NEW-YORKISMS.

NEW YORK, June 9, 1870.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The Beethoven Centennial. Permit me to give you an item or two in regard to the Beethoven Centennial. Its conductors have been advertising very largely, bent upon using the surest and quickest means of success. They have spent at least $1000 per day in this department alone. They have paid every singer in advance, and upon the day when the festival commences they will have expended at least $60,000. This looks as though their enterprise deserved appreciation, as if every lover of music in general and Beethoven in particular, and more especially as if every glorifler of Gotham, ought to be willing to assist. Such, however, is not the case. Up to yesterday only one hundred tickets of admission had been sold, and only six of these admitting to the full course. This is an encouraging state of things, is it not? What a triumph for the Bostonians if this Beethoven affair should prove a failure after all ! The reason why the prospect is so disastrous is, I suppose, that it is not the first of its kind. The musical hubbub at the Hub one year ago took all the gloss and newness off such enterprises. People feel as though there was nothing further to be done in that direction. The prime instigators for the moment are beginning to pull long faces among them elves. Very naturally. It will not do for them to abate an lota of their advertisements. That would be too significant. Returning were as tedious as go o'er. But the one thing certain so far is that thousands of dollars have gone out, and certainly five hundred dollars have not music-lovers were to be crammed in the Skating Rink. One come in. This hardly looks as though of the "features" of the programme, by-the-by, will be the singing of Miss Rosetta Wright, a colored damsel with a remarkable contralto voice. The friends of the chorus-children among whom Miss Wright was discovered strongly objected to this, and endeavored to raise a disturbance. But the disturbance resulted in Miss Wright's favor, and she is to sustain a leading part. This is an interesting specimen of musical miscegenation. The soprano and contralto qualities are said to unite in Miss Wright's organ with the harmony of milk and Cheap Housekeeping.

Here is an ingenuous piece of advertising: -"A young married couple, without incumbrances, would be willing to occupy and take charge of a well-furnished house, in a good neighborhood, during the summer months, in the absence of the family. They would charge nothing for their trouble, on the condition that the expense of housekeeping were defrayed, including servants." You see it is not difficult for a wealthy family to place its house, furniture, plate, and valuables in general in the care of competent and faithful hands, who will take charge of them for almost nothing! Easy terms-free board and lodgings, "Including servants," for the time the family is absent. It seems incredible that adults should exist who are fools enough to believe in the existence of such foolishness in others. Meanwhile, there are numerous "nice people" who do live in just some such way as this. They belong to that dismal world of poor but highly respectable relations that were born in a sphere which fate does not permit them to remain in. It is not such a pleasant thing to be living on familiar terms with people who could buy all you have got an infinite number of times over without feeling the loss of the mon. In such a state of things it is pleasant to have a helping hand outstretched to you, if only for a little while. It is pleasant (is it, I wonder?) to be able to live in a four-story brownstone front for three months at a time, as if it were your own, fending off the ignominious hour when the rightful owner shall return from his summer loiterings, and you be compelled to hie away to a little wooden cottage in obscure

"Fernande," True enough, as one of the papers here says, Fernande is the "most genial, the most genuise, and the most deserved success of the season.' The plot has been very gingerly treated by Mr. Cooney and Mr. Jackson, the two adapters of the original. In plain, outspoken language, it is simply this:-"Fernande" is the assumed name of a young girl who involuntarily, and by the force of circumstances, is the mistress of a gambling-hell proprietor. The "Countess Clothilde," beneath whose horses, in a fit of desperation, she had thrown herself, rescues her, and establishes her in her own home, under her rightful name of "Marguerite." Here she is loved by the "Marquis Andre," a former lover of "Clothilde." The latter, to take revenge upon her faithless lover, hurries on the match, concealing from "Andre" "Fernande's" former life, but deluding "Fernande" into the belief that he is acquainted with it, and overlooks it. "Fernande" has her doubts of this, and upon the very marriage morning writes to "Andre" a note confessing all. "Andre" receives the note, but "Clothilde" artfully worms it away from him before he has read it, under pretense that it was not meant by the writer to be delivered until after the marriage ceremony. "Fernande," thinking she is understood and forgiven, is married to "Andre." Then "Clothilde" prepares for her revenge, which is to inform "Andre" of "Fernande's" former infamy. In this she is foiled by "Pomeral," her cousin, who snatches the note from her, and by main strength forces her into her bed-chamber and fastens the door upon her just as "Andre" and "Fernande," arm in arm, return from the church. At this point a tableau of very great beauty and effect occurs, the audience rises with emotion, and the theatre is thunderous with cheers and applause. In the next act, which is the last, "Andre" and "Fernande" are discovered happy in their retired home. "Clothilde," who has watched her opportunity, enters by a secret door, by means of which, in former days, she and "Andre" used to keep tryst together, and confronts her former lover at dead of night. Here she gluts her vengeance and reveals "Fernande's" past shame. A scene of fierce passion ensues between "Andre" and his wife, whom he has summoned at this aspersion on her name. Finally, when the beart-strings of the public have been sufficiently tugged at, "Pomeral" enters with the letter "Fernande" had written on her marriage-morn, and which he had snatched from "Clothilde." Reconciliation is of course the result. The climax is reached with a suddenness that takes the audience by surprise, and the curtain comes down before breaths are drawn freely. I think Fernande

