THE DRAMA IN ENGLAND.

Speech of the Prince of Wales in Aid of the

The twenty-fifth anniversary festival of the Royal General Theatrical Fund of this charity was held May 16, at St. James' Hall, London, the Prince of Wales in the chair.

The Prince, in response to the toast for his health proposed by the Duke of Sutherland, said:—My old friend who proposed this toast said that the Princess and myself have patronized the drama. I rejoice that I have had the opportunity ever since my childhood of going to the theatre and witnessing most excellent plays, and the performance of perhaps some of the best actors that exist, many of whom I see here this evening.

His Royal Highness, in proposing "Prosperity to the Royal General Theatrical Fund," said:—When I took around me and see this numerous assembly I have no doubt that you feel a deep interest in this excellent fund. What charity could be better than this? When one thinks how much amusement and pleasure we have all derived from going to the theatre, and how it occurs to us how hard is the work and drudgery to the actors and actresses? Does it ever occur to us that at all times and seasons, whatever may be the trouble or sickness from which they are suffering, they must be in their places? They are forced to speak, to appear before us, although their hearts may be very sad.

When in paroxysms she was a sad spectacle to behold. She foamed much at the mouth. The medical gentlemen were well conducted, but with much difficulty, and appeared piteously to those about her to keep at a distance, as if fearful that she might do them personal injury. During the night she became delirious, and being unable to get any rest, she expired at half past 11 o'clock yesterday morning, when superting drugs were administered and she was put to rest.

A SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Pittsburg Memorial of her Heroic Deed—A

Work of Art.

The Pittsburg Chronicle of last evening has a sketch of the monument to be erected in that city, from which we extract as follows:—

Money enough to raise a handsome memorial has been secured, and it was desirable that a handsome memorial should be secured with it.

Steps were taken to make the association a chartered society, so that it could work without undue hindrance, and a charter was secured for it after many delays. In the meantime designs were advertised for, and some were produced by our leading home artists. A premium of $200 was offered to the artist producing the best design, and a premium of $100 to the one producing the second best.

At length, at the meeting of the association held April 26, 1868, Mr. Welch moved that design No. 3, of Mr. E. Morganroth, of Lawrenceville, be accepted, and the motion pre-valued. Mr. Morganroth, who, by the way, is as thorough an artist in his line as we know anywhere, and who is, besides, a modest and most estimable gentleman, has presented five designs, all similar in character, but, on account of difference in the amount of work, varying in cost. No. 3, the one accepted, is for a monument seventy-five feet high, to be surmounted by a column of a soldier at parade rest.

A spiral staircase inside ascends to a balcony twenty-five feet from the ground.

Four large eagles were placed one at each corner of the pedestal. On the base of the column, which will be inscribed the names of the soldiers of Allegheny county whose memory the monument will perpetuate.

Alterations were subsequently made in the design. Instead of the soldier on the top, a col-

Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad, and becoming fatigued with the weight on his shoulders, he slipped the leather strap off and permitted his treasure to remain beside him on the seat.

On arriving here he picked up his traps, and took a carriage to go to the residence of his friend, No. 144 Huntington street, where he intended to sojourn for a few days. The evening was spent in talking over foreign scenes, and at twelve o'clock, after the Captain had retired to rest, it occurred to him that he had left in the cars the satchel containing money, a few moccasins and the satchel page there was examined and the desired satchel nowhere found. The gentleman of the house was at once called, an officer of the road aroused from his slumbers, and the car visited and examined. A search was made, not only in and under and above the seat where the Captain sat, but throughout the car, and no trace whatever of the treasure was discovered. Employees of the road were questioned, but they were all ignorant of the Captain's lost lollars, as Fenians on the war path are of their destination.

Yesterday morning the matter was placed before the police, and the Captain was questioned in connection with the matter. He was seated, he said, with his wife at the "bar-board " of the car, and there were persons on the "starboard" and on the "stern" and "bow." There was a light about half way "abait," and another just "aft" of where he was sitting.

He was asked to leave the car, being detained a long time in getting together his property. He always had carried his satchel attached to his person, and couldn't understand how it swung clear of him on this occasion.

He said the slightest breeze could be had, and Captain, in return for his gold, has learned that there are sharks on land that "nab" up loose articles as quickly as those of the deep will lay hold of a "corpse" that happens to fall in their way.

HYDROPHOBIA.

Distressing Death of a Young Lady of Harrisburg.

