NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent NEW YORE, July 1, 1870.

Poor Swindled Brooklyn. Brooklyn being really nothing less than an immense boarding-house attached to New York, everything that concerns her necessarily concerns this city. The latest swindle attempted have the desired effect. Persons who find it diffthere has relation to the renumbering of houses before the fourth of July. The order making it imperative to do so was published in two newspapers whose circulation is so extremely indefinite that it amounts to almost nothing at all. This is proved by the fact that out of 60 000 houses in Brooklyn, only onetenth of that quantity have been renumbered, so that between this and Monday about 54,000 must either go through that process or undergo a fine. This is interesting, and will probably result in the realization of about $500,000 to the municipal swindlers.

Beethoven in December. In writing about the series of thunder-concerts celebrated a fortnight ago at the Skating Rink under the name of the Beethoven Centennial, I drew attention to the fact that the birthday of that celebrated composer really occurred on December 17, 1770, and that there was a manifest impropriety in celebrating it six months beforehand, I understand, however, that another festival is in contemplation, which will take place upon the very date of the anniversary of the composer's birth. Whether Mr. Grover, or Mr. Barnum, or Hurd & Miller, have anything to do with the entertainment, I cannot say, although I believe not. The Germans have caught hold of the idea-the Germans, who would have nothing to do with that of a fortnight ago. Not being a fast people, they can afford to wait until the proper time arrives for the celebration, and then to see that the matter is well attended to. This genuine Beethoven Centennial will probably be an earnest and artistic fulfilment, devoid of pretense, but without an unkept promise or a broken contract. Miss Kellogg in English Opera.

An endeavor is being made to pave the way for the appearance of Miss Kellogg in English opera, although no public announcement has yet been made that she intends positively to take such a step. Were she, like Parepa-Rosa or Miss Richings, to assume the leadership of an English Opera troupe, there is little doubt but that her measure of success would be quite large enough to compare not unfavorably with that attained by either of those ladies. Already, in Italian opera, she is about the only soprano who succeeds in drawing together an audience of respectable size. Great favorite as she is in this country, there is little chance for her abroad while the field is held by two such popular rivals as Nilsson and Patti. Next season, too, Parepa-Rosa will probably concertize, so that if Miss Kellogg chooses to devote her abilities to that undertaking, Mrs. Bernard is the only opponent she will have to encounter; and Mrs. Bernard, indefatigable as she is as a worker, is, after all, but a cold singer, whose voice does not compare with Miss Kellogg's in purity and brilliancy. So that when the fall comes perhaps you will see among the early amusement announcements some startling annunciation respecting "The Kellogg English

"Edwin Drood's" New York Finisher. The gentleman whom I mentioned yesterday as having been applied to by a prominent American firm to "finish up" the novel of "Edwin Drood" is confident that he can do so in such a manner as will be acceptable to even the most devoted admirers of the dead novelist. The gentleman is a Southerner by birth, and has already published a number of books which have more of a reputation in the South than they have here. He has been residing in this city for more than a year, now holding an editorial position upon one of the morning newspapers, and contributing between whiles stories and sketches to various periodicals. There is little doubt but that he can affect the style of Mr. Dickens to a noticeable degree. Whether, by coming to terms with the publishers, he will have the moral audacity to brave the criticisms of the world remains to be seen. It is a good thing to have a sufficient confidence in one's powers; it is a better never to give the world cause to laugh at that self-confidence. It would be a singular thing, indeed, if "Edwin Drood" should be completed by two different writers-Wilkie Collins in London and Mr. - in New York. That would be a tale of two cities never contemplated by the author.

Family Day at Coney Island. I take this opportunity to modify a remark I made some days ago with regard to the kind of people who patronize Coney Island. The tendency of that remark was to give the idea that it was visited by nobody but roughs and rowdies. This is far from being the true state of the case. Monday, for instance, is the day known as Family Day, from the quantity of families who resort there to eat clams, improvise a picnic, and have a good time generally. Tuesday and Wednesday are likewise similarly made use of by respectable people, but Monday is pre-eminently known as the Family Day. There is no fear of the rowdles and the bad women then. The latter part of the week and Sunday are the favorite time of the male and female roughs. Then any respectable person is lost who gets amongst them. But Monday is proverbially as quiet at Coney Island as the Sabbath is in the city of a midsummer's day. The lamb-like shore and the lion-like ocean lie down together, so to speak, and the sea-shell bleat of the one and the thunder-throated roar of the other coalesce peacefully. It almost makes one cool to write about it, and this hot day I feel as though I should like to go ahead of Sidney Smith's idea, and take off my body and sit my soul. ALI BABA.

WANT OF SLEEP .- Opium or morphine is usually prescribed as a soporific. Both are violent remedies, and react violently; producing nausea, headache and prostration. They are often given when they are not needed; and not unfrequently they increase the irritation of the brain instead of soothing it. Probably in seventy-five cases out of a hundred in which they are administered, PLANTATION BITTERS, given in moderate doses and at proper intervals, would cult to compose their minds to sleep after lying down at night, or whose slumbers are disturbed by bad dreams, or are too brief to afford due nourishment, are advised to try the PLANTATION BITTERS as an anodyne; for this comprehensive medicine is not only a tonic and alterative, but a delightful sedative -a "balm of hurt minds," as well as a reviviner of enfeebled frames.