Pleasure and Patriotism. Show me the pleasure-seeker who remains in New York during the summer because patriotism tells him that he ought. Pleasure tells him to go to Europe, where luxuries can be had cheap. Patriotism tells him to stay at home, where the money he spends can flow back into the coffers of the country. Pleasure reminds him will be a greater success than ever Frou-Frou was, and I have thus detailed its plot because it is destined to be played in every city of the

that the recent fall in gold enables him to buy a t good deal more for a dollar in London and Paris than he can in New York. Patriotism suggests that that effect will follow in due time here too, If he will only have a little patience. But Pleasure has the best of the argument, as she too often does. She is a most accomplished sophist, and can outtalk stuttering Patriotism any day, since her tongue is always dropping with the honey of self-interest. ALT BARA.

DICKINSON COLLEGE.

THE 87TH COMMENCEMENT.

The Exercises To-day-The Programme of the Ceremonies-Class Day, the Literary Societles, and Other Matetrs,

From Our Own Corresponden Carlisle, June 8, 1870. - Increasing interest in the commencement exercises of Dickinson College has drawn together and kept together the gathering throng. The exercises of Tuesday morning were peculiarly pleasing to those in attendance who would renew their youth, and to students constituted the acme of college life, since they are privileged characters on Class Day. "Devil take the hindmost," the motto of '70, was the striking caption of the varied programme. The assembled audience filled the hall long before the hour at which the class, marshalled by Mr. Wilmer, of Delaware, swelled the assemblage of "fair women and brave men," the belles and beaux of years ago. The music by the United States garrison band contributed in no small degree to the enthusiasm of the occasion. which was presided over by another "big gun" from Delaware, Harvey P. Cannon. The first announcement made was prayer by "Parson" J. H. Hargis, of Virginia, who fully merited the cognomen, accidentally received, which he has borne like "many a serious word spoken in jest," as a character in college for four years. The oration by J. Hamlin McKeehan, of Philadelphia, recited the "Lesson of Life," and taught in the present how to prize the wondrous

C. A. Robinson, of Maryland, in his poem seemed a sweet singer. "The History" in the hands of Mr. Biggs, also of Maryland, abounded in hits upon the faculty, student wit, and scenes of the campus. "Sybilline Leaves," gathered by Mr. Fisher, of West Haverford, Pa., were found written with prophetic pen of the future fate of each individual of the class. "J. P.," better known among his fellows as "Brother Bobb," concluded with the benediction. The inviting foliage of classic elms overshadowed quite a multitude at the "Class Tree" in the afternoon. An address delivered by Mr. Williams, of Maryland, abounded in sentiment, and was well received. Presentation was the order of the day, however, and gracefully made through E. W. Biddle, of Carlisle, consisting of appropriate mementoes, "Legal Ethics," "The Complete Angler," "Saddle Bags," et omnia genera hujusce modi elicited off-hand speeches and racy retorts. Ode singing, Auld Lang Syne, smoke, chat, farewells, formed the finale. Some seemed sad and most were "mighty blue" as the refrain rang out-"Boohoo! Boohoo! we'll take a hearty cry, Boohoo! Boohoo! the tear is in my eye; And so we'll sing the chorus before we say good-bye, For our college days are ended.

