CITY INTELLIGENCE.

A HEAVY SWINDLE ON SOMEBODY .- Some time ago a gift or lottery concern was advertised under the name of the "Riverside Enterprise." Some of those who were at that time indi Some of those who were at that time induced to invest their money have lately received from New York a circular, by which they were informed that, at the grawing in 1868, their ticket drew a very handsome and valuable Geneva watch and chain, both of solid gold and together valued at $2000. It was stated that this watch and chain would be forwarded to address, as soon as thirteen dollars were received from the drawer, ten dollars as a percentage, and three drawer, ten dellars as a percentage, and three dellars for taxes. One of the parties thus notified forwarded the money, and in return re-ceived a watch the market value of which is about $36 per dozen. He thus paid thirteen dollars for what could have been bought at first hand for three dollars. The firm sending the circular calls itself "G. W. Wakefield & Co., importers and wholesale dealers in diamonds and fine gold watches, factory, Geneva, Switzerland."
On sending an inquiry to New York as to the standing of the firm, an answer was received saying that no such firm was known in the city, which, of course, was to be expected. Those who play with fire must expect to be burned.

BURGLARY ON NINTH STREET.-About 8 o'clock last evening the wife of Gottlieb Buch-man, residing at No. 323 South Ninth street, on going up stairs to put one of her children to bed, found the door of her chamber locked. She immediately rushed down stairs and notified her husband, who called in Chief Kelley and Detective Lukens, both of whom happened to be in the neighborhood. A reconnoissance developed the fact that a party had entered the room through the second-story window by climbing up the awning-posts. Mr. Buchman was placed outside to cut off his retreat, and the other two gentlemen proceeded up stairs and broke open the door, but the thief had fied. On reaching the ground floor they were met by Buchman, who, in his eagerness to see what was going on, had deserted his post, and thus allowed the rascal to escape, taking with him $83 in cash.

DEATH OF A WELL-KNOWN POET,-Mr. David Bates, a well-known Philadelphia merchant and poet, died in this city on Tuesday morning in the sixty-first year of his age. The deceased was a native of Ohio, and came to this city many years ago, where he started in business as a broker. He was well known in literary circles. He was the author of many well-known poems, some of which are now standard litera-ture. He was a contributor to Sarlam's Magazine, Godey's Lady's Book, Van Court's Magazine, and other prominent periodicals of the day. He was a member of the Board of Brokers, in which association he was known by the familiar name of "Old Mortality." A wife and family are left to mourn his loss.

A WATCH CASE. - Israel Worthington is a retail dealer in oysters. Yesterday Israel called at the residence No. 2407 North Second street, and endeavored to dispose of some bivalves. Whilst the servant was making the necessary arrangements for the purchase, Israel's covetous eves lighted on a watch that was hanging on the wall, and his hands followed suit. Israel and time both then fled. A policeman being notified of the transaction, Israel was pursued, captured, and taken before Alderman Heins, who held him in $600 bail to answer.

ACCIDENT TO THE NEW WHEEL AT FAIRof the new turbine wheel at Fairmount severa days ago, the hoisting derrick fell down, breaking into pieces the spur-wheel of the new turbine, which will postpone the completion of the wheel at least two months. It seems strange, indeed, that a frail appa ratus should be employed to lift heavy and costly pieces of machinery.

SEIZURE OF A BREWBRY .- Yesterday Assistant Collector William J. Mackey seized the brewer of Charles Presser, at the corner of Thirty-fifth and Aspen streets, for the alleged reason that beer was being removed from the brewery in casks which were not stamped. There were in the brewery at the time of the seizure, besides the usual fixtures, thirty-three barrels of beer in casks and seventy barrels in fermenting tubs.

POCKET PICKED .- About 9 o'clock last night Mrs. Lydia Myers applied at the Ninth District Station House for shelter through the night. She stated that she had come from Lancaster with a friend named Charles Berger, having in her pocket a wallet containing $41. On reaching the city her money and friend both disappeared, and she was left penniless in a strange place.

THE HEBREW CHARITY BALL comes off to night, and none should fall to be present. Invi-tations have been extended to General Grant and all the members of his Cabinet, and it is expected that a majority of them will be present. The arrangements, under the direction of Mr. Aaron E. Greenewald, have all been perfected and nothing has been left undone that can pos sibly add to the complete success of the affair.

THE JUNGER MÆNNERCHOR BAL MASQUE comes off to-morrow evening, will be decidedly humorous affair, as it is the intention of those having the matter in charge to outdo any previous attempt of the kind. #### THE PRINCE.

His Movements Vesterday Mrs. Grant's Reception-The Dinner at the British Legation. The party of the Prince, with Mrs. Thernton, visited the White House yesterday afternoon, to attend the reception of Mrs. Grant. No notice of the Prince's intended visit having been given, there were but few persons present, the crush not beginning until seme half hour later. Mrs. Thornton presented the Prince and his suite to Mrs. Grant, who in turn introduced the ladies who assisted her in receiving. The President, being engaged with the Cabinet, did not make his appearance until some time afterwards. Mrs. Grant was aided in the reception by Mrs. and Miss Boutwell, Mrs. Dick, Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. General Logan, Mrs. General Carl Schurz, Miss Schurz, and Miss McDowell.

