NEW YORK, April 9, 1870. Cutterior Polson. Dr. Chandler. Chemist to the Board of Health, has just completed some experiments upon substances used for dyeing the hair and whitening the complexion. It is a sort of therapeutic dilettantism to engage his attention; but just at present-owing, let us hope, to the exceptional health of the city-the board has nothing more important to absorb its attention. The experiments of Dr. Chandler prove precisely what has been preved over and over again, to wit: that the foundation of almost all dyes for the hair is lead, and that people who use those containing it do so at great risk. When you see hair which the age and habits of the owner inform you ought by right to be grey, you may feel pretty certain that she is a slow suicide. So likewise with the complexion. Dr. Chandler has proved, and announces it as a new and startling fact never before made public, that lead is one of the principal ingredients of articles used for beautifying the complexion, particalarly for whitening it. An interesting pallor is synonymous with palsy and paralysis. The "leaden" hue of death may be said to be truthfully descriptive in a double sense. If the doctors are to be believed, lead in cosmetics brings down as many victims in proportion as bullets do on the field. The feminine toilettable conceals the undertakers'; the bloom of youth trembles in the neighborhood of the gloom of death, and emails and lotions only provide masks underneath which poison eats its

Sunday Drinks.

It seems that, after all, we are not to have our Sunday beer. Lager and liquor-selling. generally, upon the Sabbath are not to be for us. Already saloons, and restaurants had commenced to open their bars, but the attitude of Genet will cause them to collapse again like a suddenly closed fau.

The "Herald" and Miss Thompson. The Herald has been publishing scandal about Miss Lydia Thompson one day, and contradicting it in cards from Miss Lydia Thompson the next. Between rehearsals, bitter reviews from some newspapers, dead silence from others, and an enormous newspaper correspondence pressing upon her, this young lady has quite enough to do and to bear. The wonder is that she does and bears It so well.

Managerial Reminiscences. There is a certain manager known to New York as not altogether disconnected with the success of Italian opera in this city, who, although in the possession of plenty of means, yet allows a small debt, contracted under pecu-Har circumstances, to remain unpaid. The circumstances are so peculiar as to warrant the telling. Some years ago this manager was attacked by the Herald in a very virulent manner, but with an intensity for which the newspaper thought it had abundant cause. At any rate it pitched into him right and left, and, as the saying is, did not leave him a leg to stand upon. The poor man was at his wits' end. He did not know what to do. His season had been successful so far, and promised to continue so, but what of that so long as his enemy had so splendid an opportunity to blackguard him, while he had none of replying? Neither money nor applause nor the eulogy of other journals could compensate him for the attacks of this relentless | foc. So late one night, when the opera was over, and the teneri and prime donne were partaking of one of those jolly little suppers which are always enjoyed so much when the season is propitious, Mr. Doldrum bethought him of a newspaper that would be friendly to him, and print some sort of a reply that would shut the Herald up. Somehow or other he did not get in town until it was so late as to be very early; one of those early hours, in fact, when the printers begin to go home, and night-editors wonder whether it is almost time for them to go. However, late as it was, Doldrum burst in upon a managing editor whom he found just ready to depart. To him he explained his case, and implored him for the love of heaven, to say nothing of Italian opera, to print a refutation in the morning's paper. The managing editor told him that it was impossible, that the typos had left, that the forms were locked up, etc. etc., giving him a dozen reasons that would have satisfied anybody not laboring under Italian opera on the brain. But Doldrum had made up his mind that if the thing were possible it should be done. So he burst into tears, wrung his hands, and exclaimed:-"Wo is me; I am undone!" This melted the managing editor. He raised Doldrum, lent him a clean pocket-handkerchief to wipe his eyes with, sent the printer's devil out to all the neighboring public houses to collect the scattered typos (who had to be paid extra), and had the article set up and printed in that day's paper! Doldrum was converted to the highest pinnacle of earthly bliss, told the managing editor to send up the bill in the course of the day, and promised him a box at the opera forever. The managing editor thought he knew human nature, and opined that an honest heart beat in Doldrum's bosom. So he sent up the bill next day, I say he sent up the bill next day.

