-The first action in the Fenian invasion occurred yesterday. The raiders, under the command of General O'Neill, crossed the frontier opposite Franklin, Vt., and had a skirmish with a body of Canadian troops, several of the invaders being killed and wounded. During the fight, General O'Neill was arrested by United States Marshal Foster and taken back to St. Albans, where he was arraigned before the United States Commissioner for violation of the neutrality laws, and sent to Burlington, to be committed in default of $20,000 bail. The arrest of O'Neill is confirmed by official despatches received at headquarters of the Military Division of the Atlantic in this city last night. Fenian bands were reported at other points, but there is no news of their crossing. The Canadian authorities are rapidly sending troops forward to defend the border. Detachments of United States troops are also arriving on the American slde.

-In the United States Senate, after the close of our report yesterday, Mr. Trumbull, from the Judiciary Committee, reported the Apportionment bill with amendments; also the biil regulating judicial proceedings. The report of the conference committee on the bill to enforce the fifteenth amendment was adopted. The Legislative Appropriation bill was considered, pending which the Senate adjourned.

In the House the Northern Pacific Railroad bill was reported back. The main question

A GERMAN VIEW OF THE DUTCH AT HOME.

A recent visitor to Holland, Karl Braun, of Wiesbaden, contributes to the pages of the Gartenlaube some lively sketches of Dutch life, a few facts from which may be new and interesting to our readers. On landing at Rotterdam his first meal consists of a super-eminently good beefsteak. He praises this to the waiter, as in honor and gratitude bound, and is informed that the canny Dutch always keep their grass-fed cattle for their own consumption or to set before the guests who do them the honor of a visit; whereas those they send to the English market are animals nourished in the alcoholic distilleries at Schiedam, etc.

Herr Braun's observations on Dutch beds (not tulip beds) introduce us to a new branch of comparative philosophy. The Datch bed, he savs, is very much larger, and therefore more comfortable, than the German bed. Of the convenience of the latter, in some parts of Germany especially, he has touching plaints to make. He was at Weimar once, and, expostulating with his landlady in the morning about the narrowness of the precincts to which his recumbent body had been consigned, was taken to see the sleeping apartment once occupied by the poet Schil-ler. "I felt ashamed," he says, with touching candor, "when I beheld the miserable little garret in which our great poet had dwelt, and the narrow board on which he had slept, and which in my opinion euphemistical injustice only could have called a bed!" From Weimar he on that occasion travelled south. Bad beds accompanied him till he got quit of the German tongue, and descended from the dolomite mountains into the Italian Tyrol. At Cortina d'Ampezzo his bed was as wide as that at Rotterdam. Such beds, he says, are still to be found in the princely residences in Germany, and in a few patrician and peasant domiciles which have survived social disorder and revolution. But for the most part they have vanished. The more sordid ideas of a prevailing middle class came in with the decline of the old aristocracy which set in from the sixteenth century, and which the prosperity of the nineteenth-century burghery is only now replacing. Now, then, for a re-turn to better domestic accommodations, and, above all, to larger beds! We look upon Herr Braun's philosophy in this matter as perverted. With us in England, luxurious as are our house arrangements, small beds are surely gaining the day on the spacious "fourposters" in which our ancestors delighted. A soldier's habits are perhaps exceptional; but Schiller could scarcely have died on a smaller bed than did the Duke of Wellington, or even, in another land, Nicholas I, Czar of all the Russias!

The Dutch ladies find a resource against the disagreeable damp chills of their climate in the habitual use of the "stoofje," an earthen vessel filled with hot coals, and having five holes at the top through which the heat ascends. The "stoofje" is an article of rich and varied ornament as well as of use among the wealthy classes; but the poorest washerwoman and serving-maid have their "stoofje," and to do without it would seem to be as impossible for them as for the habitual smoker to do without his pipe or cigar. The indulgence, however, would seem to have some bad effects on the health, and some are disposed to ascribe to it the Dutchwoman's want of walking power.