The Prince and Mrs. Thornton, on the invitation of Mrs. Grant, took places by the side of that lady; the most distinguished guests and personal friends of Mrs. Grant being presented to the Prince, whose pleasant manners and casy self-possession produced an instant and highly favorable impression. Both houses of Congress being still in session, there were but few Scnators and members present, though the influx of citizens and strangers, at 3:30, was greater than at any previous drawing-room reception this winter at the White House. General McDowell, Secretary Boutwell, ex-Senator Doolittle and daughter, and Mrs. General Fremont, were noticeable among the guests.

From the White House the whole party drove down the avenue to Brady's photograph gallery, where they sat for their portraits. The Prince first sat for his picture alone, and afterwards as the central figure in a group, of which the other members were Lieutenant-Colonel Elphinstone, Lieutenant Pickard, Ensign Fitzroy, and H. S. Le Strange, Esq. Both photographs were very successful; so that it will not be many days ere Prince Arthur's physiognomy will be as familiar in the shop windows of Washington, New York, and all the cities of the United States as those of President Grant and other American celebrities.

Thence the Prince and party were driven home, the third of the series of state dinners given at the Thornton mansion being on the card for 7 o'clock this evening. Eighteen covers were laid, and the guest took seats in the follow-ing order:—Mrs. Thornton at one end of the table, having on her right his Royal Highness and on her left Speaker Blaine, Senator Morton, Mr. Blacque Bey, Turkish Minister, Colonel Elphinstone, Lieutenant Pickard, Senator Conkling, Baron Gerolt, the Prussian Minister, and Senator Cameron. Mr. Thoraton occupied the other end of the table vis a vis to Mrs. Thoraton, having on his left Senator Sherman, Admiral Dahlgren, Baron Lederer, Mr. French, Ensign Fitzroy, M. de Catacazy, the Russian Minister, and Senator Hamlin.

It has been wrongly supposed that the dinners given yesterday and to-day were given merely with a view of bringing Prince Arthur into close social relations with our leading public men, merely as such. While this may, perhaps, have entered as an element into the case, it is well known that these gentlemen have more than a casual acquaintance with the British Minister, and were selected as much for that reason as for any other. The dinner was a brilliant affair, and lasted until nearly 9:30 o'clock. As on the previous evening, the dining-hall and table were beautifully ornamented. The house itself, with its commodious and well arranged apartments, en suite, has been, during the entire stay of the Prince, regulated with a special regard to the social enjoyment of guests, Prince Arthur, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Crampton and members of the British legation and of the Prince's suite, attended the reception of General and Mrs. Sherman at 19:30 o'clock. The parlors were densely crowded with ladies and gentlemen, including members of the Cabinet, Vice-Admiral Porter, Speaker Blaine, Rear-Admiral Smith, various Senators and Representatives, and many prominent in the civil, military, and naval service. After the foreign visitors had paid their respects to General and Mrs. Sherman, the General conducted them to another parlor, where Miss Sherman received guests, a number of whom were presented to the Prince. The Prince was afterwards escorted to the side-parlor, where he spent a few minutes in conversation with those who were presented General Sherman here gave the Prince choice of two splendid rifles, and he selected a Winchester repeating arm, mounted with gold, on which were engravings of Eve, the Genius of Liberty, and General Grant on horseback, be-sides being elaborately chased. The rifle will be sent to the Prince to-morrow. The Prince and his company remained about three-quarters of an hour. The street in front of the General's residence was blockaded by carriages and the house was crammed. The reception was bril-liant but uncomfortable, and after remaining about twenty minutes, the Prince and party bade adieu to their host and hostess, and the scene .-

The Ceremonies at Portland-Arrival of the Funeral Fleet-History and Incidents of the Voyage.

FROM NEW ENGLAND.

The Peabody Ceremonials.

Portland, Me., Jan. 26.—On the arrival of the Peabody feet last night, Captain William H. McComb, of Plymouth, came immediately on shore and proceeded to the Falmouth House, where an interview was held with Admiral Farragut and the committee of the town of Peabody and representatives of the State of Maine and city of Portland. In giving an account of the voyage from England to America, which he described as a very pleasant one, Captain McComb made the following statement:—

After leaving Spithead the two vessels sailed in company until the town of Ashout, France, had seen passed, when a gale of wind and rain struck them, during which they lost sight of each other. The Plymouth, after endeavoring unsuccessfully to find the Monarch by making traverse courses, sailed directly to the place of rendezvous previously agreed upon, the Island of Madeira. In going to Madeira the Plymouth made very fast time, sailing about nineteen knota an hour, and anchored in the harbor of Funchal two or three days before the Monarch arrived.

While lying there a strong southwest wind arose.

While lying there a strong southwest wind arose, and the vessel being in danger of being driven on shore, it was found necessary to ship the cable, and standing to the eastward, run into a safe position. The naval ceremonies took place at 9 o'clock this morning, but it has been decided that the remains will not be conveyed to the City Hall until Thursday.

