

Dickens conversed with me chiefly about Mr. Carlisle's writings, for whose 'French Revolution' he expressed the strongest admiration, as he has pra-ti-sily shown in his "Tale of Two Cities," and f aiso related some interesting anecdotes, one of which I may venture to transfer to print. It was related to Mr. Dickens by the late Mr. Edwin Stanton, the to Mr. Dickens by the late Mr. Edwin Stanton, the famous Secretary of War in the United States Cali-net. On Good Friday, 1565, there was a Cabinet council at Washington, and Mr. Stanton chanced to enter the council chamber some time after the other members had assembled. As he entered he heard the President say, "Well, gentlemen, this is only amuse-ment. I think we had better now turn to business." During the meeting he had noticed that Mr. Lincoln ws sremarkably grave and sedate; and that instead of strolling about the room, as was his usual wont, dealing out droll remarks, he sat bolt upright in his chair. On leaving the council Mr. Stanton asked chair. On leaving the council Mr. Stanton asked one of the other Ministers why the President's manone of the other Ministers why the received the following explanation:--When we assembled to-day Mr. Lincoln said:--"Gentlemen, I dreamed Lincoln said: -- "Gentlemen, I dreamed a strange dream last night for the third time, and on each occasion something remarkable has fol-owed upon it. After the first dream came the battle of Bull Run (Mr. Dickens could not remember the second event), and now the dream has come again. I dreamed that I was in a boat on a lake, drifting

I dreamed that I was in a boat on a lake, drifting along without either oars or sails, when ——" At this moment you, 'said the Minister, addressing Mr. Stanton, 'opened the door, whereupon the President checked himself, and said, "I think we had better tura to business." So we have lost the conclusion of the dream.' And it was lost forever. The council met at 23% o'clock, and on the same evening Presi-under Lincoln law doad slate by the wited about of met at 250 o clock, and on the same evening Presi-sident Lincoln lay dead, slain by the pistol-shot of Wilkes Booth. I cannot avoid drawing a parallel here. We shall never know the end of Mr. Lincoln's dream, and the "Mystery of Edwin Drood" remains also an inscrutable mystery, parted from us by the impenetrable curtain of death.

Dickens as a Man of Science. From the British Medical Journal, June 17.

How true to nature, even to their most trivial de-How true to hature, even to their most trivial de-t ils, almost every charactor and every incident in the works of the great novelist whose dust has just been laid to rest really were is best known to those whose tastes or whose duties led them to frequent the paths of life from which Dickens delighted to draw. But none, except medical men, can judge of the rare fidelity with which he followed the great Mether through the designs south of disease Mother through the devious paths of disease and death. In reading "Oliver Twist" and "Dombey and Son," or the "Chimes," or even "No Thoroughfare," 'he physician often felt tempted to say, "What a gain it would have been to physic if one so keen to observe and so facile to describe had devoted his powers to the medical art!" It must not be forgotion that his description of heetic (in "Oliver Twist") has found its way into more than One standard work in both medicine and surgery (Miller's "Principles of Surgery," second edition, p. 46; also Dr. Altkin's "Practice of Medicine," third 46; also Dr. Attkin's "Practice of Medicine," third edition, vol. i, p. 111; also several American and French books); that he anticipated the clinical re-searches of M. Dax, Broca, and Hughlings Jackson, on the connection of right hemiplegia with asphyxia (cids "Dombey and Sen" for the last illness of Mrs. Skewton); and that his descriptions of epilepsy in Walter Wilding, and of moral and menta; insanity in characters too numericans to menta; insanity in characters too numerous to mention, show the hand of a master. It is feeble praise to add that he was always just, and generally generous, to our profession. Evan his descriptions of our Bob Sawyers, and their less reputable friends, always wanted the coarseness, and, let us add, the unreality, of Albert Smith's; so that we ourselves could well afford to laugh with the man who sometimes laughed at us, but hughed only as one who loved us. One of the inter efforts of his pen was to advance the interests of the East London Hospital for Children; and his sympathies were never absent from the sick and suf-fering of every age.

SINGULAR DISCOVERY.

A Human Hand is Found in a Hogshead of Sugar-Mysterious Doings in the West Indies. There was a singular story, says the Chicago Tribune of Monday, current among South Water street wholesale merchants Saturday—a Water street wholesale merchants Saturday—a story that brought exclamations of surprise, of disbelief, or of disgust from the many to whom it was told. A human haad and an arm had been found in an alley, running between State street and Wabash avenue, and, from its ap-pearance, there was unmistakable evidence that it had been previously found in a hogshead of sugar, taken out and deposited there by the dis-coverer, who was too sharp to leave any clue that might identify the merchant who was the proprietor of that particular sugar cask. The hand was evidently that of a female, and, from its color, it appeared to be that of a creole or mulatto. It was very small and well formed, and was in a state of perfect preservation, having been completely "sugar cured." Of course nobody owned the article, or knew now it came there, or where it came from. Crowds of people flocked to the spot to witness the strange sight, and speculation was rife on the subject, resulting in nothing satisfactory.

A Bevy of Parisian Beauties.

A Bevy of Parisian Beauties. At the races on Sunday last, says a Paris corre-spondent, there was a galaxy of beauty, each rival-ing the other in luxury charms, and wonderful head-gear. Madame Musard caused one of the great-est sensitions in a turn-out with aix horses, and pos-tilions in lubble block indicates the set of the est sensations in a turn-out with six horses, and pos-tillons in light-blue jackets, making an appearance almost royal. Cora Pearl on horse-back, though not possessing the rich charms of her rival, rode her Arab pony with such grace as to cap-ture the hearts of the ring. Adele Courtois, once the prize blonde of Paris, whilst showing the en-croachments of time, deceived many as to her age by artificial means, assisted by the extreme beauty of the outline of her features. Madame Banicci, Victor Emanuel's old fiame, appeared determined to Victor Emanuel's old flame, appeared determined to let the world know that she was not to be shelved. Her face, of a remarkable pallot, and her wonder-fully black hair, offered such an extraordinary confully black hair, offered such an extraordinary con-trast as to draw upon her the gaze of the multi-tude. Blanche Dantigny was surrounded by admirers. This remarkable actress, for some time and still the rage, is, notwithstand-ing the large sums she is receiving, always impecunious. Her money disappears as by enchant-ment, and rumor has it that a loan of fifty francs from her femme de chambre was refused on the race day. Fortunately for this "great beauty" (she is nearly six feet in her stockings) one of our lions playing with her bracelet, behind the scenes in the evening, had the good luck to let it fall and break it. This happy blunderer immediately left and pur-chased something similar, handing it to the fair Blanche enveloped in three bank notes of one thou-send francs. sand francs.

The Champion Baggage Tonner.

Now that the seven champions of Christendom have been succeeded by 7000 champions, whose ex-ploits are a trifle less romantic, it is becoming a little tedious to record the cities that are distinruished by the possession of one or more such heroes and the chivalric peculiarities they respec-tively claim. Springfield, Ohio, however, insists tively tively claim. Springheid, Onio, however, insists upon being heard, and possessing a porter in a hotel who can swing up a trunk weighing soo pounds, wishes it proclaimed abroad that her "champion baggage tosser" throws down his gage—say a "Sara-toga" packed with Congressional documents—and defies the world.
