MEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, May 21, 1870.

Feminine Book Peddlers. There are some things few men can resist. One of them is buying from a feminine book peddler a book he don't want. He is conscious of having a small library of good books at nome; he believes he has some taste in literary matters; he can illy afford to throw away the price that is asked, but in spite of the prudent conclusion to which his logic inevitably conducts him, his gallantry as an American proves too much for him, and he shells out the stipulated stamps. Your feminine book peddler is irresistible, in the same sense that the widow was irresistible who waited on the unjust judge. You listen to her because of her importunity. You don't want her book and you are not pleased with her manner. Her "ckeek" is offensive to you, and the habit she has of smuggling herself into your private editorial apartments and buttenholing you alone in your den is highly exasperating. She generally belongs to that class of people who would have one believe they have seen better days. Certainly her clothes have. The New York species are extremely pertinacious. The female book-peddler of Gotham carries round with her a little subscription-book, in which she requests the names of editors after having worried from them gratuitous notices. The name once given means two dellars down, and unless you broadly state that you desire to be left alone she will talk to you for an hour at a time. If she is young and you are young, of course your fate is doubly sealed, for your gallantry is goaded to the point of desperation by the spectacle of a good-looking woman in distress. At any rate, it is a paying business for the woman and a losing business for you.

Man and Wife. As a pleasing example of how parties are occasionally made man and wife, take the following incident, which happened in this city only a day or two ago. It has been erroneously stated that the ceremony took place at French's Hotel, whereas it was celebrated at the Fifth Avenue, and in one of the most stylish parlors there. In the morning of that day a well-dressed stranger entered a certain notorious drinking-saloon not a hundred miles from that hotel, and, after taking a drink, asked the barkeeper whether he knew of any one who would do a quiet piece of business and keep dark about it, on cendition of being well paid. The bar-keeper, after casting about for a little, said he thought he knew just such a person, and in a few minutes produced his man, of whom the stranger took a prolonged This was evidently satisfactory, for the two men put their heads together, and the stranger explained that he wanted some one to personate a clergyman and perform a marriage ceremony, and that he would give fifty dollars to have the work done well. The individual who proposed to assume the character said he thought he should give satisfaction, and proposed to be known as the Rev. Mr. Smith. He further explained that he must have a clerk to assist him, and that the clerk would be ten dollars extra. To this also the stranger assented, and Mr. Smith having found his accomplice, all three repaired to the bar of the Fifth Avenue Hotel and took Scotch ale, absinthe, and pony brandy. They then went upstairs to a room on the third floor overlooking Madison Square, the stranger on his way up presenting Mr. Smith with a Prayer-book, and informing him that he wished him to perform the ceremony of marriage between him and a woman with whom he had been living two years, but who had grown scrupulous since the McFarland-Richardson denouement. Mr. Smith was obviously not playing a villain's part for the first He did not appear taken by surprise, but promised that he would perform his duties satisfactorily. They then entered the room, where a pale, beautiful lady was sitting, with a profusion of blonde hair, and an anxious expression on her features. "This is the lady," said the stranger. The lady bowed, so did the two villains, and the marriage ceremony proceeded. After it was over the stranger handed Mr. Smith thirty dollars, having already given him half the stipulated sum before the ceremony commenced, when the bargain was first struck. Next morning man and wife departed for the West, and are supposed at this present moment to be in Indiana.

Diamond Dentistry. It is rumored that an extravagant fashion has been invented by certain madmen in the uppermost circles of society, who have more money than they know what to do with. This is none other than that of having diamonds set into one's teeth! I have heard of teeth being likened to a row of pearls before, but I never imagined that dental jewelry would become a mere matter-of-fact, I suppose the girl in the fairy tale who dropped diamonds from her mouth whenever she talked must have resorted to some such artifice as this. The settings got loose and the jewels dropped out.

One of Her Own Sex. Virtuous women are not always remorseless against those of their sex who are imprudent. Mrs. Richardson, for instance, has plenty of friends amongst good and noble women. I myself have heard one of the purest women and brightest writers in New York plead strenuously with a prominent editor in defense of that unhappy woman, and beg him not to lift his pen against her. This fair pleader had never seen Mrs. Richardson, and knew nothing about her but what she had read in the newspapers, but she believed in her innocence and purity, and felt that even were she as bad as certain organs tried to make her out, she had suffered sufficiently to compensate for it all. Nor was the pleader's voice lifted in vain, for before she left the newspaper office the cynical man of the pen had relented and pro-mised that for that day at least nothing should be said against that imprudent but unhappy woman.

Decoration Day. Strange as it may seem, there are some people who disapprove of the solemn observances of Decoration Day, and would, if they could, scratch the 30th of May from the category of public holidays. They affect to believe that the interest manifested is not deep and vital; that it is merely the occasion for floral trifling and flirtation. Let such cynics say what they will, the fact remains that Decoration Day has struck its roots deep and wide throughout the community. Magnificent preparations are making in this city for its observance. There will be solemn music and the distribution of the fairest and most expensive flowers the season furnishes, and there is not a graveyard where a soldier lies buried but what will be wreathed until it sends forth heavy breaths of fragrance.

City Hall Park. They have commenced beautifying City Hall Park. They have dug up about twenty square feet of earth and laid it out beautifully to dry. This comprises the amount of horticultural labor that has as yet been bestowed upon that paradise. Meanwhile the sidewalks are soaked with mud, and the pedestrian picks his way with fear and trembling.

The Tammanv. The theatre known as Tammany has undergone a reform. Cigars and drinks have been banished and the stands for drinkables affixed to the back of every seat are empty. At best, however, the Tammany is a very dreary place of entertainment. The programmes are fearfully long and the ballet-dresse wonderfully short. Encores are repeated to the half-dozenth time, and athletic artists feed themselves with their toes and transact other triumphs of genius. Every kind of miscellaneous entertainment been tried there and none have succeeded. ALI BABA.

COMPOUND OXYGEN TREATMENT .- We notice that Dr. Hartwell, so long and favorably known in Philadelphia as the originator and dispenser of the Compound Oxygen TREATMENT, has transferred his entire interest and busi ness in this city to G. R. Starkey, A. M., M. D. If the business must needs change hands, we are glad that it has fallen into those of one so competent and reliable as Dr. S. That the Compound Oxygen is a wonderful curative agent is evidenced by hundreds of persons who from hopeless states of disease have been restored to genuine health. Three out of every four persons who are able to visit him he is confident of being able to cure.

All Pulmonary and Digestive disorders yield with won derful rapidity. Ozena, or offensive Catarrh, that loath some affection, can be promptly cured.
