THE FUTURE OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

From the N. Y. Times. Mr. Dawes' reply to General Butler, not to speak of Mr. Farnsworth's, as well as the frequency with which the Republican party in both House and Senate has of late split its vote on several important questions, ought, we think, to suggest to the more ardent members of the party, and everybody who believes, as we do, in its usefulness, the propriety of abstaining from attempts "to read people out" of it.

Now, it is quite true that the special cause which called the party into existence will have ceased to operate as soon as that amendment is passed, but then the general reasons for its existence will be nearly as strong as ever. The work of the Republican party will never be over until the Democrats have frankly announced their acceptance of the legislation of the last ten years.

There can, of course, be no doubt that it is this which keeps, and is likely to keep, the Republican party in existence. The mass of those who have served long in its ranks for the purpose of achieving certain results, will not leave it as long as these results are unachieved, and as long as the opposition offers nothing new, or original, or constructive, in some way or other, of the system of society and government established by the reconstruction process at the South, and the restoration to the whites of their old supremacy, and with it, of course, the means of working their own sweet will with regard to the blacks.

THE NEGRO SENATOR FROM MISSISSIPPI. From the N. Y. World. Some of the Republican journals in the West are discussing the question whether Hiram R. Revels, the colored Senator elect from Mississippi, is entitled to a seat in the Senate, in view of the declaration of the Constitution that no person shall be a Senator who shall not have been nine years a citizen of the United States.

THE COLONIAL CRISIS.

From the London Saturday Review. If there is something to regret, there is such that is satisfactory, in the discussions that have recently taken place on colonial affairs. The official mind has shown itself, as usual, incapable of grasping a large idea, and the sensible and able advocates of the colonies have not been altogether judicious in the conduct of their campaign; but, on the other hand, there has manifested itself a deep and pervading resolution not to let the colonies be driven from us by the apathy of statesmen and the perverse unpatriotism of Americanized politicians.

English race so largely depend. The whole tendency of the creed in fashion with Liberal politicians is to produce clever small men; and we say this not the less though the party is led by a statesman whom not even his enemies would call small, and who, when he gives his mind to the colonial question, may be trusted to deal with it generously and nobly. But Mr. Gladstone is there as is what his strength is by the rank and file of the party, and more in spite of than by the favor of the class of prominent Liberal politicians, of whom a large section of his Cabinet is formed.

The very terms in which Lord Granville repudiates the charge of seeking the dismemberment of the Empire, show how incapable he has made himself of even seeing what it is that renders his policy and his language so mischievous. He tells the colonies that he really does not wish to sever their relations with what they will persist in calling the Home country, but blandly assures them in the same breath that, if they should happen to be discontented at any time with English policy, it will always be open for them to terminate the connection without fear of any compulsory interference on our part.

THE PRINCE-A NICE YOUNG MAN. From the N. Y. Sun. Nobody could behave any better than Prince Arthur behaves. He is a nice, modest, unassuming, quiet young gentleman. That he was born a prince is something for which he can justly be congratulated. It may be a misfortune, but certainly it is not his fault. He was born at too early an age to be held responsible for the circumstances.

Some of the Republican journals in the West are discussing the question whether Hiram R. Revels, the colored Senator elect from Mississippi, is entitled to a seat in the Senate, in view of the declaration of the Constitution that no person shall be a Senator who shall not have been nine years a citizen of the United States. The Supreme Court decided, some twelve or thirteen years ago, that negroes were not citizens within the meaning of the Constitution. The fourteenth amendment was proposed by the radicals for the purpose of removing the bar to negro citizenship. It declares in its first section that "all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens of the United States."

force. They are not likely to change their opinion of that decision now. In the next place, they formally disregarded it in the civil rights bill, which they passed before the fourteenth amendment was ratified; a bill which declares the negroes citizens, although Congress had no authority to pass such an act if the Dred Scott decision was correct, and persons of African descent are excluded from citizenship by the Constitution. The ground which the Senate will take in Revels' case will be, that when the fourteenth amendment says that "all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens," it means that persons naturalized in the United States are citizens from the date of their naturalization; and persons born in the United States, citizens from the date of their birth.

This doctrine is hardly worth contesting, inasmuch as the question has no permanent interest if it be admitted that the fourteenth amendment has been duly ratified. If the ratification is null, the negroes will lose all the privileges of citizenship, including eligibility to Congress among the rest; but if the fourteenth amendment is to stand, the seven or nine years is not worth disputing about, considering that the Republicans will not declare any election to Congress void by reason of negro birth, so long as they remain in power. By the Constitution, each house is made the sole judge of the election and qualification of its members, and if the Senate admits the Mississippi negro, there is no constitutional process by which he can be ousted.
