George Millin Wharton, Esq. George Mifflin Wharton, Esq., one of the leading lawyers, and formerly one of the active and prominent politicians of Philadelphia, died on the 5th inst., after a protracted illness, at his residence in South Fourth street, a short distance below Walnut. He was born in 1806, and devoting himself to the legal profession after he reached manhood, he acquired a prominent position as a lawyer, giving great attention to the preparation of his cases, and arguing them with remarkable skill. He also took an active part in politics, and was, for a long period, an influential and prominent member of the Whig party of the old city of Philadelphia. He took a deep interest in the public schools, and was at one time President of the Board of Control, Subsequently, in 1855, he was elected a member of the Select Council from the Fifth ward, and he was made President of that body. When the old Whig organization became broken up by the American and Republican movements, he at ouce openly and decidedly attached himself to the Democratic party. He took this step at or about the same time that a similar course was adopted by Josiah Randall and William B. Reed, and this trio constituted the most important representative accessions made to the Democratic ranks in Philadelphia at that period. There was a strong disposition in 1856 to make George M. Wharton the Democratic candidate for Congress in the district composed mainly of the old city, and Mr. Buchanan himself favored this movement, but the controllers of the machinery of the local organization were not then prepared to confer honors upon one who had so recently been their active enemy, and no serious effort was made in the Congressional Convention to nominate Mr. Wharton. He became, however, at oace a warm personal and social as well as a political friend of Mr. Buchanan, and at a comparatively late period of the Presidential term of the latter, this feeling induced Mr. Wharton's appointment as United States District Attorney in this city, a position for which he was well qualified by his skill as a lawyer. In the natural order of events, he was removed by Lincoln, and, although he was not especially influential subsequently as a politician, he did what he could to antagonize Lincoln's adistration by efforts to demonstrate that the suspension of the habeas corpus was illegal, the Legal-tender act unconstitutional, etc. Mr. Wharton's moral character was above reproach, and he was an active member of the Episcopal Church, being frequently chosen in former years as a lay delegate in its conventions. He took a prominent part in the deliberations of these bodies, but when questions arose that were conterized his partisan school. Mr. Wharton's espousal of Democratic prin ciples, and his course during the war, led to the severance of many of his earlier associations, and he failed to win a very enviable or powerful position among his new associates. At all times, however, his talents, his energy, and his unblemished private character commanded the respect of all parties.

nected even in a remote degree with the political agitations of the time, he was especially earnest

in his expression of the views which charac-

Colonel A. H. Tippen.

At an early hour yesterday morning Colonel A. H. Tippen died at his late residence in this city. The deceased was well known in this city by his honorable career as a soldier. His first appearance in the field was during the Mexican war, in which he served as a Lieutenant of the 1st regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, commanded by Colonel F. M. Wynkoop. At the close of this war he participated in the organization of the Scott Legion, a military organization made up of those residing in this city who saw service in Mexico, and for many years one of our most prominent militia regiments. On the outbreak of the Rebellion the ranks of the Scott Legion were filled up for active service, in effecting which he labored efficiently, and the regiment went into the service as the 68th Pennsylvania, with the deceased as its Colonel, in which capacity he served throughout the war. For some time the command was attached to the Headquarters Brigade of the Army of the Potomac, and during the entire struggle it did efficient service. The deceased was possessed of those soldierly qualities which eminently fitted him for military life, and was not less highly esteemed by the community at large than by his companions in

Hon. Truman H. Hong. The Hon. Truman H. Hoag, a Representative in Congress from Ohio, died at the Metropolitan Hotel, in Washington, on Saturday evening, from exhaustion and weakness resulting from a long attack of fever and ague. The deceased was born near Syracuse, New York, April 9, 1816, and removed to Toledo, Ohio, in 1848. In 1868 he became the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Toledo district, which had been represented by the Hon. James M. Ashley for some years, and had been largely Republican. But there was so much dissatisfaction with the old member that Mr. Hoag was elected by a majority of nearly a thousand. On receiving the news of his death, a meeting of the Ohio delegation was held yesterday afternoon, at which it was decided to announce his death to-day. The remains of the deceased will be accompanied to Toledo by a committee of the House of which he

Hon. Peter T. Washburn. A despatch from Woodstock, Vermont, states that the Hon. Peter T. Washburn died at his residence there this morning. At the last election the deceased was the Republican candipate for Governor of Vermont, and was elected over Homer W. Heaton, the Democratic candidate, by more than 20,000 majority.