PONTLAND, Jan. 26—9 A. M.—The monitors have steamed down to the funeral fleet, and the Peabody and Portland committees are just going down in the revenue steamer Mahoning to the Monarch, the storm having subsided. The morning is bright and warm, the buildings and trees are encased in a glittering coat of ice, and the streets are running with melted show, but will probably be in better condi-tion on Thursday, when the reception procession Corbin has Chronic Disease.

Desputch to the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Several days ago the Committee on Banking and Currency received a letter from A. B. Corbin, giving excuses why he neglested their summons. Another letter was read at the meeting to-day, in which Corbin repeats that a chronic disease prevents him from being present, but not giving any promise of his future action in but not giving any promise of his future that respect.

The chairman of the committee (Mr. Garfield) read the letter in an assumed solemn manner, causing much diversion by his preacher-like tones and emphasis.

Mr. Cox suggested that, in view of Corbin's reported physical infirmities, the chairman should send Corbin a bottle of Mungen's soothing syrup, in order to enable him to reach Washington and appear before the committee.

It is probable the committee will send an attachment after Corbin.

CONGRESS.

Seunte.

Continued from the Third Edit Mr. Ramsey said this legislation was intended to afford the occupants of the Reservation a means of establishing their titles to the land owned by them.

Mr. Nye said the lands were part of the publie domain, never having been set apart, and therefore no distinction should be made in the disposal of those lands of which the purchasers of public lands were deprived. The bill gave rise to a discussion which continued until after the expiration of the morning hour, when the bill was recommitted to the Committee on Public Lands. The consideration of the currency bill was then resumed. Mr. Corbett referred to the present financial status of the Government, and said the country was gradually returning to a sound basis. The gold now accumulating in the banks could be held in the place of the three per cent. certificates, which the bill very properly proposed to pay off. He would support the proposition to extend the banking facilities to the South and West, believing it to be demanded by the immelate necessities of those sections. favored the provision for the establishment of banks on a gold basis, and thought these would eventually supersede the present national banks.

Mr. Sumner opposed the bill, asserting that a redistribution of the existing currency could not be made without serious consequences to the business of the country, and would not materially aid in financial reconstruction. He was disposed to assume the cause of the banks of New York, Philadelphia, and Boston in this matter, because in 1861, at a time when the national securities had received a terrible shock. they furnished the means by which our forces were organized against the Rebellion, $500, 000,000 in gold being furnished by them. Thi bill presented simply the questions of enlarging the national bank currency and creating a sys-tem of free banking founded on coin notes. These, he claims, were inadequate for the purposes to be accomplished.

With the great burden of the public debt, with the currency deranged, with industry paralyzed in every department, he called upon the House to pause and see whether some change of policy might not result in the reduction of the large expenditure contemplated by the bill. That was his opposition to the bill. There was no use of this preparatory bill. Four words in an appropriation bill when the time came would be enough, and he predicted that those words would be added in the Senate to the Navy Appropriation bill.

to the Navy Appropriation bill.

Under these circumstances, and with the eye of the country upon them, holding them to their piedge. that they would expend no money unnecessarily in the administration of the Government, he called upon them to wait until the question was settled whether in future the work of the navy was to be done in private yards, before they would launch out on this expenditure.

Mr. Randall remarked that the gentleman from Massachusetts would find no more faithful allies on the Republican side of the House than he could in a solid phalanx of Democrats. It was nothing new for them to vote in favor or to advocate economy. They had stood here for years resisting corruptions and frauds on the Treasury, and would be quite at home in continuing in that direction, and continuing to have the confidence of the country in that respec (Quiet, incredulous laughter on the Republican side.)
Finally the previous question was seconded, and Mr. Scofield, having charge of the bill, had an hour to close the debate.

Mr. Starkweather desired an opportunity to submit reasons why the bill should be recommitted, but declined to accept any allowance of time which, Mr. Scoffeld offered to accord.

Scofield offered to accord.

Mr. Woodward, having five minutes allowed him, endorsed the views of the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations as to the propriety of deferring the proposed renoval. As to the argument that the removal of the Philadelphia Navy Yard was necessary to make room for the commerce of that port, he remarked that he had read in the papers the other day that the commerce of Philadelphia had dwindled down to $50,000, and he thought that there was coast surface enough. he thought that there was coast surface enough along the Delaware to accommodate the present commerce of Philadelphia and all the commerce that Philadelphia was likely to acquire in the future.

Mr. Schofield closed the deliate in an argument in support of the bill, and then Mr. Dawes inoved to lay the bill on the table, and called for the year and

Paris, Jan. 26.—The new cable which has been successfully laid between Salcombe, England, and Brignognan, France, is of the most solid description of deep-sea cable, weighing eight and a half tons to a mile, and the shore ends fourteen tons. Double land wires will shortly be completed to connect the cable with the land system of telegraphs in both countries. By this means messages will be transmitted directly from Brest to London without passing through Paris as at present.
