SELF-GOVERNMENT IN NEW YORK. DEMOCRACY in New York has passed from under the cloud which so long obscured the sunlight. The city was for years so hopelessly Democratic that the Republican party, by virtue of its ascendancy in the rural districts, stripped the overwhelming majority in Gotham of nearly every semblance of power, leaving it only the dispesition of some $18,000,000 per year through the agency of the Common Council and the Board of Supervisors. But at last even Tammany Hall grew tired of the monotony, and by a master-stroke of fraud elevated John T. Hoffman to the gubernatorial chair. With this foothold at Albany once secured, the control of both branches of the State Legislature speedily followed, and the year 1870 opened with Tammany in supreme command of the State. But just at this stage, when the unterrified were anticipating a restoration of the coveted privilege of self-government, there were manifestations of insubordination in the ranks of the country members, and the first charter which Tammany presented to the Legislature was slaughtered in the house of its whilom friends. The New York World led the country phalanx, yclept the "Young Democracy," with John Morrissey and Sheriff O'Brien as its lieutenants, and for a time carried things with a high hand. A compromise charter, patched up in a fashion it is difficult to understand even at this short distance from the scene of conflict, shared the same fate. but when William M. Tweed went inte the charter business on his own personal responsibility and in his own name, he succeeded in framing such a measure as commanded the almost universal approval of both houses of the Legislature, the opposition votes in the Senate numbering but two, and in the lower branch only five.

To one unacquainted with the peculiarities of metropolitan politics, it seemed as if New York city had suddenly become the most virtuous and amiable community on the face of the earth. The lion and the lamb laid down together, the lamb apparently outside of the lion instead of inside, as is usually the case when these two traditional antagonists agree upon a truce. Theoretically, the new charter is as perfect a model of a charter as is our own. The people of New York have again become the fountain of authority and the source of power. The people elect the Council, the Mayor, and two or three of the heads of departments in addition, while all other officials with executive powers are appointed by the Mayor, as the mouthpiece of the sovereign voters whose behest he is supposed to have been elected to obey.

. For the time being, this cumulative patronage is in the hands of A. Oakey Hall, Esq., an elegant young man who fills up his spare moments by seratching off prologues for burlesques and turning an honest penny in the courts. Yesterday Mayor Hall reconstructed New York city in wholesale fashion, and announced his appointments under the new charter. And A. Oakey Hall, Esq., proved himself, in so doing, to be one of the most honorable and generous of public rulers. In his pronunciamento accompanying the announcement of the new city government, he declared that "he would be politically justified by the numerical record of votes upon the legislation which bestowed this responsibility, should he confer every one of the thirty-two appointments solely upon Democrats. But," he continued, "the extraordinary unanimity by which the power was agreed upon appears to create an honorable obligation to respect the political minority of his constituents, so far, at least, as to reappoint a few of his political opponents whose past services to the public additionally deserve the recognition." The phrase "services to the public" is one of sinister import in these degenerate days, and so the people of New York have discovered. Tweed's charter, which went through the Legislature with as much ease and airiness as an avalanche glides down an Alpine slope, has developed into as perfect and beautiful a specimen of "bargain and sale" as has ever been witnessed in the political history of the country. "Every citizen," says oily Mr. Hall, "ought to feel that the policeman, or the fireman, or the health physician, who protects his life or his property, should be freed from party bias and have no political duty to discharge." So the patriotic and public-spirited Mayor reappoints the old Albany Police Board, which stands two and two, "but with the understanding that there is to be a new Democratic executive head as Superintendent." King Kennedy goes out gracefully, before the avalanche reaches the bottom of the valley, and New York awaits the spectacle of an efficient non-partisan police, with a "Democratic executive head"we have such in this city-and a Board of Commissioners behind him equally divided to give him full swing. The new Fire Department stands three Democrats to two Republicans, and the new Health Department five Democrats to three Republicans, and everything is lovely and Democratic so far. So, likewise, is the Department of Charities and Corrections, with three Democrats and two Republicans at its head. "The other three departments," says Mr. Mayor Hall, "are entirely Democratic." And for this reason-"there are some departments, such as the Department of Public Works and of Excise, which require at the Mayor's hands entire respect to party considerations, inasmuch as the one involves large patronage, and the other represents a system almost entirely by one political party"-that is to say, the men who do the heavy Democratic work at the polls must be provided for, without Republican interference; and the men who do drinking bars must not be molested nor made afraid while at their potations. And so New York city is once more its own master, and Democratic from top to bottom. And Mr. Senator Tweed, who brought about this little game, and brought it about so neatly, settles down as sole and solitary head of the Department of Public Works, which, as Mr. Mayor Hall intimates, "involves large patronage;" while Mr. Peter B. Sweeny, the grand mogul of the whole Democratic tribe, has the grace to vacate voluntarily the office of City Chamberlain, worth $80,000 per year, to accept the Presidency of the Board of Public Parks, "perhaps," as the New York World pointedly says, "the most valuable office in the city to a man of Mr. Sweeny's wealth, who can take advantage of the rise of property in the localities to be benefited by the action of that important department." And, neatest and slickest device of all, the functions of City Chamberlain, with $80,000 in annual pickings, fall to the lot of one Bradley, a brother-in-law of Sweeny. Putting it altogether, we fear that those Republican legislators who gave a helping hand to Mr. Tweed's avalanche will in the end discover that they have sold themselves to the individual who bought up Dr. Faustus, soul as well as body.