Str Charles A. Wyndham, K. C. B. Lieutenant-General Sir Charles Ashe Wyndham, K. C. B., a son of the late Vice-Admiral Wyndham, who had gone to Florida for medical treatment, died at Jacksonville, in that State, on Wednesday last. He was born in 1810, became a member of the famous Coldstream Guards in 1826, and colonel in 1854. When the war against Russia in the Crimea was inaugurated, he was appointed Assistant Quartermaster-General to the Fourth Division, and was soon after placed in command of a brigade of the Second Division. At the battle of Inkerman, and more especially in the taking of the Redan, he greatly distinguished himself, and for his gallantry on this occasion was made a major-general and chief-of-staff. In 1857 he was returned to Parliament in the Liberal interest from the East Norfolk district, but in the same year went to India to assist in the suppression of the Sepoy mutiny, taking an active part in the campaign under Lord Clyde. In 1865 he was made a K. C. B., and at the time of his death held the rank of lientenant-general and colonel of the 46th Regiment.

HOME BALLOS EMPORTES

This distinguished Russian author and revolutionist died in Paris on the 31st of January. He was a native of Moscow, where he was born in 1816. At a very early age he plunged into political life, advancing liberal opinions with so much recklessness that before he had completed his eighteenth year he was placed under arrest imprisoned, and finally sent into exile, on the charge of disloyalty. The Government, however, permitted him to act during the period of his banishment in a minor civil capacity, and on his release he returned to Moscow and occupled himself in contributing a series articles to a / St. Petersburg magazine on "The Study of Nature" and "Dilletantism in Science." For some years subsequently he led a wandering life, finally settling down in London, where he founded a journal with the title of the Kolokol. This periodical was made the exponent of the views of the so-called young Russian party, and was read extensively throughout Europe, the Russian Government endeavoring in vain to exclude it from the empire. For many years Hertzen continued to disseminate liberal ideas through its columns.

The Hartford Courant learns that parties who have been making examinations of the monster bird and animal tracks in the old sandstone at Turner's Falls, Mass., claim to have discovered human footprints, clearly and well defined, indented in the same strata with those of animals and birds.

—Several young persons out in Oregon, wish ing to do good, have determined to give a ball, and devote the proceeds either to the purchase of a new bell for the church or a library for the Sunday school. They are undecided between the bell and the books, but there is not a moment's hesitation about the ball. —A Chicago paper, after remarking that although it "has been said that frailty is the proper distinctive appellation to apply to the weaker sex, perhaps fickleness would have been a better word," tells the story of a blooming widow in that city "who plighted her troth to a better word," tells the story of a blooming widow in that city "who plighted her troth to

But one similar case has come to the knowledge of the officers of the company out of the thousands of applications made for life policies. In each a policy was granted. -The Savannah Republican reports that complaints of a lack of sufficient force to carry the plantation interests the present year come from every part of Georgia. It says many of the negroes have died; very many have flocked to the railroads now building; the towns have absorbed a good share; some have hired or bought lands and gone to work on their own account, and the women, as a general rule, have wholly deserted the fields. —The fifteenth amendment declares that "the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any State, on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude;" and a genius, editor of an obscure Kentucky paper, advises the Legislature of that State to law providing that "no person shall be elector in Commonwealth who has wool or kinky hair on his scalp," and that any person who shaves or otherwise removes the wool or hair from his ad, so as to deceive the judges of election, shall be indicted and punished, as provided by law, for fraudulent voting. -Rev. Alfred Anderson, a prominent colored preacher of Knoxville, publishes a unique card in the Knoxville Whig, warning the against a colored brother named Dr. J. B. Young. The latter is said to be a graduate of Cambridge University, England, and has been a shining light of radicalism in Tennessee for a number of years. Anderson alleges that he caught his wife and said Young in flagrante delicio, and winds up his card thus:—'I have, therefore, put Mary E. Two Aggravated Cases at Chester.

The Chester Republican reports the following:—An aggraved case of bigamy recently occurred in this city, in which two brothers-Daniel and Edward Agnew—both married men with families, living in Philadelphia, married two girls-Rosanna and Bridget Doughertydaughters of James and Barney Dougherty aged eighteen, residing in North ward. The Agnews were in the employ of a picture and looking-glass dealer in Philadelphia, and brought their wares to this city for sale, returning to their homes at night. In their peregrinations in that locality, they became acquainted with the Dougherty girls, to whom they represented themselves as single men. They visited the girls often, and finally obtained permission of their parents to take them out carriage riding. Affairs continued in this way for some time, when the rascals professed love to the girls, and married them about Christmas. The marriage was kept a secret, and about the middle of last month the girls left their homes one evening, and have not been heard of since. Their disappearance led the parents to investigate the matter, and they found the wives of the Agnews in Philadelphia-one with two children, the youngest a little over a year old, in destitute circumstances, and the other with one child—both supposing their hus-bands were in this place selling pictures. Nothing has been heard of the Agnews or their second wives since they left here
