who were at the door. We were then ushered into a small parlor, and ultimately into a drawing room. M. Pierre Bonaparte entered, when the following words were exchanged:

"Sir, we call on the part of M. Paschal Grousset, in order to remit you a letter." 'So you do not come from M. Rochefort.

and you are none of his tools ?" 'Sir, we call on other business, and I beg to call your attention to this letter." The letter was then handed to the Prince, who retired to a window in order to peruse

After reading it he crumpled it in his hand and returned towards his visitors. "I provoked M. Rochefort," he said, "because he is the standard bearer of the rabble. As to M. Grousset, I have nothing to reply to him. Are you the representative of that carrion (charogne)?"

"Sir," replied M. de Fouvielle, "we come loyally and courteously to fulfil the mission entrusted to us by our friend."

"Are you the bondsmen of that miserable?" Victor Noir then replied, "We are the bondsmen of our friends.

Then advancing suddenly and without fur-ther provocation, Prince Bonaparte slapped M. Noir in the face, and at the same time

The Emperer learned the news on arriving at the rallway station on his return from Ram-bouillet. M. Pietri, the Prefect of Police, informed his Majesty, who became quite pale and directed his informant to have the matter immediately brought before the judicial authorities. M. Emile Ollivier, on leaving the Legislative Body, examined all the papers relating to the incident, and gave orders to have the Prince arrested. He then proceeded to the palace, and after stating to his Majesty the gravity of the situation in which Prince Pierre was placed, announced that he had directed the immediate commencement of the judicial examination. "I approve," said the Emperor, "of all that you have done. No member of my family is above the law, and justice must pursue its course with the greatest possible publicity.

THE COURT OF TRIAL.

The following particulars concerning the High Court of Justice will be found interest-

Instituted by the two constitutions of 1848 and 1852, this jurisdiction was organized by a senatus consultum of the 10th July, 1852, which, by maintaining the attributions established by article fifty-four of the constitution of that year, regulated the composition of the court and the mode of proceeding to be followed. The same rules are at present in vigor, and the principal of them are as follows .- The High Court judges without ap peal all persons sent before it charged with crimes, outrages, or plots against the Emperor and against the safety of the State at home or abroad. It can only be summoned by a decree of the Emperor. It is composed-first, of a Chamber of Accusations and of a Judgment Chamber, formed of judges taken from those of the Court of Cassation; second, of a High Jury, taken from among the members of the Councils General in the departments. Each Chamber is composed of five judges and two substitutes, all of whom are appointed every year by the Emperor during the first fortnight of November. The imperial decree assembling the High Court designates, among the judges of each Chamber, the one who is to preside.

The Procureur-General to the High Court and the public prosecutor are reappointed for each affair by the same decree. In case of the High Court being convoked the president of each Ckamber names a clerk, who takes an oath. The jury chosen by lot from among the members of the Councils Geneconsists of thirty-six members rals and four additional. When an affair has been submitted to the High Court by a decree of the Emperor, the Chamber of Accusation at once commences its functions and conducts the investigation, or charges some judge or officer of the judicial police with the inquiry. Its jurisdiction extends over the whole territory of the Empire, and its procedure is governed by the Code d'Instruction Criminelle. No Councillor-General of less than two years' standing can form part of the jury, any member of which absent without valid cause may be condemned to a fine of from 1000 to 10,000f., and deprivation of his political rights for a period of from one to five years. The accused and the public prosecutor may challenge members of the jury. A verdict of guilty or the admission of extenuating circumstances must be given by a majority, comprising more than twenty votes. The punishment is pronounced in conformity with the provisions of the penal code. Such is the legislation of the High Court of Justice.

The Case Before the Legislature-MM. Roch fort, Ollivier, and Rospail on the Urisis. The Legislative Body sat January 11, M.

THE NEWS COMMUNICATED TO THE EMPERON-HIS | As soon as the Minister of Justice was informed yesterday of the painful event in question, he ordered the arrest of Prince Pierre Bonaparte. The instructions were about to be executed when the Prince gave himself up as prisoner at the Conciergerie That first measure having been adopted, there remained to consider what jurisdic tion would be competent to judge the affair. Prince Pierre Bonaparte, through the Procureur Imperial, asked to be tried by an ordinary jury. I replied that the Minister of Justice was bound by the formal text of a Senatus Consultum, and that his duty was to apply the law, although he might subsequently consider whether the legislation did not require to be modified. (Hear.) I have in consequence submitted to the Emperor, for his signature, a decree convoking the High Court of Justice. We will afterwards examine whether that exceptional jurisdiction should be abrogated, and we shall perhaps be of your opinion. But, sir, I will not tolerate that you should accuse any judge of being wanting in dignity and independence. M. Rochefort-I refer to my own condemnations.

