FRIDAY, JUNE 10, 1870.

THE DEATH OF CHARLES DICKENS. It is with extreme regret that we announce the death of Mr. Charles Dickens, which occurred at his residence near London yesterday afternoon. In another place we have a complete sketch of his life and a critical resume of his labors as a man of letters, and it is only necessary here to pay a brief tribute of respect to his memory. Mr. Dickens was not an old man, and there was every prospect that many years of work were yet before him; and even if he had laid down his pen, his admirers could not but hear of the sudden and unexpected death of one to whom they were indebted for many hours of enjoyment and innocent amusement without more than usually profound feelings of sorrow at his loss. Mr. Dickens was almost the last of the brilliant coterie of intellect that made the English literature of the middle of the nineteenth century what it is, and his death leaves a void that cannot be filled.

THE COMING MAN.

THE coming man has arrived. A vessel direct from Hong-Kong has landed at New Orleans a cargo of one hundred and sixtyseven Chinese coolies, being the first instalment in the grand scheme concocted some months ago by the enterprising Koopmanschap. The new comers have received the following welcome from a leading New Orleans journal:-

"Let these Chinese strangers be dealt with kindly and considerately. Put away uncharitable thoughts about their being pagans. Put away supercillous notions about their being barbarians. Heaven knows their paganism, whatever its forms, can hardly be, in moral and actual fact, more hideous and portentous than the kind of paganism already rank in this country, and which consists in various tagained of the country, and which consists in various factions of readless life and sentiment on the one fashions of godless life and sentiment on the one hand, and in various modes of fetichism or voudouism on the other.

This is all very well as far as it goes, and we trust that the South will not resort to the suicidal policy of turning a cold shoulder to willing hands, simply because the population of China is addicted to paganism and is not as civilized as it might be, after the modern fashion. But, while it is to be hoped that the Southern land-owners will extend a hearty and generous welcome to the new laborers, they must be careful not to be too demonstrative in their welcome. The coolie trade has hitherto been marked by almost as many barbarities as rendered the African slave trade doubly infamous. The wretched Chinamen have been enticed into the of contracts of unfair and unreasonable character, and, being once embarked on their voyage to the unknown land of promise, have been subjected to the most barbarous cruelties, both during the voyage and after arriving at their place of destination. The unscrupulous white men who have engaged in the new chattel traffic have not hesitated to repudiate in toto the few guarantees conceded to their dupes, and their sole aim has been, as a general thing, to extort as much labor as possible from the miserable coolies, without regard to their simple right to live out the days allotted them upon the earth.

If the coolie trade which has been inaugurated in this country is to be marked by the same heartless features that have scandalized it elsewhere, the sooner an effectual stop is put to it the better. After waging a terrible war for the preservation of the Union and the extinction of negro slavery, the nation cannot and will not permit another system of slavery to be built up on the rains of the old institution. The Southern planters who avail themselves of the surplus population of China must remember in so doing that human bondage in all its forms and phases has been forever blotted out, and that no labor system which bears the slightest resemblance to it can be tolerated on American soil. Already several important measures have been introduced into Congress looking to the regulation of Chinese immigration to this country, and it is to be hoped that, before the close of the present session, time will be found to perfect these measures and ensure the final passage of a law that will not only facilitate the introduction of Chinamen into the United States, but ensure to them a full measure of justice as human beings after their introduction.

ERIN GO UNUM E PLURIBUS BRAGH!

THE "New Regime" is at last in fair working order in New York, and the metropolis has good cause to congratulate itself upon the promise of the future, especially when contemplating the list of men who are to vote away its money and control its more immediate local interests. The roll of the new City Council ought, indeed, to afford the most intense satisfaction to the people of our neighbor city. Of the fifteen aldermen nine are natives of the United States, four of Ireland, and two of Germany. "Nearly all of them," says the Tribune, "are men of at least fair repute." Among the entire fifteen there are but three liquor dealers, and of these but one is the keeper of a resort of roughs and blacklegs, and even this establishment is frequented only by such of the professional fraternity as can afford to don a decent suit of clothes. In view of the absolute power which the new compromise charter places in the hands of Tweed and Sweeney, the "fair repute" of the majority of the new aldermen is indeed something for New York to be grateful for, and the thanks tendered by the Tribune to the Tammany

