NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, May 37, 1870.

How He Loved Her. He did not love her very much. That was plain, or he never would have behaved with such heartlessness. Her name was Isabella McWilliams; his Bartholomew Flynn. She was an upper domestic with a pretty taste in dress, and an ambition to attire herself regardless of expense. He-no one appears to know what he was beyond the fact that he was a plausible and deceitful man, who laid slege to the heart of Miss Isabella and carried it by storm. He swore that her age was no objection-that in fact her being twenty years older than him was a mere trifle, a bagatelle. He told her that they were formed for one another, and that, marriages being made in heaven, there was no reason why they should not consummate one upon earth. He told her that he loved her, and she, poor soul! believing him, lent him twenty-five dollars out of the Little All she had managed to save, for she belonged to that interesting class of domestics who manage always to have a Little All on hand in a savings bank. He made her believe that he intended to invest this sum in furniture wherewith to partially hide the nakedness of the rooms they would move into when they should be married. Time went one and Bartholomew went off. But he had not been one of those who never told their love. He had told it so often that Isabella took it as a matter of course, just as he had taken her twenty-five dollars. The day that was to have seen them married came, but no marriage took place. Bartholomew backed out. It was in vain Isabella wept and scolded. The tears made her eyes look red, and the tirade produced a similar effect upon her cheeks. To the insolvent lover she looked as though she would flame up into an undesirable wife. At first he used gentle negatives. Finding these only irritated without subduing, he finally told her squarely that he didn't intend to "throw himself away upon an old thing like her." This was the last drop to a cup that had already commenced to overflow, and Isabella did what many a disappointed fiancee has done before-she went to court and gave the history of the affair to the judge. The heartless Bartholomew meanwhile stood by, laughing at her woes and scornfully refusing to right them. Wherefore he has been committed to prison in default of $500 bail. Death in the Pot.

enough to pit themselves against each other in their capacity to eat and drink. Two such, who paid dearly for their folly, have been discovered in Williamsburg. They laid a wager concerning the number of glasses of lager that each could drink, and adjourned to a neighboring tavern for the sake of having the drink out. The tavern-keeper was not particularly conscientious, and agreed to supply them with whatever quantity might be needed. Surrounded by a circle of their personal friends, incited to unwonted exertions by the noble end that was to be attained, they drank and drank until thirty-five glasses of lager and an equal amount of Kirschwasser had been swallowed. The Kirschwasser was taken to neutralize the intoxicating effect of the beer. When thirty-five glasses had been made away with each party showed symptoms of distress, the cheeks being turgidly crimson, and the stomach swollen to a droprical degree. On they went, however, and he beer poured down their throats in aromatic ateracts, its froth mounting like spray. One

Occasionally two fools will be found silly

f the drinkers was a doctor; the other a ealthy brewer. When the doctor had laboriusly disposed of fifty glasses, a friend interred and took him away under pretense of seeng a patient, but he was at least as much in eed of a physician as any of the invalids whom he was under engagement to meet. His val, the brewer, however, continued at his post, and disposed of five glasses more, making fifty-five altogether. Listen to the sequel. Both these men are now dead. The doctor never left his house alive, from the hour he was taken thither by his friend under pretense of visiting a patient. The brewer died last Sunday, whether of ecstasy at having won the wager I leave to his enemies to determine. But a curious discussion is now going on in the neighborhood where these two buck-beer behemoths gave up the ghost. The saloon-keeper has presented a bill for one hundred and five glasses of beer and fifty-five of Kirschwasser, and insists that one of the families of the dead men shall pay it. Both families refuse to pay, and each claims the victory for its dead representative. Such is life. It is comparatively but a short time ago since two equally silly men entered into a wager as to which could eat the greatest number of hard-boiled eggs within a given time. The "yolk" cannot be said to have been easy. But in cases like this the fools who look on are quite as criminal and unwise as the principals. In the case of one of these lagerbeer contestants there is no doubt but what his death was the immediate consequence of his folly. In the case of the other one there may be a shadow of uncertainty, though the circumstances of his illness and demise are very suspicious.

Mrs. Stanton Retires. After all there is some truth in the report that Mrs. Stanton is to retire from public life. It was hoped that the persuasions of Susan and of some of her other sisters would induce her to remain, but she has evidently seen enough of rampaging on the rostrum. By retirement, however, she does not mean the intention never to appear in public again. Her idea rather is to speak and write when the spirit moves her, and not to be a professional editress and lecturess, forever on the go. Many of those who are fond of asserting that no woman in public life is a happy woman at home, or makes a happy home for her husband, would, if they could, point to the private life of this lady in illustration. It is because the illustration would not hold that they do not do so, for without setting foot over a private threshold with which the public has no business whatever, it is manifest that Mrs. Stanton carries her domestic happiness in her face, and is a good woman partly because she is a happy one. A recent reception given to her at the residence of Mr. Studwell, of Brooklyn, proved how greatly she is admired and respected by many of the best people there-people of blood, people of brains, and people of great intrinsic moral worth. Her warm personal friends are not by any means confined to those who approve of woman's suffrage. Some of her most earnest and most intellectual admirers are womanly women who cling to their firesides as the cricket sticks to the hearth, and whose songs there are more tuneful in their husbands' ears than the most passionate invectives of an agitated woman's-suffrage rostrum.

Tenacious Tenants.

