CITE INTELLIGENCE.

A Model Officer .- A scene occurred at the corner of Fifth and Chesput streets this morneorner of Fifth and Chesput streets this morning which, for a time, created as little excitement, and entitles the principal actor therein (a policeman) to an immediate discharge. A colored lad, who is known as "Calamus," was proceeding along Fifth street with a bunch of the "root" under his arm, when Policemon No. "154" took a piece off in rather a rough manner. The lad as a matter of course demurred, when Mr. "154" said "Get along, give no slang, or I'll arrest you." The youth replied that he did not care about being arrested, as he had done This answer rather exasperated the officer, and drawing from his pocket his star, he pinned it on his coat, and marched the lad into the Central Station, where a crowd followed.

The turnkey asked what the charge was when the officer mumbled something about locking him up for a few hours. He then proceeded in a rough way to search the youth, when the latter proffered to hand over his pittance of earnings. Drawing forth a tin tobacco box, the officer "No 154" made a grab for it, the youth refusing to deliver it until he had counted his money. "No. 154" then made another grab at the lad and this time almost tore his coat from his back. At this juncture several citizens interposed and the officer desisted. Lieutenant Thomas arriving, to his credit be it said, promply discharged the lad and ordered the officer to pay for the calamus he had stolen. This the lad refused to agreet, but went his way. This the lad refused to accept, but went his way, glad to clear himself of trouble. The matter, we understand, has been reported to Chief Mulholland, and the paolic awaits the result.

ALL ABOUT A BABY.—On Friday last a Mrs. Stock, wife of Adam Stock, residing at the corner of Fifth and Monroe streets, left this city by way of the North Pennsylvania line to proceed to Easton. Mrs. Stock was accompanied by three children and a baby. On their arrival at Philipsburg a little girl, aged twelve years, stepped off the train, when the mother handed baby, but before she could get the other e alldren off, the train had started. Rumors were soon affoat that it was a trick of the mother s get rid of the children, and quite an excitement existed for some time. In the meantime the little girl and baby were taken to Mr. Bennett's Hotel by Officer Baker, where their wants were kindly provided for, and Mr. Higgins sent a despatch to the conductor of the train, who in return telegraphed that the mother had got off at Harmony station, and was walking back to Philipsburg. Mrs. Stock reached the latter place some hours afterwards, worn out, but overloved to find her lost ones.

ROBBERY .- The store of R. Hoskins & Co., stationers, No. 913 Arch street, was broken into from the rear on Sunday night last and robbed of fine cutlery and other goods to the amount of between three and four hundred dollars. The firm keep a large stock of gold pens, pencils, etc., always on hand, but they were locked up In their fire-proof sate and were unmolested by the burglars. Messrs, Hoskins & Co.'s store is entirely shutterless, presenting a front almost altogether of glass, and a light is kept always burning at night in the store. Persons passing the place, therefore, at night, can have a full view of the whole establishment, and on this account the robbery of their place is one of the most daring we have been called upon to chronicle in a long time, more especially as the cases where the goods were taken from are very near the front of the store.

one sees amongst the police force daily. Likewise astonishing is the previous character of some of the new appointees. More Shooting .- About 121/2 o'clock this A. M. Officers Clarke and Kneass observed two suspicious-looking characters lurking around the neighborhood of Tenth and Ogden streets. On the officers approaching them one of the two drew a revolver and fired a couple of shots at Kneass, which compliment Kneass returned, but unfortunately none of his shots took effect. The rascals then escaped, leaving their "kit" of burglars' tools behind them. WILL.-The will of the late Elizabeth Hopkins was admitted to probate to-day. It contains the following public bequests:—Old Man's Home, $500; Indigent Widows' and Single Women's Society, $500: Female Society of Philadelphia for the Relief and Employment of the Poor, $200; Western Association of Ladies for the Relief and Employment of the Poor, $200; Foster Home Association, $200. FIRE.-About 4 o'clock this morning a fire occurred in the wholesale produce establishment of Hammell & Pyle, No. 336 North Water street. The fire was first discovered by Sergeant Coates, who at once gave the alarm to the Perseverance Fire Companies, and then caused a telegraphic alarm to be given. The promptness of the officer saved the greater portion of the property.

DANGEROUS .- The slate roofs of the buildings Nos. 306, 308, and 310 S. Second street are in a dilapidated condition, and every gale of wind carries pieces thereof into the street, thus endangering the lives of passers-by. Attention should be paid to this matter at once. .

UNFILIAL.-Thomas Hines, who resides with his stepfather, at Twenty-fourth and Kent streets, was yesterday held in $600 bail to answer the charge of committing an assault and battery upon the said step-parent.

PICKPOCKET. — Last night one James McLaughlin was arrested at Front and Dock streets whilst attempting to pick the pocket of a party named Isaac C. Fowler. James was taken before an alderman, and sent to prison in de-FIRE .- About 81/4 o'clock last P. M. an alarm of fire was caused by the burning of a foul chim-ney at Tenth and Rodman streets.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

In October last he went bail for a man who was charged with entering the Eagte Hotel with intent to steal, and swore that he owned the property No. 101 Columbia avenue. It was subsequently found that the owner of the property was a Mrs. Baily, and the prisoner never had any title to it or lived in it. When he was arrested he acknowledged that he had sworn falsely in order to be accepted as surety. A young man of seventeen years pleaded guilty to a charge of being father to a pretty little hoy.

should have emanated from the General of the Army.

