NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 23, 1870. Tentonic Fat.

Yesterday morning a German Club of Fat Men drove in barouches through several of the streets in the neighborhood of City Hall Park, preparatory to going on a picnic. The barouches were twenty in number, and each contained three or four fat frauds and pinguid "pills" who evidently enjoyed the publicity. As an exhibition of fatness the procession was a delusion and a snare. Not one of the number was respectably corpulent, taking into consideration that he belonged to a fat men's club. As the morning drive of a party of gentlemen, it was not calculated to enhance the public's admiration of the club. It abounded in aldermanic countenances, in whose traits lingered ruby reminiscences of wine and turtle. The observing populace cheered and yelled, and one austere beholder, who wore a white cravat, turned on his heel and murmured something about "glorying in their shame." The turtle and the wine above mentioned are to be accepted as figurative phrases. The original articles of consumption were probably lager, Erlanger, Niersteiner, Schweitzer kase, sausages, pretzel, and Limburger.

Our New Directory.

The New York City Directory, for the year ending May 1, 1871, is just out, and contains about 15,000 more names than the one for the preceding year did. We number 200 more Smiths this year than we did last, and about 1800 altogether. The Greens amount to about 900, and the Joneses to 650. The Robinsons have come down to a mean 280. In this year's directory, uncommon names are rather common, if I may use such a paradox. We have more than 250 nurses whose business it is to let people into the world, and only two cemeteries to accommodate people when they go out, which goes to prove that New York is a live place, and don't believe in death.

Dickens' Death in New York.

The death of Charles Dickens has been made in New York the occasion of a great deal of efflorescence in the pulpit and in the newspapers. Mr. Beecher and Mr. Frothingham, in using his death as a text, have met the demands of a good many members of their congregations, to whom the future of the great novelist was a grateful theme for speculation. The newspapers have made it the subject-matter of epigrammatic editorials, and plenty of business men have had the vile taste to ring in a bad joke in the advertising columns, at the expense of the dead man and for the advancement of their own interests. For my own part I think that the condition of mind which refuses to dwell upon the subject at all, and that which presumes to prescribe the precise position to which that departed genius was assigned in the spiritual world, are equally in the wrong. It is in human nature to take a profound interest in interests which lie beyond this life, particularly when those interests involve the well-being or ill-being of one who has endeared himself so vastly to humanity at large. Several millions of human beings received the news of the death of Charles Dickens with the emotions of sorrow at the loss of a personal friend, and it is impossible, therefore, that the remarks in reference to his spiritual future of men who are at once good Christians and original thinkers should be read without feelings of the keenest concern. Nevertheless the attributes upon which the expressed hopes of his future happiness are found d must seem puerile and illogical to anyone who is industrious or bold enough to think made under the above conditions while walking | from one end of Broadway to the other, or from the Battery up to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, at any hour between 7 A. M. and P. M. The accidents arising from the bat and ball nuisance have already taken their place in the regular categories of casualties. Why a gentleman smoking a fragrant and not inexpensive cigar should have the weed at the command of any ill-smelling, dirty-fingered smoker who happens to be without a light for the stump he is chewing, or why no lady should find it possible to tread a quiet street without having her nervous system shocked, and, possibly, a bone fractured by a flying ball or a misdirected bat, are problems involved in the general spirit of infidelity which questions the cause and end of all evil, and finds no satisfactory response. When Superintendent Jourdan takes his walks abroad it is to be hoped that, even if the cigar nuisance is irremediable, he will discover some cure for the bat and ball affliction.

The Mammoth Methodist Meeting Near Boston —The Opening Scenes. From Our Own Correspondent.

ASSURY GROVE, Mass., June 22 .- Here it is, just as I expected. I meet again the crowd that thronged Desbrosses street, New York ; that made my trip on the Norwich line uncomfortably close upon the steamer as we went up East river and across Long Island Sound; that would not leave nor forsake me at New London, but thence jostled me in the crammed cars, gliding through the towns of Putnam, Blackstone and others of historic suggestion; that saw me clear through even when I took to the woods; and that now, together with the multitude of Methodists gathered to the Fourth National Camp Meeting, from various parts of our common country, stick closer than a brother.

Upon our entrance of McClintock avenue, on Tuesday, the singing of the old hymn, "Forever here my rest shall be," seemed to echo back acceptance to inviting grove, cool cottages, and religious influences pervading the very atmosphere. Although a previous engagement prevented my singing the line to mean it, thought I, we'll tarry with you in tents for a season. I am glad I am here, under the protection of the good Governor of the Bay State, who, by the way, is a leading member in the Methodist Episcopal Church ; despite the slight hint that I heard, thrown out in the Legislature, upon the reception of his veto of the Hartford and Erie Railroad bill, that he was interested in another line. But, as usual, singing was followed by Scripture lessons, which were blended with prayer that this meeting may be Vineland, Manheim, and Round Lake, the sites of previous similar scenes, repeated and surpassed. To this end circulars were distributed, reading

"HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

"The condition of your mind, and the manner of your life, while here, will have much to do with the spirituality and success of the occasion.

