NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 6, 1870. Struck by Stenm.

The hard hearts of the Sorosisters, not being accessible to the touch of mortal man, have at length been reached by the steam chef dauvre representative of masculinity, which steams, moves, and has its being at No. 551 Broadway. They have been visiting it in a body, and declare it to be superior to the original article. I suppose the reason is that it has no will of its own, but is ready to do everything within its capacity after being wound up.

A. V. Stewart as Aladdin. Mr. A. T. Stewart has all life long been rubbing the lamp of good luck, and his good genius, Success, is now building for him the new city on Hampstead Plains. Men, horses, and carts are at work there, and a metropolis promises in time to evolve itself from the matrix of mud at present visible there.

Cautious Mess Kellegg. The residence of Miss Clara Louise Kellogg (an American singer of some note in light operas), on East Sixteenth street, has been broken into and robbed. The family, however, were in Boston at the time, and the costly souvenirs which the prima donna has had presented to her were either carefully locked away upstairs or stowed away in some bank vault, for all that the burglars succeeded in carrying off with them were some table linen and some spoons and forks. The Detective Police Agency is after the thieves, and expresses itself as "sanguine of success," which at any rate is an interesting and original declaration upon its part. Mrs. Freligh's Adventures.

The adventures of Mrs. Freligh, the wife of the manager of the Bowery Theatre, appear to be of the morphine and mysterious order. About a month ago she met a gentleman who, at a late hour in the evening, was conducting her home when she suddenly telt ill-so ill that it was necessary to conduct her to the nearest available house. There something bibulous and invigorating was applied, but the invigoration appears to have been of that quality which produces sleep, for Mrs. Freligh says she lost consciousness, together with such jewels as she had upon her person. The lady has since spotted an individual whom she declares to be the thief. In the agony of mind she has since suffered she has received the sympathy of everybody of similar experience. It only proves how very dangerous it is for any well-conducted lady to take strong drink, even as a medicine, at a late hour of the night in a house that is not her The Seventh Regiment.

A few days ago the members of the Seventh Regiment held a meeting at their armory in reference to a series of communications that have appeared from time to time in the public newspapers, and the obvious intention of which is to prejudice the public against that regiment. One of its general orders is that no member is permitted to attach the name of the regiment in any form or manner to any communication in any public journal upon any subject whatsoever. All members are expressly forbidden to use the name of the regiment as an endorsement of their own views, or in support of their individual opinions. The disparaging articles which have appeared purport to be written by a member, and are certainly violative of the spirit and letter of the general order above referred to. The object of the meeting, therefore, was to request the public to regard all such articles as unauthorized, and newspapers to refrain from publishing them, unless the name of a responsible member be attached. It has been complained that this step savors strongly of snobbery, but I do not think so; it is rather an instance of dignified and gentlemanly snub-

The Tammany. The Tammany has been reopened, and, in addition to the brunette ballet troupe, the public is granted permission to drink ad libitum without moving from its seats. You may imbibe legs and lager in the same breath if you will, and the pas of the Spanish figurantes draw as well as the poultice of Spanish flies. Terpsichore and Tobacco sit down together, so to speak, and full of content with the spectacular extravaganga, you smoke the calumet of peace

The Girl with the Arsenic Complexion. I presume sheels second cousin to the lady with the belladonna eyes. She kept store in a locality that shall be nameless: it is not a huna. 7 miles away from Broadway, New York, and was supposed to have an interesting hearthistory. In fact, she was suspected of having been crossed in love, but the cross didn't reach her temper, for she was one of the sweetestnatured, smoothest-grained temperaments that ever glorified this work-a-day world. So say her friends. They add that she died of a broken heart, of neglect and ill-treatment from a worthless husband to whom she had been only too good. She had put the poetry and passion of her life into her business, and that is the reason why her mourning millinery is full of the most sweetly melancholy things extant. Every bonnet was a bijou not so much of silk and lace as of sentiment and lackadaisy. So say her friends. Her enemies declare that her alabaster skin was the result of habitual arsenic eating, and that she died of too heavy a dose. The obscurelygroped guesses which one or two of the New York papers got hold of enabled them to make her from time to time the nub of sensation stories. At length, however, the poor young thing is at peace, her memory preserved in the hearts of her friends as fragrant as a box of precious cintment, and even her enemies given no room for darker suspicions than that she died under singular circumstances. ALI BABA.