On the ordinary personal qualities-or "humors," as our old writers would say-of the typical Dutchman, our author has some quaint remarks to make. He is struck by the mixture of great solidity and sedateness. with a turn for practical jokes of a childish and somewhat clumsy description, which the character usually embodies, and in which he is reminded of the whimsical contrasts once observable in the life of the Middle Agessuch contrasts as "where, in one and the selfsame church, would be witnessed to-day the practice of the most rigid self-mortifying asce icism, to-morrow the celebration of some wild, grotesque, licentious Feast of Asses." The Germans are to the Dutch, in Herr Braun's views, like a daring go-ahead nephew, who seeks his fortune in the wide world without much respect to the opinions of his old-fashioned uncle at home, but gets credit and success notwithstanding, of which the uncle is not a little proud, despite of himself. The piece of musical clock-work which usually graces the centre of a Dutchman's dinner-table, and whose performances, alter-nately with the recital of poetry, were only a short time back and are still in old-fashioned houses the favorite social entertainment, testifies to the same heavy-sportiveness of the national taste. No doubt much room is still left on the banks of the Zuyder Zee for the modifying influences of French plasticity and German inspiration. Herr Braun's paper in the last number of the Gartenlaube is the first instalment only of what promises to be a pleasant and instructive portraiture of na-tional modes and manners. He adverts briefly to the education question, on which, as in other countries, war is being waged between the denominationalist and undenominationalist parties. The latter, he considers, have a strong position on the platform of local self-government.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE ASSEMBLY.

The Proceedings Yesterday Afternoon.

The Presbyterian General Assembly reconvened at 31 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The entire session was occupied with the discussion on the ratio of representation, many delegates insisting on the number of churches constituting the basis of representation, and not the number of ministers, which would include those without charges. The debate was participated in by the foreign delegates-Professor Blackie, of Scotland, Drs. McLeod and Edmond, of Ireland, and Dr. Arnot, of Edinburgh-but no action was reached at the time of adjournment.

Reception of the Foreign Delegates.

In the evening the church was crowded to suffocation, every available spot having been tilled even before the exercises commenced. The services were opened with singing, which the entire audience united in, causing the most impressive and imposing effect. The Moderator then called on a member to lead in prayer, during which, notwithstanding the size of the congregation, the utmost silence prevailed. After prayer, a formal reception of the foreign delegates took place, the Moderator welcoming them in an appropriate address, at the close of which Rev. Dr. Arnot, one of the foreign delegates, addressed the audience, expressing his gratitude for the warmth of feeling shown the dele-gates from a distance, and alluding in elo-quent terms to the pleasure they had expe-rienced while attending the deliberations of the Assembly. The remarks of Dr. Arnot were continued at great length. He was followed by Professor William G.

Blackie, of the same Church, by Dr. Robert Watts, and Mr. Thomas Sinclair, of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, who spoke less lengthily and elaborately than Dr. Arnot, but all expressive of the same cordial feelings of Christian fraternity and hearty rejoicing over the rennion.

The Moderator (Dr. Backus) responded cordially, welcoming the strangers to our shores, and reciprocating all the kindly feelings that had been expressed.

-The Montreal Witness learns from parties conversant with the condition of that city that there are between two and three thousand dwellings standing vacant, representing a dimi-nution of population to the extent of from ten to fifteen thousand persons. This shows that the emigration to the United States is still continued. It is not unusual for 200 French Canadians to go off in a single day from the Bonarenture Station.

An Old Writer on "The Girls." In the present day, when women take no thought of dress, never complain of their condition, and altogether preserve such a modest retirement, it is pleasant not only to mark the improvement which has taken place in their habits, but also the increased sympathy shown for their wrongs and sorrows, since Burton, in his "Anatomy of Melancholy," made the following unjustifiable and horrible revelations:---

Why do they decorate themselves with artificial flowers, the various colors of herbs, needleworks of exquisite skill, quaint devices, and perfume their persons, wear inestimable riches in precious stones, crown themselves with gold and silver, use coronets and tiaras of various fashions, deck them-selves with pendants, bracelets, earrings, chains, girdles, pins, rings, spangles, embroideries, shadows, ribadoes, versicolor rib-bands? Why do they make such glaring shows with their scarfs, feathers, fans, masks, furs, laces, tiffanies, ruffs, frills, calls, cuffs, damasks, velvets, tissets, cloth of gold, silver tissue ? Such setting up with sarks, straitening with whalebone, why it is but as a day net catcheth larks, to make young ones stoop unto them. And when they are disappointed they dissolve into tears, which they wipe away like sweat; weep with one eye, laugh with the other, or as children weep and cry, they can both together; and as much pity is to be taken of a woman weeping as of a goose going barefoot.
