Naval Nominations.

Despatch to the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, March 3 .- The following nominations were sent in to-day:-Navy, John H. Ross, to be Assistant-Surgeon; John H. Jordan, Paymaster; Lucius D. Hurd, Paymaster. The Onelda Disaster.

Washington, March 3 .- Secretary Fish has received a despatch from United States Minister Delong, dated Yokohama, February 1, forwarded from San Francisco, stating that the wreck of the Oneida has been discovered, and that the armament may possibly be recovered. Although investigation is being held, the list of those se; ed, reported officially by Minister Dalong, is the same as previously published in the press despatches.

The Naval Examination The President has selected the following gentlemen as members of the Board of Visitors to attend the annual examination at the Naval Academy in May next: - Thomas Cadwalaster, of New Jersey; Stanley G. Trott, of South Carolina; General W. F. Reynolds, United States Army; John R. Bartlett, Rhode Island; Moses Taylor, New York; Paul Dillingham, Wisconsin; and Professor H. B. Wilson, Minnesota.

CONGRESS.

Continued from the Third Edition. Mr. Willey moved to amend the amendment so that the Judge shall reside in the circuit after appointment, dispensing with the necessity of his being a resident when appointed. He believed that in view of the qualifications required and the importance of the office, the President should be allowed to make his selection from the nation at large, and that national interests should not be made subser vient to the sentiments of localities where, as in Southern circuits, it might be difficult to find a man whose loyalty and superior qualifications entitled him to the exalted position of a Judgeship of the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Davis, though distrusting the animus of the appointing power in the important duty of filling the offices of Judges of the supreme Court of the United States, was willing to leave to the President that unrestricted constitutional discretion which he proposed of making his nomination from any portion of the country. He believed it was not competent for Congress to restrict the President in this particular or in relation to nominations for foreign

Mr. Conkling remarked that the inference from the Senator's (Mr. Davis') position was that because the Constitution was silent on the subject, therefore Congress could not inquire whether a judge was learned in the law or possessed other essential qualifications. By the same right the matter of residence could not be an official requisite. Mr. Wilson submitted an amendment looking to a new arrangement of the circuits.

Mr. Trumbull expisited that the arrangement of Mr. Trumbull expisited that the arrangement of the circuits by the committee was based upon population, and the number of cases on the Supreme Court docket, with a view to equalizing the amount of business for each of the judges. He said the bill had no personal object, but that the arrang-ment of the circuits was intended to ac ommodate circuits to judges already confirmed. The argument that Congress had no power to limit the President to any particular district in selecting these judges was based upon an idea that Congress could not prescribe the mode in which the President shall perform his duties. The President was Commauderin-Chief of the army and navy, but he could not raise or pay a soldier without the co-operation of Congress.

Congress.

The bill was then laid aside.

Mr. Chandler, from the Committee on Commerce, reported with amendments the bill to incorporate adversely to the bul to provide for an American line of mail and emigrant passenger steamers between New York and Scandinavian and German ports. Also, adversely, the bill relieving masters of vessels owned wholly by United States citizens and engaged in the coasting trade from the obligation of employing licensed pilots.

Mr. Kellogg, from the Committee on Commerce, reported, with amendment, a joint resolution providing for a survey and estimate of the cost of removing obstructions from the Bayou Teche in Louisians.

At 1 o'clock the consideration of the Funding bill was resumed, and Mr. Morrill (Vt.) addressed the House.

Continued from the Third Edition. Mr. Wheeler introduced a bill granting lands for building a branch railroad to the Uintah Mountains.

Mr. Davis (N. Y.) gave notice that he would, at the earliest practicable moment report from the Judiciary Committee the naturalization bill, and ask for its passage.

The House then, at half-past one, went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Mercur in the chair, on the Indian appropriation bill.

An appropriation bill. An amendment, offered by Mr. Paine, pro-viding that nothing in the act should be construed viding that nothing in the act should be construed as recognizing as subsisting public treaties any such treaties made before the 20th day of July, 1867, gave rise to considerable discussion, it being denounced by Mr. Maynard as a violation of the faith of the nation, and defended by Messrs. Paine, Lawrence, and other members. Finally, not wishing to occupy further the time of the committee, Mr. Paine with drew the amendment, and the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House.