That bill was sent up every week regularly for several years, and has never been paid to

The Fifteenth Amendment. Thousands of people were detained for hours yesterday in consequence of the dusky procession of new-made voters parading in the streets. Black and brown belies of every variety of shade and tint were out riding in barouches and filling the street cars. You might almost have thought that New York was populated by colored people, with a few white ones sprinkled in by way of contrast. And those colored people were remarkably jubilant, and the white folks generally were much more tolerant, more sympathetic, than could have been expected, and seemed to agree that the day ought to be considered as a sort of colored Fourth of July. Still it did occur to a large quantity of business men, and others who were retarded in their pursuits, that no procession ought to be allowed to interfere to such an extent with the transaction of public business. All the cars on the west side of the town going north and south were detained for an unseasonable time, and the patience of passengers who had no particular fancy for the show was seriously tested. MAJOR-GENERAL THOMAS. The Obsequies at Troy Yesterday. PREPARATIONS FOR THE PUNERAL.

TROY, April 8 .- With cloudless sky and genial warmth pervading the atmosphere, the day here is all that could be desired for the public demonstration. During the past few days the prepara-tions for the funeral of Major-General Thomas have been conducted by the Common Council committee, consisting of Aldermen Prentice, Don, and Wager, and Citizen's Committee, of which ex-Mayor McCombie is chairman.

General McDowell arrived on Wednesday night and assumed direct charge of the arrangements; and yesterday afternoon General Sherman also arrived and exercised supervisory authority over the preliminary preparations. National representatives and our citizens alike determined that nothing should be left undone that could in any manner contribute to the honor of a fallen chieftain. Troops from New York harbor and vicinity, detailed by General McDowell as an escort, arrived here on the Vanderbilt shortly after seven o'clock this morning. They remained on the boat until the hour assigned for the forming of the procession. These troops comprised six companies, as follows:—Two companies of Engineers from Willett's Point, one hundred men each: one company of 1st Artillery: four companies of 1st United States Artillery, and two companies of General Service Infantry.

THE SERVICES. Bt. Paul's Church, where the exercises took place, was draped with American flags bordered with crape, and emblems of grief met the eye in every part of the edifice. Bishop Doane read the service, and Professor Gay presided at the organ. The musical portion of the exercises consisted of the hymn "Brief is Life," and solo, "I Know that my Redeemer Liveth," from the oratorlo of the Messiah. The procession then formed in the following order and marched to formed in the lonowing cometery: — Officiating solemn music to the cometery: — Officiating holy nall-hearers; Major-Generals clergy, body pall-bearers; Major-Generals Meade, Rosecrans, Schofield, Hooker, Granger, Newton, Hazen; Brigadier-General Mackay, President of the United States, Secretary of War, General of the Army, two bands of music, committee of the Senate of the United States, committee of the House of Representatives, Troops of National Guards, N. Y. and independent military organizations; escort composed of two companies of engineers from Fort Schuyler, and three companies from Fort Columbus, the last numbering fifty men each.

PRESIDENT GRANT AND OTHERS. President Grant, accompanied by Generals Dent and Porter, Secretaries Belknap and Robeson, Postmaster-General Creswell, and the Congressional delegation, arrived in the morn-ing train from New York. President Grant, Senator Fenton, and Generals Dent and Porter are guests of Mr. Francis, of the Troy Times.

Secretary Belknap is stopping with Commodore Prince, the Postmaster-General is with S. B. Saxton, and Secretary Robeson is at the Generals Schofield, Roberts Lowe, McKee, Barrett, Pitcher, Fullerton, Fos-ter, Rice, De Peyster, Barnum, Taylor, Abbott, Marshall, Baine, Newton, and Granger are at the Troy House. Hon. Horace Capron, Commissioner of Agriculture, E. V. Smalley, Clerk of Military Com-mittee of the House of Representatives, A. B. Inderwood, of Boston Custom House, and Dr. J. C. McKee, of the United States Army, are also at the Troy House, Lieutenant Willard, who accompanied the remains of the deceased General from San Francisco to Troy, is a guest of the Mansion House.

BUSINESS SUSPENDED. A large number of stores on Main street were closed during the moving of the procession. The rooms of the Young Men's Association were closed from 11 to 3 o'clock, and business suspended from 11 until 2 o'clock. The post office and other public offices were also closed until after the funeral. The city wears a sombre look; public and private buildings wear the emblems of mourning; the streets are filled with people. and all the morning martial men marched to and fro to the beating of muffled drums, taking their places is the line of the funeral cortege.

THOSE PRESENT. The President, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, Attorney-General, Postmaster-General, General Sherman, Congressional deleration, representatives of the army of the United States, the Governor and Legislature of this State, citizens and dignitaries of all ranks of life, are present to testify the nation's sense of the irreparable loss it has sustained in the death of the man who is to-day consigned with so much solemnity to the grave.