Anniversary of the Literary Societies. The auniversary of the Belles-Lettres and Union Philosophical Societies furnished the evening meal of intellectual pabulum and classic viands. President Allen, of Girard College, dwelt upon "Dickinsoniana; or, Recollection of Men and Things at Dickinson." The gentleman announced that he should forestall the newspaper critics and reporters by making knows at the outset that his theme should contain nothing new, startling, profound, or full of learned duliness or exhaustive dissertations. which generally were exhausting to listeners, and then proceeded to put his audience in the most excellent humor, and so held them to the end of his remarks, during which he gave vivid photographs of Drs. Durbin, Emory, McClintock, and others, and recounted the olden times in verification of his apothegm that "with the aged life is memory, with the young it is hope."

Afterwards "Dreamers" were scanned in rhyme by Dr. T. G. Chattle, of Long Branch, N. J. The poem sparkled with wit, only to disclose an undertone for reflection.

At their meeting in their halls this morning, Hon, John A. J. Creswell, Postmaster-General, was unanimously elected Orator of the Belles-Lettres Society for the next anniversary.

The address before the Alumni this evening was delivered by Hon. Charles W. Carrigan, of Philadelphia.

The honorary degree of LL. D. was conferred upon the Rev. Edmund S. Janes, D. D., one of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Election of a New Professor. The chair of Ancient Languages has just been filled by the election, by the Board of Trustees. of Benry M. Harmon, D. D., of Baltimore, who has recently returned from Europe, an educator of great erudition and experience. The late occupant of this chair, Professor Stayman, has been assigned to the Department of English Literature, lately filled temporarily by an ad-junct professor. With the close of this day junct professor. With the close of this day Dickinson completes her eighty-seventh year. Prouder than Roman matron pointing to her long line of noble foster-sons, she exclaims, "These are my jewels." May the Alma Mater of the Alumni ever wear her grey hairs as a MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The City Amusements. AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC Verdi's opera of La Traviata will be performed this evening for the benefit of Mr. Henry Drayton, instead of The Huguenots, as was at first announced. Mr. Drayton is an actor and singer of first-rate ability, and his merits deserve the cordial recognition of the public on such an occasion as

To-morrow evening the grand complimentary benefit tendered to Mrs. Bernard by the directors of the Academy of Music will come off. Wallace's opera of Lurline, which has never been given in this city, is announced, and ought of itself to attract a full house. Mrs. Bernard has claims upon the consideration of the opera-goera of this city, and at the close of an unusually arduous season we hope that her friends and admirars will endeavor to make her benefit a substantial testimonial of their esteem.

The season will close with a matinee on Saturday, when Martha will be presented. AT THE WALNUT there is no abatement of the interest in Mr. Jefferson's personation of "Rip Van Winkle," and he will accordingly appear this evening in this his most popular role. AT THE ARCH Bryant's Minstrels will present an entirely new programme this evening which will include a burlesque of Hamlet, with Dan Bryant in the title role.

AT THE CHESNUT an attractive variety performance will be given this evening. AT THE ANATOMICAL MUSEUM, No. 1205 Chesnut street, an interesting collection of curiosities are on exhibition.

THERE is no doubt that Rockhill & Wilson do the largest clothing business of any clothing house in the city. Their stock of clothing . isy amounts to five hundred thousand dollars. The capacity of their store is ample to accommodate their customers by the thousands, On Saturday last might be seen over one hundred cusmers making purchases at one time on the first floor, while their upper rooms were crowded with gentlemen and ladies, leaving their measures for the little boys and their fathers. It is impossible for us to refer to any particular houses to prove the amount of our purchases, as we are not confined to any particular house, but make them where we can buy the cheapest. Therefore we are enabled to put down all competition. Some have made an effort to compete with our All-Wool Cassimere Spring Fen-Dollar Suits, but have made a miserable and ineffect tual failure, and always will, as we have control of the market for the goods of which they are made, Murderer Arrested. St. Louis, June 8.—It will be recollected that United States Marshal Moses, at Sedalia, was assassinated last December while siting in a house in Camden, Moses being in that region to arrest Felix Whitworth for illicit distilling. Whitworth Felix Whitworth for illicit distilling. Whitworth was suspected of the murder, and shortly after decamped, leaving his wife and five children, and taking with him a widow named Richardson, who left behind seven children. Whitworth went to Randolph county, Arkansas, and engaged at farming, where United States Detective McKean arrested him on June 2, and brought him here last night. The prisoner will be taken to California, Mo., to await trial, the Grand Jury of Camden county having indicted him for murder.