Mr. Lawrence moved to take up the Deficiency bill.

The chairman decided that that could not be done without unanimous consent, as the Tariff bill was the special order in Committee of the Whole. The committee then rose and reported back the Indian Appropriation bill with amendments. The amendments were agreed to in bulk, and the bill

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 3, 1870.

Quesada's Reception. General Quesada has been received-not, perhaps, in a style corresponding with his anticipations or with the splendor of governments which are not republican, but still with the characteristics of a metropolis like New York. which is alternately spreading itself in the coarse magnificence of ill taste and behaving with a niggardliness that the countriest of country towns ought to be ashamed of. For instance, on Tuesday evening, as I was walking along Broadway, near Fourteenth street, a procession of common street cabs suddenly loomed before me. They trailed along like magnified tortoises in mourning going to a funeral. The only unfunereal appendage was the Cuban flag which the assistant driver of the foremost vehicle has fastened to his whip, and was waving with devoted fervor. A crowd of clerks, laborers, loafers, newsboys, and bootblacks followed in the wake. What was the matter General Quesada had arrived, and this was his "recep."

An Ism of the Senson. Numerous little items occur in New York which never find their way into the papers for the simple reason that a reporter don't happen to be on the spot. Listen to one which is one of the most characteristic of the season, and extremely New Yorkish. At about 11 o'clock last night might be seen in a University Place car a curious spectacle. It consisted of three children-a girl and two boys. The girl was about eleven years old. On each side of her was a boy, one about ten, the other perhaps eight. All ding, and those of the boys reclining on the girl's shoulders. The dresses of this trio were of the most extraordinary description. The girl was dressed in a short frock and wore dingycolored stockings and shoes through which her toes could be discerned. Over the skirt of her dress was arranged one of Canton flannel with the wrong side out. The upper part of her body was enveloped in a shawl which might have belonged to a remote ancestor of the oldest inhabitant. Her head was decorated with a white hat, the material of which I will not attempt to conjecture, and the hat was surmounted with pink feathers. A thick black vell enshrouded this millinery masterpiece, but did not prevent the discovery of a greasy-looking grey silk mask which covered the girl's features. Each of the boys was concealed from mortal view by an overcoat which, when he stood up, came to within one inch of the ground and permitted several toes, in a state of unblushing nudity, to appear. The trio slumbered peacefully on until the car reached Thirty-fourth street, when they awoke simultaneously as though by preconcerted understanding. The eldest boy, followed by the others, walked up to the conductor and commenced bullying him in baby-voice:-"What do yer mean by not stopping when yer told to?" The conductor was convulsed and couldn't answer; every passenger was up and peering to see what would be the result. The car stopped; the mites got out. At the corner of Thirtyfourth street and Sixth avenue was a blaze of light, in the midst of which stood carriages, and masked figures could be seen ascending and descending like the angels on Jacob's ladder. In this blaze of light Gayroche and his two companions were lost. They handed in their tickets at the door of a certain hall and vanished up the stairway. They had gone to a masked ball

Parepa-Rosa on the Home Stretch. This accomplished cautatrice, whom I admire equally as a singer and as a fine figure of a woman, and the compass of whose waist and voice is in mutual proportion, is making for this city again, after a very successful tour East, North, West, and South. A directress of English opera who can rake in seventy thousand dollars in twenty-one nights, as she is said to have done, deserves to be haunted by the ghosts of the slaughtered Richings troupe. Such abominable ingratitude in Messrs. Campbell, Castle, and the rest of them, to "desert the old banner" and go over to a usurper who offered a few dollars a month more! I don't wonder Caroline felt badly, and satisfied her revenge by publishing a card. The most ingenious malice couldn't have invented a shorter way of making oneself appear ridiculous. Lent.