He had nothing to say against General Sherman, who was a galiant officer and soldier, frem whose reputation he had never attempted to detract in the slightest degree. But self-respect demanded of him when he was assailed, and when the House was assailed through him, when he was charged with falsehood in his statements, to reply to those charges and to show that his original statements were perfectly correct. fectly correct, Mr. Logan said that he had spoken of the staff of the armies and that he spoke of that now.

Mr. Slocum wanted the House and the country to understand that what were called staff officers in the United States were not called staff officers abroad, and that although the staff here might number 600 officers, there were five times as many men performing the same duties in European armies.

It was therefore unfair to the army to attempt to make the House believe that the army of the United States was using more men to perform staff duties than the European armies were, for that was not so.

Mr. Logan replied that if the gentleman from New York would not be so excited, he would hear the explanation of that. He did not want the gentleman to say that he (Mr. Logan) was trying to deceive the House.

Mr. Slocum did not think that he (Mr. Logan) was doing so, but he thought it likely that members might be led astray by his remarks.

Mr. Logan preferred to pursue his own course in the matter, and let the gentleman (Mr. Slocum) pursue his. If that gentleman would be quiet he would show that what he had said was true to the letter. He then proceeded to quote from military authorities in contradiction of the assertions of General Sherman. As to the bill complained of by General Sherman and which he had designated the odious Army bill Logan said that he kad taken it to the Secretary of War, General Beknap, and said that he wanted him and General Sherman and said that he wanted him and General Sherman and said that he wanted him and General Sherman to sit down with him (Logan) and go over the bill together. That was done. General Belknap read over the bill, section by section, to General Sherman, and General Sherman made but two objections to it and the Secretary of War but one, and that one he wrote out and he (Logan) put it in the bill as an amendment.

General Sherman's objection was the muster out of general officers, and another objection which he (Logan) would not mention. These were facts, and (Logan) would not mention. These were facts, and he a-ked what kind of taste that man had in making a personal attack on him through the newspapers. He quoted against General Sherman an extract from his report to the Secretary of War, resommending the assembling of a court of disinterested general officers, to which should be committed the whole matter of a reduction and reorganization of the army, with transfers of officers to fill vacancies, the very thing provided for in the first section of the bill.

As to the proposed reduction of the pay of general officers, the President might have told General Sherman that his salary should not be reduced, but Sherman that his salary should not be resideed, but that was not his (Mr. Logan's) opinion, nor the opinion of the House. It might be that General Sherman, with a smaller salary, would not be able to give dinners or receptions, but he (Mr. Logan) did not care anything about that. In defense of the taxpayers, of the crippled soldiers, and of soldiers' widows, he protested against the usurpation of power in the hands of a few men.

of power in the hands of a few men.

He protested against the attempt of men in high positions to dictate legislation to Congress. The legislative department of the Government must be free, untrammelled, and unfettered. He would say to these men in high positions that they were not the lawmakers but the law obeyers, they must not dictate the amount of taxation to be paid for their benefit. Whenever legislation became so stifled and crippled that a man who stood up for the people in a manly, honest, and prostood up for the people in a manly, honest, and pro-per spirit, was to be attacked in the columns of the newspapers by high officials, demanding that Con-gress shall not do certain things, then he would say farewell to the liberties of the country. He wanted to know whether this attack upon him meant that the country was to be turned over to the meant that the country was to be turned over to the hands of a few aristocrats, as in Europe? Whether titles were to be been hore? Whether easte was to be established? Whether an order of nobility was to grow up here? The people were henest, and brave, and true. It was the boys who carried the musket who made generals and it was the productions. who made generals, and it was they also who made Presidents He stood here to defend the rights of those men, and of their widows' and orphans, and to defend the liberties of the people, and whether assailed by generals, by marshals, by governors, by kings, by princes or potentates, by newspapers or by aristo-crats, he would still be found making war against dictation and dictators, against aristocrawy, and in favor of republicanism. (Clapping of hands in the On motion of Mr. Schenck, it was ordered that all general debate on the Tariff bill shall close to-mor-row an hour and a half after the House goes into Committee of the Whole. The House then, at 2 o'clock, went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Washburn (Wis.) in the chair on the Tariff bill, and was addressed by Mr. Marshall, a member of the Committee of Ways and Means, against protective tariffs and in favor of free-trade dectrines.

FROM EUROPE.

Proceedings of Parliament. LONDON, March 29.—In the House of Lords last evening the bill for the protection of life and pro-perty in Ireland, which has already passed the Com-mons, was read a first time. The other business was unimportant.

In the House of Commons the Marquis of Hartington, Postmaster-General, in reply to a question of Mr. Oglivy, member for Dundee, said that, owing to the recent reduction in trans-atlantic postage, steamers heretofore carrying American mails refused them; consequently contracts had been made with German and other lines. The discontent with the present system had been officially brought to the notice of the American Postmaster-General. The House then went into committee on the Irish Land bill. A motion was made to adjourn the de-bate on the subject for one week, which was nega-

Mr. Gladstone opposed this also, as did the Attorney-General, and it was rejected on a division by 283 majority. Subsequently an amendras— for legalizing the custom in Uister itself was lost by 279 majority and the House adjourned.
