NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. New York, Feb. 22, 1870.

Trinkty on Holidays. Trinity Church celebrates the holidays as religiously and regularly as the theatres do. To-day, for instance, being Washington's Birthday, Mr. James Ayliffe, the old-time bell-ringer of the church, will ring a number of changes, and tintinuabulate some popular songs, both old and new. The tintinnabulations will be patriotle and sentimental, such as the "Red, White, and Blue," "Yankee Doodle," "Coming Through the Rye."

Triumphant Type-setting. Possibly you may have heard ere this of the triumph in type-setting accomplished by Mr. George Arensberg, one of the compositors on the Times. The feat consisted in setting 2064 ems of solid minion type in sixty minutes. This is very remarkable, so remarkable as to surpass belief if the statement was not exceedingly well authenticated. The performance was the result of a bet that Mr. Arensburg could not set 2000 ems of solid minion in one hour. Mr. Arensberg is the Dexter of the press, and I suppose Mr. Bonner has engaged him.

Miss Alice Cary is dangerously ill at her residence in this city. but the fact of her illness does not surprise any of her friends. She has been an invalid for many years, and her disease is insidious, painful, and incurable, greatly affected by changes in the weather, and certain to eventuate in death. These sad circumstances, however, have not prevented her being the sunlight, or rather the moonlight, of her pretty and placid home in East Twentieth street, near Fourth avenue. I say moonlight, because she is so much more serene and silent than her sister Phebe, to whom the sunlight simile more naturally applies. Both the sisters have led good, useful, and happy lives, winning equal popularity, and more of it than falls to the lot of two in two thousand of women who publish poetry. Both, I think, are believers in spiritualism in its higher sense, though the fact that they practise Swedenborgianism will horrify many of the orthodox as much as though it were Lucrezia-Borgianism instead. The Anti-Robber Bank-Boy Protective is, I presume, the name given to a curious ar rangement which I observed yesterday on the person of a boy in Wall street. The youth, who was about fifteen, was apparently a bank-boy, and carried in his hands one of those precious tin boxes which burglars and highway robbers so much affect. To the box was attached a strong chain which passed once or twice around the boy's waist underneath his jacket, and was securely fastened. Evidently there was no running off with that tin box without running off with the boy too.

The Well-dressed Stranger. Society never will learn the lesson which sad experience is so auxious to teach it, for the simple reason that it don't want to. It likes to be humbugged not only in its public amusements but in its secial pleasures. A certain individual who dubbed himself with the name of a certain foreign and distinguished diplomatist has been creating great havoe in the good little suburb of Elizabeth, and some also in the bad big town of New York. He was introduced indifferently as count and baron, and indeed it didn't make much difference so far as veracity was concerned what degree of rank was conferred upon him. As far as I can understand, it is the old Baron de Riviere and Lord Ainsley business over again. How stale all old stage tricks are, are they not? This latest fraud made the young lady fall in love with him, borrowed some money of her, disappeared, and has not since come to the surface. I suppose there are grades of snobbishness low enough to enjoy being "beaten" when the ruffian who accomplishes it bears a title. The Finger of Scorn. Scorn has only one finger. Ever since I have heard Scorn mentioned as an interesting topic of personal remark I have observed that only one finger is ascribed to her, invariably mentioned as the Finger of Scorn.

Waving this unique digital fact, I will merely remark that the upper classes of New York society (into which I am not admitted, so don't for a moment suspect me of claiming that distinction, but the bubbles from which sometimes ripple I ast my ears)-I will merely remark that the upper classes have instituted a mild and pleasant manner of moving Scorn's finger. It consists in this, and amounts to nothing more than a momentary ostracism. When, at a dinner in "society," some one at the table begins to tell a story which the others have heard, those who are acquainted with the facts silently raise their knives, and, balancing them upon the rims of their goblets, direct the points gently in the direction of the unfortunate speaker. It is a mild way of pointing Scorn's finger-a polite method of saying, "Dry up; we've heard that before." The speaker takes the hint. He "dries up." Conversationally he may be said to wilt for the remainder of the evening. He remains blasted beneath the mildew of mockery. Society walts in vain for him to speak again. He shrouds himself, to the end of the entertainment, in a mystery as unfathomable as the "Mystery of Edwin Drood."