Fell from a Steeple. CINCINNATI, June 9.—George Jayne fell from the St. Paul's M. E. Church to the sidewalk, over one hundred feet, and died instantly. He was engaged in covering the steeple when the rope supporting the scaffold broke.

raturalization pepers issued in New York and of the fact that fraudulent naturalization papers were hawked about in the markets of Europe at $2 apiese as a means of protection. He also referred, giving the statistics, to the New York election frauds of 1868, as developed in the testimony of the Lawrence Select Committee on the subject, declaring of the hundred thousand votes polled in New York city fifty thousand were cast by repeaters. He believed that the time would come when the question would arise whether the people of the United States would allow their President and Vice-President to be counted out by the frandulent votes of New York city, and when that time came there would be civil war. He acquitted the mass of the Democratic party of a desire to control the vote by frand; he believed that they desired that, there should be an honest ballet and therefore their representatives should support the pending bill, designed to accomplish that effect. Speaking of the necessity of purifying the ballet.

Mr. Haldeman called out, "How about Whittemore." Mr. Ward—I do not know what Mr. Whittemore has to do with this discussion. He will be back here in a few days, and we will see about him. He went on to speak of the Tammany organization as composed of a set of men who had no principles, no honesty, no integrity, who were simply public thieves engaged in the business of robbing the city of New York, and of controlling the State of New York. Mr. Schumaker made a remark about buying up Repub-Mr. Schumaker made a remark about buying up Republican State Senators.

Mr. Ward replied that if Republican Senators sold themselves, and if corruption bad grown to that point, then they ought all the more to try to keep the ballot pure. If Republican State Senators in New York were purchased, they were purchased by the same set of mee who purchased election inspectors, who purchased certain Republican organizations, and who controlled New York city by corruption and fraud.

Mr. Haldeman made a remark about the Republican party having the control of the banks and bonds and tariff and internal revenue. Mr. Ward did not see that the bonds or the tariff had anything to do with the pending bill, and he anything to do with the pending bill, and he went on to advocate its passage.

Mr. Eddridge, a member of the Judiciary Committee, addressed the House in sposition to the bill. It might not properly be called a war measure, but it had its origin and life in the spirit of revolution evoked by the war. It was, in all its main features, at war with the well-cuts-blished order and long settled policy of the Government on the subject of naturalization and immigration. It was one of the waves of the revolution that had during the last few years been surging and beating with almost resistless for e against the Constitution, against the several co-erdinate departments of the Government, against the union of the States, and against all the Laws and barriers set up by the fathers of the republic for the oreservation and protection of the rights and liberties of the people. It was a party measure for the perpetuation of party power. In his judgment the title of the bill would be improved and its character much more clearly indicated by styling In his judgment the title of the bill would be improved and its character much more clearly indicated by styling it "A bill to establish a most intricate and difficult system of naturalization, and to hinder and de'ay, and as far as possible prevent naturalization, and to discurrage intelligent foreigners from immigration to the United States," and yet the bill was a very great improvement on all the bills introduced on the subject, but there was nothing in it that commended it to his judgment. He was opposed to every form and feature of it. The people had not demanded any such legislation. It was the work of the scheming politician. Its preferese and title were untrue, it was not intended or designed "to establish a uniform system of naturalization." That system had been established long ago by statemen in the interest of the country, and not by politicians and demagogues in the interest of paty.

The injury to result from such a system and redical material and results and results and redical property and redical party.

country, and not by politicians and demagogues in the in-terest of party.

The injury to result from such a sweeping and radical charge could scarcely be comprehended. Next to good laws the most important thing to any country was to have laws fixed and stable, and it was of the greatest import-ance that naturalization laws should be comprehended by the people of the countries from which the American po-pulation has so lately come. The intelligent foreigners, considering the question of becoming an American citi-zen, would be largely influenced in his action by the fa-cility or difficulty which would attend the act. cility or difficulty which would attend the aut.

The present naturalization laws were as well understood in Ireland. Great Britain and Germany, as in the United States. This knowledge had been disseminated through a perisd of rearly seventy years with great effort and expense, and the proposed radical and sweeping change would be made at the cost of much time, money and labor, to make it understood either at home or abroad.