Its use, as a means of producing healthful sleep, involves none of the unpleasant secondary consequences of a resort to the former narcotics. They all, without exception, excite the stomach; while the effect of the Bitters is to tone, and without irritating that sensitive organ.

CONGRESS.

Continued from the Third Edition. Mr. Bayard advocated the proposition which had been made at his suggestion as bringing under taxa-tion a species of property which had no claim to exemption.

Mr. Edmunds characterized the proposition as direct repudiation, as untenable on constitutional grounds, not to say dishonorable. If the principle was correct the Government might take from the bonds fifty or one hundred per cent., and thus re-pudiate the whole interest.

Mr.A. G. Thurman said that there was not any sub-stantial difference between taxing the interest on the stantial difference between taxing the interest on the bonds and the taxing of incomes. If one was repudiation so was the other. The only lota of difference was that by this proposition the government got five per cent. on the entire interest of these bonds whether held at home or abroad, while under the in come tax law our own bondholders were taxed and foreign bohdholders went free. He asserted tha the government had never promised it would no tax bonds.

Mr. Sherman said this was an effort to create an income tax directly discriminating against the Government bonds. It was to the honor of the country that since the foundation of the Government until very recently, no such proposition had ever been made. If a discrimination of this kind was tolerated. made. If a discrimination of this kind was tolerated, Congress would soon discriminate against other in dividual interests, such as shipping and cotton, to the great injury of commerce and the Southern stable. He looked upon it as a mere political dogma. Mr. Davis said he was amused to see gentlemen who were chin deep in repudiation affecting to be horror stricken at the idea of taxing the bonds. He called attention to the persistence. called attention to the persistence with which the Committee on Claims had refused to make compensation for private property taken for public use, re-pudiating the obligations of the Government to pay these claims. This indebtedness to-day to the pudiating the obligations of the Government to pay these claims. This indebtedness to-day to the States of Kentucky, Maryland, and others not in rebellion amounted to ten million dollars.

Mr. Corbett was hostile to the amendment, as opening the door to a coalition between the Democratic party and the South, with a view to taxing the bonds to an extent to make them as worthless as Confederate scrip.

Mr. Rice remarked that the tax was to be imposed upon the interest as property. While favorable to an income tax, he would not lay a direct tax upon property.

Mr. Morton held that the withholding of one half per cent. would be a violation of the contract between the Government and the bondholder, by which the former was pledged to pay six per cent.

Mr. Stockton said he was unable to see any difference between the proposed tax and that imposed upon the salaries of Government efficers, by which the Government withheld a portion of their compensation.

Mr. Casserly held that the power to tax the bonds was derived from the inherent right of the Government to tax privileges and benefits expressly conferred. In reply to Mr. Morton he argued that the income tax had operated upon incomes derived from bonds without any charge of a violated contract. In answer to Mr. Sherman, be said there was not a page on the tax list that did not contain discriminating taxes.

House.

Mr. Woodward contended that any judicial authority would decide that not only were the Five-twenty bonds payable in greenbacks under the law of 1862, but that that was so clearly the intention of Congress but that that was so clearly the intention of Congress that Mr. Thaddeus Stevens had declared that it would be a public crime to take the people's money and pay in gold a debt which it was agreed to pay in greenbacks. Applying to the law the rules of English grammar, there was not a schoolmaster in the land who could doubt its true construction.

Mr. Schenck argued if there had been any ambiguity in the law of 1862 that ambiguity had been removed by the law of March 18, 1869.

Mr. Judd moved to amend the fourth section by striking out the words "which, in his opinion and discretion, can be conveniently applied to that pur-discretion, can be conveniently applied to that pur-pose, "inserting instead the words, "derived under the provisions of this act." He explained his object by stating that if this bill became a law, the Secretary of the Treasury might, without selling a single four per cent. bond, go to work and redeem 5-20 bonds in coin, and he wished such right to redeem limited to the proceeds derived under this bill.

Mr. Woodward, in support of his position, read from Legal-tender act that clause which declares the notes issued under it to be lawful money and legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, within the United States, except duties on imports and interest on the bonds of the United imports and interest on the bonds of the United States.

Mr. Voorhees sustained the position of Mr. Woodward, and quoted in its support the declaration of Mr. T. Stevens, chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means in the House, and John Sherman, chairman of the Finance Committee in the Senate. He held that no subsequent legislation could affect a contract, and demanded that it shall be carried out according to law and not according to any perversion of law. There was no finality on that subject, except obedience to contract after further discussion.

sion. Mr. Holman's amendment was rejected—yeas, 42; nays, 128.

The Republicans who voted aye, were Beatty, Coburn, Orth, and Tyner, and the Democrats who voted no Barpum, Brooks (of N. Y), Randall, Slocum, Stone, and sum. Brooks (of N. Y.), Randall, Slocull, Blooks, and Swann.

Mr. Judd modified his amendment by inserting the words "which may be derived from the sale of any of the bonds, the issue of which is provided for in this act."
Mr. Schenck moved to amend Mr. Judd's amendment by preceding it with these words.—"Which he may lawfully apply to such purpose, or." Both amendments were agreed to, so as to make the fourth section read "That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and instructed, with any coin now in the Treasury of the United States, which he may lawfully apply to such purpose, or which may be derived from sale of any of the bonds, the issue of which is provided for in this act."