"Buck! Buck! How many Hamlets?" Well may we ask. Last week we had five. Fetcher being gone, four remain-Booth, Fox, Tony Pastor, and Charley Backus. In fact, everything is Hamlet, and probably there will be two or three more before the season is over.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The City Amusements. AT THE CHESNUT the drama of The Streets o

New York will be performed this evening, with Mr. Frank Mayo as "Badger."

A rumor appeared in our local columns yes-terday to the effect that there is to be a change in the management of the Chesnut shortly. We have been requested to deny this, and to state that Miss Laura Keene has no intention of resigning her interest in the establishment.

Missi Keene assumed the management of the Chesnut at very short notice, and she was consequently unable to make the usual arrangements for the season that are essential if the public are to be treated to that variety in the content of the entertainments that is style and character of the entertainments that is desirable. In spite of this however, a good company was got together, and as our play goers know, a series of very meritorious per-formances were given, that attracted apprecia-tive and intelligent audiences. That mistakes were made every one knows, but under the cir-cumstances these were unavoidable, and consi-dering all the disadvantages under which Miss Keene labored, her season thus far has been a success. She is now playing a brilliant engagement in Washington with a portion of her company, an engagement that wasentered into before assuming the management of the Chesnut, and from which she was unable to obtain a release. from which she was unable to obtain a release. In a few weeks she will return to this city, when she will produce a series of attractive novelties that have been in preparation for some time, and which it is expected will be patronized liberally by the public. In the meantime a number of popular "atars" will appear, and no pains will be spared to make the Chesnut an meaning a meaning will be spared to make the Chesnut an entity instalments at No. 704 Chesnut street.

attractive place of resort. Miss Keene will continue in the management of the theatre next season, and as during the summer recess she will have ample opportunities to perfect her plans, there is every reason to believe that she will succeed in establishing the reputation of the Chesnut as the leading theatre of Philadelphia, and a place where the public can always rely upon witnessing reflued and elegant performances.

At the Walnut Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watkins appeared last evening in their Irish drama of Trodden Doten; or, Under Two Flags. This play is one of the best of its class; it is full of romantic and exciting incidents, and it gives
Mr. and Mrs. Watkins some excellent opportunities to display their talents. Trodden Doten was greeted by hearty applause last evening, as it has been whenever represented here.

Horace Greeley will lecture this evening at the Academy of Music, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. Subject:—"The Woman Question."

ROME.

The Canons in the New Dogmatic Scheme Pro-posed to the Genmenical Council. Berlin, Jan. 6.—The Augsburg Universal Gazette, frequently used by the Bavarian Government as the medium for making public intelligence respecting the council at Rome, has published the "Canones des Ecclesia," being that part of the Syllabus in the new dogmatic scheme laid before the council expressed in a positive form. The canons are as follows:—

OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST. Canon 1. Whoever says the religion of Christ consists and is expressed in no particular com-munity established by Christ himself, but is duly observed and exercised by individuals for themselves, without regard to any community which is the true Church of Christ—let him be Whoever says the true Church is not a single body, but consists of the different and scattered communities of Christian name, and is poured out over the same, or, the different communities diverging from each other in their confession of faith and separated from the union, form, as members or parts, the one and universal Church of Christ—let him be accursed.

Canon 3. Whoever says the Church of Christ is not a community altogether necessary to eternal salvation, or, man can be saved through the exercise of any religion-let him be accuraed. Canon 4. Whoever says that intolerance with which the Catholic Church regards and con-demns all religious sects that have separated from her, is not prescribed by divine law, or, as to the truth of religion only speculations, and not certainty exist, and consequently all religious sects should be tolerated by the Church—let him be accursed.
