

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

THE FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT.

The Democrats Anxious to Obtain the Negro Vote—The Fifth Ward Minority... The colored people are anxious to see the Fifteenth Amendment...

Although a portion of the Democratic party are yet disposed to believe in the existence of slavery and refuse to acknowledge the fact of their having once owned such a thing as a Rebellion and Proclamation of Emancipation...

The difficulty principally experienced was that the "bloody negroes" do not take kindly to the Church of Rome, for if they did there would then be no trouble in making matters between the Irishmen and the Africans, or American Africans, the fact being patent to the former that whoever believes in the rule of Pio Nono is a saint, he be white or black.

The men who have ambitious designs at length determined to make a bold attempt, let the consequences be what they might, and the result was the "highly-colored speech" delivered some weeks ago before the existing Democratic Association of Pennsylvania by "the Byrnes."

As an innovator in the affairs of a time seemed to meet with favor, but at length murmurs began to fill the air, and the ambitious ones found that, to use a slang expression, "they had put their foot in it."

But alas for human expectations! the rank and file would not give up their old hatred, and, in preference, allowed the ancient Democratic Association of Pennsylvania to sink into a dis-honored grave.

The power that had hitherto proven most potent was now to be used for other more determined to turn. The demon alcohol had heretofore purchased not only men's votes but men's souls, and as yet it had not lost its demagogical spell.

For years past, ever since boyhood, a negro named Nick Brown has been connected with the Fourth ward Democrats, has shared their joys and mingled in their sorrows...

Reporter—How long has he been in business? Colored Chap—About two weeks. The Fourth ward following him up. He's got plenty of money now. Don't tend bar any more. Used to tend bar at Glenn's, Sixth and Chestnut streets; but he keeps a better class of white men with him than they do at Glenn's.

Deciding his polite invitation, we continued:—Do you know the boys go there? Colored Chap—Well, no, not yet; but then he's got lots of friends.

Reporter—Does he ever talk politics? Colored Chap—Oh, yes, he's a good Democrat, and the Democrats were always his friends. He always supported him and his brother Jim. You know, used to keep the Delmonico; his wife keeps it now.

Reporter—Does he ever talk politics? Colored Chap—Oh, yes, he's a good Democrat, and the Democrats were always his friends. He always supported him and his brother Jim.

Reporter—What do you people think of his work- ing at the general? Colored Chap—Oh, I don't know. These other fellows (tavern keepers) around here don't like him, nor do they want to do with him.

Reporter—Have you ever seen any one called Mc- millan in the neighborhood? Colored Chap—De fellow what I told you about that spent $20, de said he was de Alderman. I don't know him, but den Nick and him's pretty chum.

Reporter—Is there a Democratic Headquarters about here? Colored Gentleman—Yes, that's the house, pointing to No. 605.

Reporter—What is his character? Colored Gentleman—Deed I don't know. I know he has run with them "Moya" fellows ever since he was a boy; used to get up cock fights and dog fights and rat matches, and when there no other colored man dared go, some years ago.

Reporter—That does not show a very high char- acter. Colored Gentleman—Why the man never had no character. He has always been a low fellow, ready to do anything "them fellows" tell him, and now he has sold himself and is trying to get in to vote the Democratic ticket; but taint no use; he ain't doing himself any good, and he'll find when election day comes around that he's sold his soul for nothing.

Reporter—What sort of a fellow is he? Colored Chap—Oh, he's a first-rate fellow; perfect gentleman, sociable, friendly, and perfect gemmen.