A Sale of Fine Oil Paintings. An interesting sale of fine oil paintings is now in progress at the Fine Art Gallery of Messrs. Martin & Brothers, at No. 704 Ches-nut street. The collection to be disposed of is a very superior class of modern oil paintings, from the pencils of some of the best known and most popular native artists of the day. The attention of the art-loving public, amateurs and connoisseurs, is respectfully called to this sale. The sale, in all cases, is peremptory. As every picture and work announced in the catalogue will have to be sold at some figure, no matter how small, there is a splendid opportunity for lovers of pictures, and those who wish to decorate their homes, and make them really homelike, to secure real gems of art, which are the very best of decorations. An occasion like this is presented but once in a great while.

The prices are sure to suit everybody. There are many very noticeable works in the collection, among which may be mentioned "The Bridge of Sighs, Venice," by Charles Heidkin. This is a very beautiful view of a very beautiful scene. All who see it will be sure to wish themselves the possessors of the fine painting. "The Carnival of St. Martin's," the work of the well-known artist Van Ingen, will also be presented for the bids of the attendants. There are two real gems on exhibition, of which some one will become the lucky purchaser, which are in the form of two beautiful ideal figures, the one called "Faith," the other "Hope." They are both from the hand of Ernest Meltze, and are works which reflect great credit upon that artist. Besides these there are quite a large number of fine scenery paintings, representing views in America and Europe. These are of especial interest to travellers, but are also of value as artistic works of great beauty. Some excellent copies from the works of the old masters are in the collection, and a great number of interesting miscellaneous

There has seldom been an art sale in this city in which so great a variety has been presented or where one could so easily find something to suit his taste. The sale began this morning at 11 o'clock, when quite a number of choice paintlngs were disposed of. It will continue this evening at half-past 7 o'clock. The number of pictures to be sold is so great that it will not be possible to sell them all in one day. The sale will therefore continue to-morrow also at 11 A. M. and 7½ P. M.

Two on THREE COLDS in succession will, with many constitutions, securely establish the seeds of Consumption in the system, thus converting what was origh ally a simple, curable affection into one generally fatal. While ordinary prudence, therefore, makes it the business of every one to take care of a Cold until it is got rid of intelligent experience fortunately presents a remedy in DR. D. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT, thoroughly adapted to remove speedily all Coughs and Colds, and one equally effective in the primary stages of Consumption, Asthma, and Brouchitis. Sold by all Druggists,

IMPORTANT TO SUPPRIERS FROM NERVOUS EXCITE-MENT .- A gentleman residing in Grammeroy place, New York (whose name it would not be proper to mention), was suffering terribly about three weeks ago from the effects of dissipation. He could not sleep, vemited frequently, was tormented by horrible fancies, and could not keep a limb still. Opiates made him worse. While in this condition he was visited by a friend, who advised him to try PLANTATION BITTERS as an anodyne, stomachie, and tonic. "No use," said the sick man, despondingly; "nothing will save me. I'm a gone case." "Pshaw!" said his friend, "you're worth forty dead men yet. I'm going to doctor you now." So saying, he put on his hat, and going to the nearest druggist's presently returned with a bottle of the Bitters, of which he administered a dose forthwith. It had a soothing, cheering, tranquillizing effect. For a week thereafter the gentleman continued to take the tenic regularly, according to the directions, and at the end of that time was able to return to business in sound health, and with a clear intellect. This information is furnished by Alexander T. Minthrom of Morrisania, who will confirm it if addressed by mail.
