MEW-YORKISMS.

m Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, May 19, 1870.

The May Anniversaries. For the past few days all the little male and emale Samuel Wokes in the city have been agiated on the subject of new dresses, street processions, and afternoon festivals. The regular May anniversaries have been celebrated in spite of the weather, and the thoroughfares have been sprinkled with little girls in white muslin, blue sashes, and crimped hair. It is a pretty fight, these long lines of cleanly dressed children, hung with flowers and gay ribbons, carrying banners, singing song and hymn, and chaperoned by solemn young men and women, who look Dr. Watts out of one eye and the Shorter Catechism out of the other. We need the pure and balmy breath of young children in these sad election times, and perhaps it would not be too poetic to hope that the sight of them stirred some memory of better days in the hearts of repeaters. These May festivals are a gracious celebration of the fairest time of the year, and some spiritual influence is wafted from them like the bloom-dust from a flower.

Free Love and the Sorosia. It would be unfair to say that a majority of the members of the Sorosis approve of the doctrines of George Sand, and recommend that promiscuousness in love which the great French novelist has all her life preached. Nevertheless, one or two of its speakers do lean towards free love, and never exemplified their tendencies more thoroughly than when dwelling upon the McFarland-Richardson case. One of them at least is understood to have been married to two men, both of whom are now living, and yet the lady holds a conspicuous position among spotless women who would never be suspected of living unhappily with their own husbands were it not that they figure so prominently before the public. The woman who is happy at speech-making is usually unhappy at home.

A Horrid Man. Every student of classical history knows that something happened to a young man who was so eager to penetrate the Eleusinian mysteries that he disguised himself as a woman and trusted to his smooth cheeks to carry him through. An attempt similar to this was made by a youth who, induced by curlosity and the hope of good pay, rigged himself out as a young lady, and, with his masculinity closely disguised from boot to chignon, visited Apollo Hall to listen to Mrs. Stanton's lecture addressed to "women only." The disguise was a complete success, and to it the newspaper-reading world is indebted for full accounts of the meeting. Towards the close of the meeting, it is true that a gentleman, in male attire, was discovered sitting near the door, but by that time Mrs. Stanton had said her say, and all her verbal percussion caps had gone off. One thing was very noticeable, and that was that the principal speakers, all of whom, of course, were ladies, were visibly embarrassed, but this was accounted for from the fact that it was the first occasion on which any of them had spoken to an audience composed exclusively of their own sex. You will agree with me that the timidity was natural. It is so much easier for a woman to stand up and harangue a trousers-wearing audience. Among the audience were some women who are distinguished, some who are notorious, and a good many whose brains are natural vacuums to which Fashion has shown her abhorrence by alling them up. It was to the discernment of Miss Anthony, however, that the discovery of a man present was due. The married ladies on hand, knowing all about the horrid creature, were thrown off their guard from the very fact of being so familiar with him, and Miss Anthony's announcement fell among them like a bomb. The creature attempted no resistance, but meekly went away. The result of the meeting was that an emendation was made to those passages in the Bible which specify the sufficient cause for divorce, and several improvements upon Holy Writ were agreed upon. Crinoline is getting out an improved and more liberal commentary upon the Scriptures, and between them the suffrage women and Sorosis

The Gottschalk Fund. Considerable attention is attracted in fashion able up-town circles in regard to the performance that is to take place on Saturday night, at the Union League Club Theatre, in behalf of the Gottschalk fund. A special interest is felt in the fact that in the operetta Les Forces de Jeannette, the principal part will be taken by Miss Emily Schaumberg, of your city.

may be expected to edit a new gospel of divorce.

Prospect Park Tournament. On Saturday and the ensuing Tuesday a tournament is to be held at Prospect Park Fair Grounds, near Brooklyn. Twenty knights are to ride. Four of them hall from Maryland, four from Virginia, four from the District of Columbia, and the remainder from New York and Philadelphia. No less than eight prizes are to be given. Two of them are fine Kentucky riding horses, valued at $500 each, one of which will be the first prize on each day. The second, third, and fourth prizes will consist of gold watches, diamond studs, and sleeve-buttons. The knights were busy practising yesterday, and will be to-day and to-morrow, and until 2 in the afternoon of Saturday, when the tournament is to commence. The ring at which they are to tilt is suspended from an arch thrown across the track, and is one and three-quarters of an inch in diameter. Some of the best riding of the kind ever seen will be witnessed, and the entire affair is something similar to the tournament held in one of the suburbs of Washington city some years ago. The "Lyre."

I perceive that a new paper (another new one!) is to be started in this city under the appellation of the Lyre. If report speak truly, the orthoppy of this title was originally meant to be "Liar," and the principle upon which it was to be issued was that no responsibility was to be acknowledged for whatever appeared in its columns. Its very title gave it the opportunity of stating with impunity the most audacious contradictions, and consequently it was intended to enjoy a freedom, an impersonality, and an unaccountability never before enjoyed by any periodical publication. Apparently there is abundant room for as many new papers as sanguine editors choose to indulge them-

Heinpen Hatr.

