GENERALITIES.

Social Privileges. The practical questions of social privileges involved in the Civil Rights bill have never been tested in Maryland. Into the city rallroad cars in Baltimore a negro is not allowed to enter: he must stand outside upon the platform, if he rides at all. An attempt was made to put this matter to the test of the law on the 12th instant. A celored citizen, accompanied by two white men, seated himself in a car, and declined to be put out unless by force, which the conductor did not attempt, the colored man being deaf to mere remonstrances. But as the President of the railroad company has since admonished conductors to follow out the old rules and expel colored persons attempting to occupy seats, it is supposed that nothing but experience at the hands of the law will awaken common sense or decent humanity among the horse-car officials of Baltimore. Let them take advice from the rich corporations of the kind in other places, who yielded this point of prejudice some years

Romance in Real Life. A little romance of a sprained ankle comes from St. Louis, in which a young clerk, a young lady school-teacher, and a dog are the leading features. The clerk and the school-teacher, it appears from previous concatenation of circumstances, had fallen desperately in love. One evening, as the couple were proceeding to church, a ferocious dog jumped over a fence and "went for" the lady. Here was a chance for chivalry, and the young man gallantly im-Throwing himself in front of his fair one he gave the attacking monster a blow which sent him flying with yelps of ignominious young man fell and spfained his ankle. It was now the turn for womanly heroism to display itself. The school-teacher was a girl with no nonsense about her. She at once ordered a back, helped her lover in accompanied him to his room, bathed and dressed his ankle, watched over him all night, and naturally enough went for a friend and minister next day, and married her man in the evening. could be a more satisfactory termination of the story than this?

A New El Derado. Montana, with a celightful climate of a mean temperature, similar, with a smaller range of variation, to Philadelphia, or St. Joseph, Mo., offers great advantages to immigrants. sesses abundance of large timber, principally pine, fir, cedar, and hemlock; yields of wheat 50, of oats 75 to 100, and of potatoes 300 to 400 bushels to the acre. No better pasturage for horses, cattle, and sheep can be found throughout the year. Hogs and hens find abundant food Beneath the surface there is bituminous coal, brick clay, fire clay, iron and copper, gold and silver quartz, while placer mining yet remains profitable to those who have not facilities for penetrating deeply the bowels of the earth. There is room there for women as well as for men; good housekeepers receive from $75 to $100, and ordinary kitchen servanta $50 to $75 per month; and we are told that "to-day immi-grants will find in Montana all the comforts, conveniences, and many of the luxuries of a high civilization, with comparatively no hard-

The Grentest Organ in the World. The following particulars respecting the new London organ, said to be the largest in the world, we find in the musical column of the Independent:- "The organ just finished, and new putting together for the new Royal Albert Hall of Arts and Sciences, in London, will probably take rank as the largest in the world. is constructed, under the supervision of Sir Michael Costa, by Willis, the builder of the famous organ in St. George's Hall, Liverpool, and cost £10,000, or about the same as the great organ in the Boston Music Hall. In the comparison of organs, figures are always more or less deceptive. An instrument of 50 registers may be really larger and more powerful than one of 75, and ingenious mechanical appliances (in which the Boston organ is peculiarly rich) may produce all the effect and variety which used to be obtained by the multiplication of sounding stops We presume, however, that few of the modern improvements have been overlooked by Mr. Willis in this new master-work. It has 111 complete registers and 188 draw-stops. The other great organs of the world are those at Ulm, with 100 registers; Prague, 73; Lubeck, 82; Frankfort-on-the-Main, 74; Rotterdam, 92; Haarlem, 60; Freiburg, 61; St. Eustache, in Paris, 67; St. Sulpice, Paris, 66; St. George's, Doncaster, 86; St. George's Hall, Liverpool, 100; Boston, 84. In variety and brilliancy none of these, perhaps, is superior to the Boston ergan. Some points of comparison between that and the new Lendon instrument are given in the following tables

Great manual 23 registers 25 registers
Choir manual 14 registers 20 registers
Sweil manual 16 registers 25 registers
Solo manual 11 registers 20 registers 20 registers Weight 65 tons combination pedals and pistons. Those of the Boston instrument are not so numerous, but they are arranged on a peculiar plan, which enables the performer to effect an extraordinary variety of coa, binations with a very few knobs. The tone of the new organ, so far as it has been tried, is said to be admirable, and the mechani cal action is described as a marvel of perfection.