M. Emile Ollivier-You have only to refer to some of your colleagues who exercise their profession before the tribunals, and they will tell you that the French bench is deficient in neither of those qualities. (Hear.).

M. Raspail-It has no independence what ver. (Do not interrupt.) M. Emile Ollivier-Moreover, the jurisdicever.

tion before which we send Prince Pierre Bonaparte is not of recent creation; it is composed not only of judges, but also of a jury chosen by lot among the councillors-general of all the departments. You appeal at every moment to public opinion; therefore, why do you complain that the whole country, and not the city of Faris alone, should be the judge of Prince Pierec Bonaparte ? (Applause.) After this explanation, I have only to add that the Government has fulfilled its duty-(Yes, yes)-with firmness, promptitude, and decision. (Hear, hear.) It will continue in the same course. Let us not exaggerate the gravity of the situation. A murder has been committed by a high personage; we prosecute him, and thus prove that, faithful to democratic principles, we subject both great and small to the justice of the country. Loud applause.)

MM. Rochefort and Raspail-That is what we demand.

M. Emile Ollivier-As for the provocations by which an attempt is made to excite popular passions, by speaking of a "man of the people killed" and by descriptions of a nature to excite the imagination, we look on them calmly and without fear. We are the law, right, moderation, and liberty; and, if you compel us, we will use force also. ("Hear, hear;" prolonged bravos and applause.)

M. Raspail-You are applauding a melancholy act.

The President-The Chamber has commended language which deserves to be supported.

M. Raspail-The murder has caused more sensation than that of Traupmann. (Interruption.) And the authority to which you defer it is not justice.

The President-You must confine yourself to the question.

M. Raspail-The tribunal before which the murderer of Victor Noir will be tried will be composed of judges named by yourselves. We know what those high courts of justice are. We have seen them at work. They are devoted to the men by whom they are appointed. (Noise.) Have we not daily examples?

The President-I cannot permit doubts to be cast on the independence and sincerity of the judicial authority. (Hear, hear.)

M. Raspail-We require a jury not com-drew a ten-barrelled revolver, which he had hidden in his pocket, and fired point blank at M. Noir. Noir sprung up, pressed his two hands to his breast, and rushed to the door where he had entered. Then the Prince made towards M. de Fouvielle and fired another shot. M. de Fouvielle then drew a pistol from his pocket, but he could not get it out of the case. The Prince advanced, but when he saw the pistol he drew back, and, placing himself in the doorway, took deliberate aim. Then M. de Fouvielle opened a door that he felt behind him and fled, crying "Murder!" While running a second shot was fired at him, which went through his coat.

THE PRINCE'S ACCOUNT.

The version of the Prince differs from the above merely in the fact that his arm was raised in a menacing manner after being provoked by the language used by M. Victor Noir, who also slapped him first in the face. As he always carried a small revolver in his pocket, he instinctively drew it out and fired.

The Prince's hasty temper was well known, and on the morning previous to the visit made to his house, M. Noir's brother had warned the latter of the consequences that might befall him. He did not dream of such extreme measures being taken, but he thought that the Prince might have ordered his servants to turn them out.

THE SCENE OF THE ATTACK.

The following is a description of the room where the fatal occurrence took place:-

About twenty steps are ascended and the visitor finds himself in the fencing gallery, a sort of ante-chamber to the saloon. This apartment, the walls of which are bare, has only one point worthy of note-namely, the chimney piece at the end, where there is a rather curious collection of swords, daggers, and firearms. There are specimens of them from every country, from the matchlock of the Chinese to the espingole of Castille; from the primitive arquebuse of the Huguenots to the American rifle. There are also the most recent models, and lastly, the ordinary fowling piece. The Prince is a great amateur of weapons, and a new one is rarely produced without his receiving a visit from the inventor. Thus it is almost impossible for a visitor to sit down and lean against a piece of furnithre without displacing an arm of some sort.

THE PRINCE IN PRISON.

Prince Pierre Bonaparte, now detained at the Conciergerie, has the faculty, so far at least, of receiving his family and friends, and owing to the kindness of the director the visitors find no difficulty at all in obtaining access to the prisoner.

The Princess Pierre Bonaparte, with her two children, visited her husband yesterday at the Conciergerie.

THE MAJESTERIAL EXAMINATION.