The growing use of hemp for false hair is introducing a new disease of the scalp amongst wemen who want to be fashionable, but who have not the means. For instance, a switch of genuine human hair would cost seventy-five dollars, a hempen imitation can be purchased for one-twenty-fifth that price, and the silly thing who pays three dollars for tresses made out of jute imagines the fraud to be incapable of detection. By this means she only places her own scalp in danger; for this jute, which meets with so large a sale in the New York market, is often packed on board ship in a very uncleanly manner, and its filaments retain all sorts of fevrous elements. If its use is persisted | in, and the jute is of very inferior quality, the hemp upon the head is almost as sure an instrument of death as the hemp which makes the halter. It is a little slower - that is all. Alas! how many a woman has fallen a victim to her bair! As a general rule, it may be said that the more follicles close up on the feminine head, the more folly expands in the teminine heart.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The City Amusements. AT THE WALNUT the drama of Not Gully will be represented this evening, with all its original sensational effects. AT THE ARCH the drama of Fritz, Our Cousin German, will be performed this evening, with Mr. Emmett in the leading role. AT THE ELEVENTH STREET OPERA HOUSE an entertaining programme of minstrelay will be presented this evening. THE PENNSYLVANIA POLYTECHNIC AND ANA-TOMICAL MUSEUM, at No. 1205 Chesnut street, is now open with an interesting collection of curiosities.

A CONCERT will be given this evening at Musical Fund Hall by the West Philadelphia Choral Society.

A DIALOGUE IN WALL STREET. It is a vulgar error to suppose that the habitars of Wall street converse about nothing but stocks and gold. Sometimes they talk about their health; and they all seem to have one troublemess. The wear and tear of speculation invariable

FROM BALTIMORE.

The Fitteenth Amendment.

Baltimore, May 12.—The colored citizens of Baltimore are to-day celebrating the fifteenth amendment by a grand procession and other suitable demonstrations. The procession formed on Broadway, East Baltimore, and after marching through various streets, and passing through Baltimore westwardly, reached South street at 11-25, and was one hour passing the Western Union Pelegraph Company's office. The number in the procession is variously estimated at 8000 to 12,000.

In the first carriage in the procession were the Hons. Horace Maynard and John B. Stokes, of Tennessee, and General H. H. Heath, of New Mexico. Frederick Douglass was in the second carriage. The Fitteenth Amendment.

Most of the Government officials of the city, Colhector, Postmaster, Surveyor, Naval Officer, and Internal Revenue officers were in the line. Among the more prominent civillans were C. C. Fulton, Esq., and Hon. Wm. J. Albert, Military and civic organizations, and benevolent institutions, Masons and Odd Fellows, and different trades and ciphs were represented.

Masons and Odd Fellows, and different trades and clubs, were represented.

Among the military represented were the Butler Zouaves and Boys in Blue, Fioneer Corps of Washington, Knights Templar of Washington representatives from the Excelsior Brigade of Philadelphia, and large delegations representing organizations of various parts of the State. There were seven full bands in the procession, besides a number of dram corps, and a number of portraits of distinguished men borne by different delegations—that of Henry Winter Davis with the motto "The iron hand that held Maryland to her allegiance;" that of William Lloyd Garrison, "The Liberator has at last been heard;" that of Thaddeus Stevens, "Rece Homo." The procession is now passing through the streets, The procession is now passing through the streets, and so far the most orderly quiet has prevailed.

CONGRESS.

The war grew out of a systematic violation of individual rights by States: It ended by national protection of individual pights in the States. The necessity for the bill was manifest in the sudden and violent change in the condition of the colored race of the South from slavery to liberty. Some provision was necessary to secure them against the dictation of their former masters. The Senator from Maryland (Mr. Hamilton) and argued that the constitutional amendment prohibing certain powers to States conferred no new power upon Congress, but overlooked the fact that in the lifteenth amendment the provision was expressed that Congress reserved the right to enforce it by appropriate legislation. The bill was in accordance with that provision: but, if ever so perfect, it would be objected to by Democrats upon old proslavery and State-rights principles, because the bill limited the power of a State to deprive a man of his rights. He (Mr. Schurz) would give the State governments as much power as was compatible with the General Government. He was strenuously opposed to all undus accumulation of powers in the General Government, and still more to all centralization of administrative functions, and thought the Republican party would do well to direct rather than resist the current of popular opinion on that question. The revolution had not abolished the legitimate anhere of State rights. If his Democratic friends would dispense with legislation like that now proposed, they would advise their friends in the South to act fairly with the colored man and not run themseves by vainly resisting the inevitable. This would accomplish much more for self-government than all their lugubrious maledictions, and would materially improve their chances of success.

Mr. Pool then took the floor.

House. The American people no more wanted St. Domingo than they had wanted Alaska—an art tut one degree removed from actual insanity. If the Government were to establish a naval station at St. Domingo it would have to establish a pay equal in power to that of any other nation. Otherwise such naval station would be an element of weakness, and not of strength. navy could in power to that of any other nation. Otherwise such navalatation would be an element of weakness, and not of strength.

In case of war with any of the great maritime nation St. Domingo would be immediately wrested from the United States, unless it had a navy equal in force to defend it; besides it would add largely to the expenses of the United States to govern the Island, and he did not believe that the people we a willing to be taxed for any such purpose. It St. Domingo were to be taken it would have to be taken with all its incumbrances.

The United States would have to pay its public debt. That debt was represented as only $1,500,000, but Baez had issued national bonds amounting to more than $15,000,000, some putting the amount as high as $20,000,000. Why cid they want it. Domingo? It would be an element of weakness, not of strangth, even if the United States could set it without taking charge of a civil war there. The experiment of ar nexing St. Domingo had been tried by Spain, with what result would be seen by an article which he read from a late number of the New York Sin. Having disposed of the St. Domingo question, Mr. Kelsey proceeded to criticise the whole system of making estimates and appropriating public money, which he characterized as defe tive, losse, and extravagans. Referring to the recent elections in New York, he was not surprised at the increase of the Domicratic party there, as more than half the Federal patroning there was given to the adberents of Tammany Hall.

Mr. Woodward asked him whether any administration could be more intelerant than the process one?