But when the solid metropolitan glances over the list of assistant aldermen, his soul should be wrought up to the very ecstacy of gratitude. This branch of the City Council is composed of twenty-one members, and of these eight are natives of the United States, one of Germany, and the remaining twelve of the Ould Counthry! The Irish Republic, which has been so completely swamped in Ireland itself, and was still more effectually squelched at Franklin and Malone, thus rises from its ruins and reigns supreme in the metropolis of the New World. But this is not the only cause for congratulation which is presented to our fortunate neighbors. Of the twenty-one assistant aldermen, seven-precisely one-thirdare dealers in spirits, the list of aldermanic traffickers in ardent beverages embracing the solitary Teuton and six of his Hibernian colleagues. None of the native members of the board are engaged in the selling of liquor, but in view of the fact that six of those who hail from the Emerald Isle are so engaged, such of the enlightened voters of the metropolis as prefer to take their straight drinks at the bar of an assistant alderman are afforded ample facilities. And New York, be it remembered, is the commercial, financial, artistic, social, moral, and religious centre of the Great Republic, the claims of Boston and all other provincial towns to the contrary notwithstanding.

ADVERTISING THE ORDINANCES. In the Select Council yesterday a resolution was offered that "hereafter the ordinances passed by Councils be inserted one time as advertisements in all the daily newspapers of Philadelphia instead of having them published four or five times in one paper," which was subsequently amended by the addition of the Sunday newspapers as mediums of publication, after which the whole subject was referred to the Finance Committee with the understanding that it should report two weeks' hence. The underlying idea of this proposition is a good one, and we are disposed to cordially approve the proposed new system. Councils, however, may as well look before they leap, and systematize Mr. Bumm's project before they put it in execution. The theory of the original proposition yesterday was that it was better to publish the ordinances once in all the daily papers, than four or five times in one paper, which theory is founded on a misapprehension or misrepresentation of the present custom. It provides for the publication of the ordinances in three papers, giving but one insertion in each, and the proposed change would not, as the hasty reader might infer from the statement by which it was supported, secure increased publicity for the present amount of expenditure for advertising. The probable the new system will necessarily be increased in proportion to the additional number of newspapers in which the ordinances are to be advertised. If Councils wish to secure the increased publicity without increasing the present expense, they will be obliged to provide for a condensation of the ordinances, and this could certainly be done if they were stripped of their legal verbiage.

In New York a large sum is lavished upon pet party organs for corporation advertising, and funds are taken from the public treasury to pay for official reprints of proceedings which, in their essential features, are published gratuitously by the Philadelphia dailies. The magnanimous spirit which was so pleasing to some of the Democratic Councilmen of this city yesterday rarely or never animates the Democratic rulers of New York. This is no good reason why Philadelphia Republicans should not display a better spirit, but it is no doubt one of the causes of the perpetuation of the present system up to this time; and the financial burdens involved in the maintenance of the New York system illustrates at the same time the necessity of a fair degree of caution in the establishment of new advertising arrangements here. By a correspondence published in THE TELEGRAPH of yesterday, it will be seen that Frederick M. Adams has consented at the solicitation of a number of leading citizens, to become the Republican candidate for Legislature in the Eighth Legislative district if he is nominated by the convention. We also understand that Mr. Marshall and several other gentlemen of high character have been submitted to the Republican voters of the district in question, either of whom would be a great improvement on its late representative, Stokes, who, happily for the public interest, has declined. We trust that the disposition manifested in the Eighth district to select candidates of an improved stamp may become general, and that a sweeping reform may thus be effected.