CRUELTY TO SEAMEN. WE yesterday published an interesting and important general order that had just been issued by the Secretary of the Navy, revoking the sentence of a court-martial in the case of an ordinary seaman named Joseph King, serving on board the United States ship Portsmouth. Secretary Robeson has alluded in forcible terms to the difficulty of obtaining good men for the navy, and to the great importance of making the naval service popular with seamen. He has also shown himself in this and other instances disposed to use his authority to protect the enlisted men from the oppression of their officers, and by so doing he has taken one of the first steps towards making the service popular. It will certainly add to the efficiency of the navy if the enlisted men can be made to feel that their rights will receive from the Secretary proper consideration, and that any attempt at cruelty or illegal punishment on the part of those in authority over them will be promptly checked. In the court-martial case referred to the sentence imposed upon King was remitted by the Secretary, because previous to his trial be had been severely and adequately punished, but in an irregular and cruel manner, and it is intimated plainly that the officers concerned in the matter will be made to feel in a decided manner the displeasure of the head of the department.

The man King appears to have been a goodfor-nothing scoundrel, one of a class of men who enlist in the army or navy in preference to taking their chances of the penitentiary or gallows on shore. His offenses were such as could not be overlooked or allowed to pass without severe punishment-unless by doing away altogether with discipline; and if he had been punished in a proper and legal manner, there would have been few to find fault with the sentence, no matter how severe it might have been. But the principle that a man may be punished two or three times for the same offense, and at the discretion of angry officers who have been the objects of his personal abuse, cannot be countenanced in the navy or anywhere else under a free government.

| National House of Representatives to put a stop to such performances by providing that no citizen of the United States shall be required to write, print, or place his name on any ballot, or to do anything whereby the identity or name of any person casting the ballot may be known; and fur-ther, making the printing or writing of a voter's name on the outside of the ballot a crime, punishable by a fine of $1000 and one month's imprisonment. This is a proper measure, and it ought to be promptly passed by both houses of Congress. The Democrats are certainly in a tight place when they are obliged to descend to such contemptible practices as this, and they will do themselves more credit and their party more service by promptly accepting the fifteenth amendment and its consequences than by trying to obstruct its operations by such mean tricks, which will not avail them in the least, and which will only have the effect of making the negroes cast their votes with a greater unanimity than over against them.

King it seems applied the most abusive and foul-mouthed epithets to the captain, executive officer and others on several occasions; he tried to desert, and when arrested in the act of desertion he brandished a boathook and threatened the officers who arrested him.

All this, however, offers no excuse for the officers of the Portsmouth, who took the law in their own hands, in the first place, by confining him in double irons on bread and water for thirty days, with loss of pay for three months and extra police duty for three months; by confining him in the launch of the Portsmouth with his feet ironed to a ringbolt, his hands in irons, exposed to the burning rays of the sun, he being forced to remain in that position without food or drink for a number of hours, after which he was gagged and placed in a sweat-box until his health was so affected that medical treatment was necessary.

The laws of Congress for the better government of the navy, and the regulations issued by the Secretary under those laws, prohibit in express terms nearly every mode of punishment adopted in this case; and the officers who perpetrated the outrage have done much more than the miserable wretch who was in their power to impair the discipline and efficiency of the naval service. They are supposed to be intelligent and enlightened gentlemen, and they have no excuse whatever for violating the laws; and it is to be hoped that Secretary Robeson will take measures to have them punished as they deserve. The sentence of the court-martial in the case of Lieutenant-Commander Seely, to which we had occasion to allude not many weeks ago, shows that there is an indisposition in naval courts-martial to do exact justice when officers are accused of cruelty to the men under their command; and the Secretary owes it to the service and to the country to exert all his power to have an example made in this case that will serve as a perpetual warning to officers who are disposed to transgress the laws.

THE LEGISLATURE of Virginia, with a view of intimidating the colored voters and to obstruct them in their rights at the ballot-box, recently passed a bill providing that the name of every voter shall be printed on his ballot. This is an outrageous violation of the first principle of our system of voting by ballot, by which the right of every citizen to keep his vote a secret is secured to him; and as it was passed by the Virginia Legislature for no other purpose than to deprive the negroes of their rights, and to bring them as much as possible under the domination of their former masters, we are glad to see that Mr. Lawrence, the heavy Democratic work in front of the | of, Ohio, yesterday introduced a bill in the | PRICE.