M. Bornier is the examining magistrate charged to preside at the first inquiries.

He has already interrogated, as witness, M. Ulric de Fouvielle. The hearing commenced towards 11 in the evening, and only terminated at 2 in the morning.

M. Ulric de Fouvielle has not been arrested, as one of this morning's journals has affirmed.

Prince Pierre Bonaparte is detained in one of the turrets looking on the Quai de l'Hor-Yesterday morning Doctors Tardieu loge. and Bergeron extracted from the body of Victor Noir the ball which caused his death; it is a projectile of a cylindro-conical form and of small size.

interpellate the Government on the necessity of subjecting the members of the Bonaparte family to the ordinary courts of law.

M. Rochefort-I wish to put a question to the Minister of Justice. The President-You have permission to speak M. Rochefort-A murder was committed yesterday on a young man engaged on a sacred mission, that of a second sent to make a communication. The criminal is a member of the imperial family. I ask the Minister if he intends to oppose to the judgment and probable condemnation of that person the same denial of justice that was made to those citizens who were beaten with sticks by certain high dignitaries of the empire. The situation is grave, and the agitation immense. (Interruptions.) The murdered man is a child of the people. (Noise.) The President-It was decided yesterday that questions should be put summarily and without development. Yours has been stated in precise terms. The Minister has now to consider whether he will reply to-day. (Hear, hear.)

M. Rochefort-I say that the victim is a child of the people. The population claims to judge the murderer themselves. They demand that the ordinary jury-(interruption and noise)-

The President-We are all children of the people. All are equal before the law, and you have no right to make distinctions. (Hear, hear.)

M. Rochefort-Then why appoint judges devoted to the imperial family? The President—You place judges under suspicion without knowing who they are. I now invite you to confine yourself to the question or I cannot allow you to continue. M. Rochefort-I ask myself, after an occurrence like that of yesterday, and in presence of the facts which have been taking place for some time past, whether we are living under Bonapartes or Borgias. (Exclamations, cries of "Order! order!") I call on all citizens to arm and administer justice for themselves. (Renewed agitation.)

The President-M. Rochefort, I call you to order. (Hear, hear.) It is not permitted to take advantage of the immunity which covers members of this Chamber to use such language. (Fresh applause.) M. Rochefort—Yesterday at six in the evening that man had not been arrested. (The rest of the phrase was lost in the noise.) The President-I invite the Chamber to calm and silence. The question is most rerious, and remarks must not be allowed to be uttered without being heard by the President.

(Assent.) M. Emile Ollivier, Minister of justice-

Gentlemen, we are justice and law. I ask you also to be calm and moderate. M. Raspail-But murder has been committed. M. Emile Ollivier-Allow me to explain.

You will reply to me afterwards, if you please. You interpellate the Government with outrages. We shall reply to you without insults.

M. Emile Ollivier-If M. Rochefort were better acquainted with the rules of justice, of which he puts himself forward as the sole representative, he would know that when a citizen is awaiting trial under accusation no one has a right to anticipate the verdict of the judges and condemn him! (Hear, hear.)

- 9.8v

posed of enemies of the people. (Exclamations.) I repeat, we know what is meant by high courts of justice. In one of them was once found a man who had been condemned to the galleys.

The President-I have just received the following letter from the Procureur-General:-

"PARIS, January 11, 1870.—I have the honor to ask the legislative body for authorization to prosecute M. Rochefort, one of its members, for an offense against the Emperor and for incitement to revolt and civil war, in virtue of articles eighty-six of the Penal Code and two of the law of May 17, 1819. The intraction consists of an article and higher in the Penal Code and two of the law of May 17, 1819. The infraction consists of an article published in the Marseillaise, entitled 'Murder and Attempted Mur-der, Committed by Prince Pierre Bonaparte.' Jus-tice, Monsieur le President, cannot, by allowing contempt of the law to pass unrepressed, favor by its silence outrage, offense, and provocation to crime. I have the less hesitation to solicit from the contempt of the present authorization to prove legislative body the present authorization to prose-cute, that in reality the offense is less one of the press than a violation of the common law, punished by the legislatives of all free pressless. by the legislatures of all free peoples. "GRANDPERRET."

By the terms of the regulations this demand must be submitted to the bureaux. I ask the Chamber when they will be convoked to examine the application. Shall it be tomorrow ?

Numerous voices-Yes, yes. M. Creuzet-I propose that the President should have a copy of the paper incriminated deposited in each bureau.

The President-The request shall be ac ceded to.

M. Guyot-Montpayroux-I ask that it shall be accompanied by one of the journals to which the Marseillaise in the first place replied.