Mr. and Mrs. Levine keep a crockery store on the Bowery and have lived in the same place for ten years. Upon the first of February, not wishing to move, he secured a lease for another year through the intervention of a third party and | not through direct negotiation with the owner. The name of the latter is Mr. Wyman, who, it appears, had other designs than the renting of his house for another year. In March the building was injured by fire, and Mr. Wyman, perceiving the chimneys to be damaged, thought this would be a good dodge to get the Levines out. He had previously asked them to vacate, but they had refused to do so without receiving either a compensation or a first choice of quarters in the new building which Wyman contemplated running up. To these conditions Wyman would not accede. Hence the quarrel. Mr. Wyman applied to Mr. Macgregor, Superintendent of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, for permission to oust the tenants on the ground that the building was unsafe, but Macgregor, perceiving that the house was merely damaged but not dangerous, refused to grant the request. Wyman then, maddened at being baffled, took advantage of some laborers being at work on an adjoining lot, and had the chimneys entirely pulled down under pretense of rebuilding them. You can imagine the effect upon the crockery department when the Levines obstinately refused to budge. Almost everything is smashed, the Levines have sued their landlord for $10,000 damages, and there is a vast sensation in that quarter of the Bowery. The street is nearly impassable from debris and curiosity-hunters. This is one phase of landlord-and-tenant life in New York. ALI BABA.

DRY FEET.-The most effectual way of guarding one's health is to keep the feet dry, and that can only be done by the use of India Rubber Overshoes, and as the inclement season is upon us, we would advise our readers to buy none but the best quality, which can only be had at GOODYEAR'S Headquarters, No. 308 Chesnut street, south side, Philadelphia.

THE FENTANS Sure they met every night in rooms out ov sight, And drilled to low fifiu' and drummin', Lock where yees would, yees certainly could See crowds of the boys in serious mood.

And yees know'd they were Fenians comin' Divil a word from the crowd was spoke out aloud, Nor a hint as to what they were doin', But the glance of their eye, sure 'twas conquer or die, And to free their green Island they were soon goin' to try Faith its trouble to England is brewin'.

There is Terrence McCoy, he's a broth ov a boy. Wid Mickey McDermot, yees see, A host of the Dolans, McFaddens, and Tollands, And thousands ov boys from the high and the low lands, Would die to make Ireland free.

What they'll do I don't know; a short time will show; But one thing you will see afther while. All their Uniform Coats were made by Charles Stokes Which is now jest the way wid all ov the folks Who want their clothes made up in style. CHARLES STOKES, No. 834 Chesnut street.

THE RAW WINDS OF EARLY SPRING search out the weaknesses of all who are predisposed to Lung Complaints, and in consequence Colds, Coughs, and Bronchial Disorders everywhere prevail. Those who have contracted Colds should now be especially careful, and not imprudently wait until by constant coughing they so irritate and rack their lungs as to bring on themselves some very serious Pulmonary Affection. Let them rather treat their symptoms rationally and at once, and by the prompt use of Dr. Jayne's Expectorant cure their Colds, and heal all accompanying Soreness of the Chest. Sold SPREAD THE FAMILY BOARD WITH LUXURIES .- We might cite the amborities by the dozen, to show that Irish Moss or Carrageen (from which the celebrated SEA Moss FARINE is made) has long been considered a valuable species of nourishment for the sick-light, digestible, anti-febrile, restorative, and fattening. This is what eminent men have said of Irish Moss as it was only half purified, and comparatively unconcentrated. The new article (Sea Moss Farine)—which, by the magic of science, has suddenly sprung, pure and perfected, from an old matrix, like Minerva from the bed of Jove-takes a far wider range. To us it is to reduce the expense of living, to spread the family board with luxuries costing less than common fare, and largely to increase that variety in food which is said to be essential to health. It is quickly pre-pared (ten minutes sufficing to produce a custard or pudding), and we think no one who has once become acquainted with its properties will be likely to ever abandon it as an article of diet.

"SAMUEL, you squint." "Yes, Benjamin, I am squinting at that beautiful suit you have on-rather expensive, though, I should judge?" "Yes, it cost an X." "What! a beautiful all wool cassimere spring suit for 10 dollars ?" "Even so." "You astonish me; where did you get it?"

Is now being made and sold in large numbers both in France and England. Can be had only at the manufactory. This piece of furniture is in the form of a handsome PARLOE SOFA, yet in one minute, without unscrewing or detaching in any way, it can be extended into a besultiul RENGH EEDSTEAD, with Spring Hair Mattress till RENGH EEDSTEAD, with Spring Hair Mattress conflect. It has the convenience of a Bureau for helding, is canfly manused, and it is impossible for it to get out of order. This Bofa Bedstead requires no props, hinges, feet, or ropes to support it when extended, as all other soff-cods and lounges have, which are all very unsafe and liable to get out of repair, but the B-estead is formed by simply tuning out the ends or closing them when the Sefa is wanted. The price is about the same as a lounge. An examination of this novel invention is solicited.

The Red River Troubles. MINNEAPOLIS, May 27 .- The Tribune of the 26th publishes a statement from a gentleman whom it vouches for as entirely trustworthy, to the effect that early in May he left Vermillion county on lake Superior at Fort Frances, a fur-trading post on the British side of Rainy Lake. He found 2500 British soldiers fully equipped and provisioned, they had a large fleet of river-canoes with which they intended to make their way to the Red River country. He thinks that ere this they have reached Lake of the Woods. It is supposed these troops were started from Canada as soon as navigation permitted them. There is considerable excitement around this Fenian headquarters this morning, they expect to hear of a fight at Malone. During the day about forty men left here for the East on the half past 11 train.

CHICAGO, May 27.—In the town of Marcelline, Adams county, Ill., Frank Anderson, a young man of a highly respectable family, shot and instantly killed a negro named Thomas Armstead. The trouble arose about a wager of ten cents, which was lost by Anderson. He paid it immediately, and went to his house and got a revolver and returned to where Armstead was, and demanded the return of the money, which Armstead refused, whereupon Anderson drew Killed for Ten Cents. Armstead refused, whereupon Anderson drew bis revolver and fired at Armstead, with the result stated. Anderson is in jail.