"Make a full consecration of your time, talents, influence and yourself to God and His cause. Set aside secular interests, all jesting and evil speaking, and in no case allow yourself to be drawn into controversy. Strictly observe the rules of the meeting, and preserve those especially pertaining to public worship and private devotion.

"Be careful to shun excess in eating, and retire and rise early. Permit no special excitement to betray you into a disregard of this suggestion. Ten days of toil demand our attention.

"Waste no time in mere recreation. We come for a vastly more important purpose-to seek the Divine glory ! "The Master saith 'all things are possible to him that believeth.' etc. THE PRESENTATION OF THE EPWORTH BIBLE

brought with the antique appearance of the book, for a moment many monastic memories, and created strange conjecture.

Rev. W. A. Boole

THE GOLDEN EAGLE WARM-ARE FURNACES .- The subject of heating houses is one which can never become un-interesting, for the simple reason that not only our comfort but our efficiency as workers depends in a great me sure upon the extent to which we are supplied with pure air of a moderate temperature. This question has sugaged the attention of experts for years, and each year bas developed some new invention which is superior to the apparatus used in the succeeding one for the purpose. One of the great difficulties which has been in the way of securing air of a proper quality consists in the well-known fact that temperature of a given quantity of air is in when the creased its hygrometric relations are entirely altered, and the more highly it is heated the more thoroughly it is deteriorited in this respect. A full supply of atmospheric moisture and the avoidance of dust are two important points which require attention. The former is attained by the provision of means whereby squeous vapors can be added to the heated air, and the latter is most easily secured by great attention to cleanliness in the flue together with currents of velocity as low as is compatible with the introduction of a proper quantity of fresh air. Mr. Charles Williams, Nos. 1133 and 1134 Market street, is now manufacturing the Golden Eagle Furnace, which meets the above important points. Its large amount of heating surface and the great ease with which it can be opened and cleaned recommend it strongly to those in want of a simple, durable, and officient furnace. These furpaces are so arranged as to combine the many qualities requisite to warm atmospheric air healthfully, and to do this the material of which it is made is peculiarly adapted to produce the necessary results. The thick cast-iron cylinder which contains the coal, the large wrought-iron heating surface that forms the combustion chamber, th extended air tubes securing atmospheric pressure, and the peculiar arrangement for effectually consuming and preventing the escape of deleterious gases, are among the many valuable qualities peculiar to this furnace. Mr. Withiams has also on hand a large variety of stoves, ranges, ventilators, etc., at his spacious establishment. NO OLD STOCE!--We have from 65 to 70 hands daily in our cutting department, and from 1500 to 2000 hands making up the clothing in our substantial and beautiful styles. It matters not if we manufacture one hundred thousand dollars worth this week, they are all sold, and the same quantity takes their place the next. We receive hundreds of orders daily for our $10 allwool Cassimere Suit, and other suits, from all the surrounding States; from Dayton, Columbus, and Cincin nati, Ohio: Indianapolis, Jud.; Richmond, Va., and from all the nearer States. Many suits have been ordered from New York city: they say there never was any clothing gotten up in that city to approach them, either in style or quality, for the money. ROCKHILL & WILSON

Mr. Van wyck spore in opposition to the bill and in fa-vor of its reference. Mr. Logan spoke in support of the bill and attributed the opposition to it to a combination between the protec-tionists and the Democrats, the former believing that the additional members to which the Northwest would be en-titled would not vote for taxing pins and needles, and the latter knowing these additional members would be Northwest.

the latter knowing these additional members would be Republicans. Mr. Poland denied that there was any such combination as that alleged by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Logan) who put so much rainbow into the Constitution, as well as everything else. Why should this bill be prased mov? Be-cause it was said there was an inequality in representation. It had been sobefore. There always had been an in-equality, particularly toward the end of each decade. He believed that the Constitution, never contemplated that three should be an apportionment until after the consus was taken, and that it should be made by Congress. After a long discussion the Apportionment bill was re-ferred to the Judiciary Committee - yeas, 98; nays, 95. This is regarded as equivalent to its defeat. A motion-to reconsider is pending.

for himself. These attributes-such as a love for humanity, charity for its weaknesses, the love of purity, truth, and beauty-are far from being exclusively characteristic of Caristianity. Jews and Mahometaus show them to some extent, and the present aspect of the New York pulpit on the question has a tendency to prove how "unsound" that pulpit is on matters of orthodoxy.

After the Jubilee.