About nine weeks ago, says the Harrisburg Patrol of yesterday, while passing along the street, Miss Margaret Dabaugh, aged between eighteen and nineteen years, was bitten in one of her fingers by a small dog. The wound produced was slight, the teeth of the animal scarcely penetrating the flesh. The finger quickly healed and the occurrence was soon entirely forgotten. On Friday last the young lady experienced a pricking sensation in her finger, extending from the finger in which she had been bitten to the farthest extremity of her shoulder, and noticed that the tip of her finger was slightly inflamed. When called upon to do some domestic work she complained that her arm extended towards the head, and that she could do nothing that required its use.

Up to this time no fears of serious consequences were entertained by either the lady or her friends. On Saturday afternoon she grew worse, when it was ascertained that she was visiting her sufferings. On examining her he thought he discovered symptoms of hydrophobia, but he was not fully confirmed in his mind as to the correctness of his conclusions. During the night she became delirious, and being unable to get any rest, she expired at half past 11 o'clock yesterday morning, when superting drugs were administered and she was put to rest.

Another physician was called to her early on Sunday morning, who had treated a case of hydrophobia. On seeing her condition he said she was afflicted with the incurable malady.

When in paroxysms she was a sad spectacle to behold. She foamed much at the mouth.

The medical gentlemen were well conducted, but with much difficulty, and appeared piteously to those about her to keep at a distance, as if fearful that she might do them personal injury. During the night she became delirious, and After a parley of fifteen minutes between the second and first, the second was concluded to adjourn to a point near Osyka, where water could be readily obtained in case any one felt inclined to take it. The weapons were double-barrelled shot-guns, fifteen buckshot, at thirty paces. A retired spot was selected and the bushes cut away, making a straight narrow lane from man to man.

Many useless efforts had been made to effect a reconciliation, but the duellists were unrelenting, even to the moment when the second stated that things were ready. Pritchett received his gun and went to the end he had chosen; Adams took his weapon, but stepped out of the line to remark that he "didn't want terse that far man. Confusion and disappointment reigned for a fast as Adams reloaded.

Pritchett progressed.

Finally Pritchett stated that he would accept an unconditional withdrawal of the challenge and no more talk about insults to the family.

Eventually Adams came to the terms, when a suggestion was made that the party take a friendly drink from the bayon, which was agreed to, but the principals did not speak after that. To close the farce finely, one of the gentlemen of the expedition suggested that the principals take his position on the blood-less battle-ground, select a tree and imagine it his opponent, and fire at the word of command.

The proposition was accepted. Adams blazed away at the hated tree, loading five buckshot last into the woods, which would have killed an ox. Pritchett then tried his skill and valour, sending seven shot where they belonged, proving conclusively that if the men had fought one of both must have found an early grave, etc.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

The Fenian Army on the Back Track.

MALDEN, May 30.—General McDowell and General Rufus Ingalls returned here from Ozdenburg by the regular train at 9:30.

The escape of Edward J. Mannix, the Fenian Centre, has caused extra precautions against a similar effort by the remaining prisoners, and Captain Harlow, in command of the guardhouse, states that the first man who moves two feet beyond the sentry lines will be shot down without mercy by the guard. The escape of Mannix was daring and well executed. The prisoners were removed from the upper section of the rink, which is the guard-house, to a small compartment at the lower end, under guard of two men. A window opened from this to the road leading to the prisoners' house. Under the window, which is fifteen feet from the ground, is a saw-pit, which is not used now, and this ten feet deep.

The sentry on guard outside was evidently a Fenian, and aided the escape. When the sentry inside had completed his arrangements, he called out to the prisoners to jump from the window on to two or three logs placed across the saw-pit, and unchallenged by the outside sentry, ran up the street. I saw him pass by in a run and enter a friend's house. In a few minutes after he came out, and jumped into the canal, and drove away. The efforts of the United States and Marshal at recapture have up to now been futile.

The United States Marshal is determined to arrest every Fenian he can find. This morning about 9 o'clock, a major in the 5th

United States Artillery pointed out Colonel J.

Cunningham, of Albany, N. Y., to Deputy Marshal Perry, who arrested him and removed him to the guard-house.

Mr. Chandler was literally starving, and was not for the generosity of the citizens and the Roman Catholic priest, robbery would reign supreme. Starving men must steal to live. The men who do these things are well conducted, because they are fed.