SUICIDAL PROPENSITIES. - An English paper says :-"It is well known to all Frenchmen that in England our climate is so dreary and detestable that there are more suicides among us than in any other country of Europe. Statistics show, however, that for a long period of years the average number of persons who have destroyed themselves has been at the rate of 110 per million inhabitants in la joyeuse France, and only 69 per million in spieen-smitten Albion. During the past year no less than 5011 persons committed suicide in France-4008 men and 1003 women. Of these 900 men and 407 women drowaed themselves; 1972 men and 335 women chose death by hanging; 488 men shot themselves, while but 5 men owed their deaths to firearms: 192 men and 113 women made use of the fumes of charcoal; knives were used by 176 men and 33 women; poison by 74 men and 44 women; 99 men and 55 women met death by jumping from windows, towers, etc.; 31 persons flung themselves in the way of trains. One individual starved himself to death. It thus appears that hanging is the most prevalent method of self-destruction in France, then comes drowning, then suffocation by charcoal, and lastly by poison. It is a well-known fact that, so far from decreasing, the number of suicides increases in a direct ratio to the spread of education and civilization. In Prussia, the most highly educated country in Europe, the annual average of persons per million inhabitants who destroy themselves is 249-more than double the average of France, and nearly fourfold that of Englan a. On the other hand, in Spain the average of sulcated is only fourteen per million inhabitants. FINANCE AND COMMERCE,

Evening Tel.sgraph Office. Friday, June 10, 1870. The money market to-day shows more than the average degree of duliness, owing to the disagreeable weather. Money, however, continues abundant and rates favor borrowers, though the banks are quite firm in refusing lower terms than those hitherto current. The demand for call loans is very light and rates continue between 3 and 4 per cent. The average rate for discounts at the bank counters is 6 per cent., though large amounts change hands on prime paper at 5 per cent. Gold opened at 113% and closed at 113%, with small transactions. Governments were quiet and somewhat steady. Prices are not much changed.

At the Stock Board business was light at a general decline in prices. In State loans there were sales of sixes, first series, at 105. City sixes were quiet, with sales of the old at 93; 100% was bid for the new bonds.

The transactions in Reading Railroad were small, but prices were rather firmer. Sales at 53%@53*56. Sales of Camden and Amboy at 119; Catawissa preferred at 37%@%; Northern Central at 45%; Philadelphia and Erle at 29%, s. o.: and Lehigh Valley at 57%.

In Canal stocks there were sales of Lehigh at 25 The belong of the list research.

—There is just and righteous wrath in Pittsburg. Some fellow has sent by mail to the most respected and honored families in the city a pamphlet, which, the Gazette says, is neatly printed, but altogether without mark of artisan or author, and contains ten pages of rhyme, assailing with scurrilous epithets and vile abuse merchants and gentlemen of fair fame, and, not satisfied with this, spares not their wives nor their daughters, ladies of the highest standing, irreproachable in character and position.

—The Missouri Historical Society recently listened to an address, and a member moved a vote of thanks to the orator for his valuable contribution. The orator objected to thanks for his valuable contribution, saying he had but done his duty and deserved no thanks. The member said it was the custom to return thanks for valuable contributions, and the orator responded that it was a custom more honored in the breach than in the observance. Everybody was getting excited, perhaps exasperated, and the member said he would withdraw his motion for thanks for the valuable contribution, if it was offensive to the orator. Whereupon the orator withdrew his objections, and was duly honored with a unanimous vote for his valuable contribution. In what literary society is this little farce not frequently repeated?

"In "The Counters of Rudoistadt' all readers are afforded an opportunity of judging whether the productions of the greatest female genius of the day are to be condemned for their laxity, or destined to live with Scott and Cooper, long and worthily, for a future generation. It is one of the greatest works of fiction by one of the most powerful and versatile novel writers of the nineteenth century. The heroine of the story, Consuelo, is an embediment of all that is chaste and pure, with an artless simulicity truly captivating to the reader. The entire work is well spiced with the supernatural throughout, and is, therefore, the better suited to the tastes and requirements of the present ago. The reader becomes deeply interested in the principal character, and this interest increases as the work progresses, until the final close of the volume. The immense sale of 'Consuelo' suffers a ocarcely perceptible anatement. It is, with its sequel, 'The Counters of Rudoistadt,' as moral as it is classical, written elequent y, with strong and sincere purpose, and overflowing with the delights of the good and beautiful that omanate from our natures."—Athere we