There is only too much truth in what I have said about the loose manner in which the "Beethoven" Jubilee was conducted. Such a first-class fizzle has never been seen in this city. Scarcely any one was paid but the principal singers and leaders of the orchestra, who insisted upon having their money before uttering a note. Ever since Saturday the cars of Second and Third avenues have been thronged with unpaid ushers and choristers, going up to the Rink to present their claims in the insane hope of having them settled. Meanwhile the parties supposed to be responsible are resting from their labors, and are absent from the city, leaving to their clerks the pleasing task of facing the dissatisfied Band of the Unpaid. In remembering that festival, New York has literally nothing to be proud of. Little that was good in it, almost everything that was bad was attributable to itself. Some of the best music and the best conductorship came from Boston. The Hub never had so fair an opportunity to crow over the metropolis as she has now.

The Chinese.

Seventy natives of China yesterday left this port for a nameless destination in Massachusetts. The mystery surrounding their goal is as as unfathomable as that encircling the bourne of a United States Government vessel entrusted with a secret mission during the war. The seventy are said to be "an able-bodied, finelooking set of fellows." Perhaps so. No Chinaman that I have yet seen-except, perhaps, Chang-answers to this description. Look at the Chinamen who sell cigars and candies anywhere en Broadway below the Astor House. They look like dry mud, as though the original clay out of which they were made retained its pristine color. I am afraid the romance surrounding the Chinaman is even more poetic and has less foundation in reality than that enveloping Red Cloud. A very good test would be to allow him to address a meeting at Cooper Institute. I should like to hear his opinion on shoes, housekeeping, and the general business of the laundry, in all of which he is supposed by his enthusiastic admirers to excel. The only thing I can find in favor of him is the fact that, like the wise men, he comes from the east. I hope he will not discover too late that, had he been truly wise, he would have stayed there, and not contracted to make shoes at so much a month in that nursery of humbug, Massachusetts. I notice that there is one advantage which the defunct Chinaman who yields up the ghost in Massachusetts will enjoy: it is that of having his body shipped back to the Celestial dust amid which it first saw the light.

Pedestrian Nuisances.

New York is peculiarly afflicted with pedestrian nuisances, one of which affects Broadway, and the other of which is principally confined to the side streets. The first consists in the habit every other man with an unlit eigar has of stopping you, if you happen to be smoking, and requesting a light. The other is found in the bat and ball which the youngster of Gotham is so fond of playing between school hours. As a matter of curiosity it might be worth while calmatter of curiosity it might be worth while cal-cutating how many requests for a light would be seen to be admired.

CARDINATION AND THE CARD

Chapel pulpit Bible, therein used for one hunyears from 1695-forty years by dred father-pastor, Samuel Wesley, and the thereafter by John Wesley until the world became his parish, presented in 1834 by the wardens of Cornwall to Rev. Robert Atkins, who thought it eminently fitting for Mrs. Smith, of London, daughter of the great commentator, Dr. Adam Clark. The executor of this lady, Sir Stevenson, has recently, through the sweet singer, Phillip Phillips, made American Methodism its depository.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

This pleasing incident was seized upon and rendered strikingly significant by Rev. John S. Inskip, of Baltimore, chairman of the National Committee. Said he :- "Old Bibie, old Gospel ; nothing new to tell you, but truth old as Christianity. Text short, easily remembered; forget it never-'Be ye holy.' Holiness all that pertains to true religion, now seen through the prismatic rays reflected upon a single point of observation. To specifically apply it, 'Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength. and thy neighbor as thyself.' Here we cannot be beyond temptation or errors of judgment in the conduct of life; but we can be intensely soul-satisfied with God and His Son, who brother to our souls became. We come not to satisfy New England proclivities, to split hairs in argument, but rather to kindle a fire here as of old, to spread in white-heat all over the land. There is not much logic in Divine power.

"Religion an inner life, a verity, though a profound mystery. 'Work is worship,' literally interpreted, an infidel sentiment. No war to wage with good works, but they come short of saving grace. Too many have a legendary Saviour. Rationalism reviewed. Not a few formal. Ritualism and Romanism scathed. Some say, 'hard to hold on to religion. Get a religion that will hold on to Zion. Never mind about naming it yet; never name a child until it be born; church must start a fire; fire always draws a crowd; must not, in the fast world about us, in religion go back to ex-cart travel; let Christian speed be telegraphic and lightning-quick and powerful." Brief summary cannot do justice to this magnetic discourse. To-day spiritual yearnings go up in prayer as the voice of one man, and break forth into praise and thanksgiving. Free-thinking Boston stands upon the outskirts chatting; the police are a "terror to evil doers;" and I am safe in my stay from all harm in the path of duty. You shall hear more, after a while, about men and things, Yankees, yelling, etc. Au revoir. J. H. H.