Lent in New York is Fashion at the prie-dieu. The belle does up her choicest laces into the semblance of sack-cloth, and steeps herself in ashes (of roses). The penitential scourge is symbolized in her flutterless fan; her coquettish eyes become "homes of earnest prayer," whose occupant "receives" for the next forty days, and the penitent prodigal, her brother, joins with her in her devotions, and forsakes his euchre for the eucharist. Religion is taken out from conscience's cupboards, done up in fresh bags of lavender, so to speak, and then put away again for another year. Lent, particularly in New York, is like Aunt Ophelia's house-cleaning, a general "claring-up" time for all the rest of the twelve months. The orison-repeating nymphs of fashionable life squeeze all the peccadilloes of the interrupted season into the confessions of these few weeks, and come forth refined gold ready to be drossed over again. So let it be. It is better that Fashion should find a respite in the formalities of Lent than that she should find no respite at all. ALI BABA.

A BUSINESS SUCCESS .- Mr. H. T. Helmbold. the successful Philadelphia merchant, now owner of a magnificent branch store in New York, is one of the great business monuments of that city. His new store in New York is one of the leading institutions, and is the feature of the Metropolitan block, in which it is situated. There are many older drug and medicine stores of asimilar character in that city, but none can rival it in splendor. It has a polished marble floor, show-cases full of quaint and classic vases, and jars and flasks labelled in the most gorgeous manner. The walls are decorated with brilliant devices of exquisite embellishment, in brightly variegated colors. It is difficult to realize the fact that, without a particle of bustle or hurrying, or confusion, twenty-four hours rarely pass but the receipts in this department aloue reach away into the thorsands. Of course the returns of the wholesale office are infinitely greater. This beautiful palace of business, however attractive as it is in the day time, is still more resplendent under the influence of gas It then becomes more like a vision of fairyland.

Less than eighteen years ago Mr. Helmbold virtually initiated with a cash capital of about $2000 the plan of business which has brought bim fame and fortune. He spends five times that amount now each week in advertising alone. That is the key-note to the unparalleled triumph by which his exertions have been crowned. He had the foresight and shrewdness to see that publicity was essential to success, and he had the pluck and persistency to promptly put his idea into execution. The results of his experi-ment were hopefully encouraging from the very start. Every dollar that he paid out for newspaper space, for bills and posters, or any means of constantly keeping his name before the community, came back to him with ten-fold increase. As fast as it came back it was put forth again in the same way, and so kept on increasing and multiplying until the little office on Chesaut street gradually grew into the finest store in this city, and thence developed the New York offshoot, which is now the palace of Broadway. Mr. Helmbold advertises in more than half of all the papers published in the United States. His books show current transactions with more than 2700 of them. Such colossal transactions can but bring colossal results. With his great business tact and his fearless way of taking time by the fore-lock, Mr. Hembold, if he keeps on as he has been doing, cannot fall to reach any point of commercial greatness to which he may see fit to aspire. May his example be followed by all young business men.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The City Amusements AT THE ARCH Miss Annie Firmin will have her first benefit in this city this evening, when the drama of The Black Domino and Mr. Craig's burlesque of Barbe Bleue will be performed. During the present season Miss Firmin has gained many friends and admirers by the earnestness with which she has sought to please in whatever parts were assigned her, and her steady improvement shows that she is inspired by a genuine artistic spirit. Both as a lady and as an artist Miss Firmin is entitled to a hand-some compliment from the playgoers of Philadelphia, and her merits caunot be better recognized. nized than by a crowded house and liberal ap plause this evening. THE PAREPA-ROSA TROUPS Will perform Flotow's Martha and Weber's Oberon on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week at the Academy of Music. The sale of seats will commence on Friday at the Academy.

AT THE CHESNUT Mr. Frank Mayo will personate "D'Artagnan" in The Three Guardsmen for the last time this evening. This is a performance of very unusual merit, that deserves three were apparently asleep, their heads nod- a more cordial recognition than it has yet received from the playgoers of this city. The drama of The Three Guardsmen is interesting, and with Mr. Mayo as the hero it mans to prove an attraction to lovers of good acting. To-morrow evening Mr. Mayo will have a farewell benefit, when he will appear as "Don Cauar de Bazan" and "Belphegor." These are parts admirably suited to Mr Mayo's style, and we hope that a full house will be in attendance to witness their personation.

WALLED IN WITH PAPER!-Why are the hair-coloring preparations kept dark? Simply because the light decomposes them and exposes their foul sediment. Hence the bottles are jacketed with pasts and paper. It revives the natural color in every time-blesched fibre, and does not stain the skin. Sold by all druggists and fancy goods dealers.
