THE DAILY EVENING TELEGRAPH-PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1870

NEWS SUMMARY.

City Affalrs.

-The New Orleans firemen left this city for New York last evening, starting from the depot in West Philadelphia. They were accompanied to the train by a large number of Philadelphia firemen.

-At about 7 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in the bottling establishment of T. H. Lutkenhaus, Nos. 1233 and 1235 Warnock street. The building, which was an old wooden affair of but little value, was entirely destroyed, but the stock was mainly saved. The loss is about $800; insured for $1900 in the Royal of verpool.

-Before Ala, 'man Smith, yesterday after-noon, Patrick Douglas was charged by Ida Douglas and Thomas Douglas with committing an assault and battery upon them at No. 110 Gatzmer street. Patrick used both a blackjack and a knife on Thomas, and on the lady he used a club and choked her. He was held in $1200 bail to answer.

James Peters, a commission merchant. doing business at Spruce street and Delaware avenue, had a hearing yesterday afternoon before Recorder Givin, on the oath of James Benezett, residing at Mullica Hill, New Jersey, charged with embezzlement as consignee or factor. The evidence was that a year ago Benezett consigned four hundred baskets to Peters for sale, since which he had received no returns. Peters was held in $800 bail to answer.

-The semi-annual meeting of the alumni of the Central High School was held last night in the Central High School building, Mr. E. H. D. Fraley presiding, and Thomas V. Williams acting as Secretary. The committee appointed at the last meeting to consider the propriety of substituting an annual reunion for the annual address, reported through their chairman, A. Eugene Smith, in favor of the project. The report was adopted, and the committee was continued with power to act.

Twenty-one additional members, comprising the four-year graduates, were elected. Messrs. Henry R. Edmunds and C. C. Taylor were elected Vice-Presidents; Mr. Frederick F. Christine, Treasurer, and Thomas V.

Williams, Secretary. —The Board of Aldermen met in the Common Council Chamber at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, President Alderman Beitler in the chair.

After the calling of the roll Alderman Car-penter, on behalf of the committee to prepare a plan for the conduct of the election officers, reported that under the new law the election will have to be conducted as formerly, and suggested that the following resolution be adopted: -

That when the board meet for the election of canvassers that daily sessions be held, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., and adjourning not later than 6 o'clock, until the nominations for the wards be complete. The report was adopted and the committee discharged.

A motion was then adopted that the board meet the first Monday in August to elect canvassers, commencing with First division, First ward. Adjourned.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS.-Throughout the whole of Great Russia the dwellings of the pea-santry are still mere log-huts, frequently without chimneys, and uniformly containing only one room, which is the common dormi tory. The rigor of the climate renders these habitations miserable in the extreme. Swarming with vermin, where not filled with smoke, and without ventilation, the hut is generally in winter the refuge of the sow and her farrows, of the lamb and the weakly sheep, as well as of men, women, and children. contains no furniture beyond a deal table and a bench against each wall. Pillows, and sometimes felt, constitute the only bedding, the place of which is supplied by the sheepskin, that seldom leaves the peasant men and women of Russia. Their domestic utensils consist of a few pots of burned clay, or castiron, the "samovar," or tea-urn, being only found in the hut of a well-to-do peasant. An earthenware cup and saucer, or a glass tumbler, are among the articles which the peasant deposits in a small cupboard below the images of saints. There is no garden to this log hut. The heavily-worked peasant woman can scarcely find time to attend to the plot of flax which belongs to her individually, and on which the family depends for the more neces-sary articles of clothing. Any great material improvement of these peasant dwellings can only follow on education and enlightenment, for it is the tendency of the half-civilized peasant to expend his superfluous money on articles of personal adornment rather than on those of mere comfort, of which he has in reality no understanding. In villages on the Volga, where peasant families share the same roof with domestic fowls and animals, and burn wood laths instead of tallow candles or oil, the women attire themselves on holidays in crinolines, and silk damask dresses and jackets, while the men cover their unsightly sheepskins with good broadcloth. BELGIAN MINERS. - The Food Journal gives some interesting statistics in reference to the food of the Belgian miners. According to the reports, which it takes as authentic, the Belgian miners eat two pounds of bread per day, about two ounces of butter, one ounce of coffee and chickory mixed; while for dinner they have in the evening a portion of vegetables mixed with potatoes, weighing at the most one and a half pounds. They have meat on Sundays and festivals, but during the week they drink neither beer nor other fermented liquors. Coffee is their only beverage. Yet these men are hardy and healthy. It is not the coffee which sustains them, for it constitutes but one-thirty-fifth of the nutritious properties of their aliment, though M. de Gasparin, in a paper read some years ago before the French Academy of Sciences, attempted to prove, from certain tables, that the waste in liquid excretion is less where coffee is drunk than at other times. The miners' coffee is not like the French cafe au lait, for it has but one-tenth part of milk in it; he drinks several pints in the day, and eats only bread and butter until the vegetable meal of the evening. The albuminous sub-stance which enters into the rations of the Belgian miner is thus reduced from twentythree grammes to fifteen grammes of azote. This is less nutritions even than the diet of the monks of La Trappe at Aiguebelle. Here is, therefore, proof that life and health can exist throughout a whole population with less nutritive substance than is generally considered necessary.

-The heirs of the inventor of the cast-iron plough are to reap the benefit of their sire's ingenuity by means of a Congressional appropriation.

-More gloomy news is to hand from the West. All the Northern Cheyennes and the Arrapahoes, hitherto peaceable, have announced their intention of going on the war path. A war camp of Utes was recently found a hundred miles south of Rawlins, and Red Cloud is thought to be preparing for hostilities.

-In the United States Senate yesterday, after the close of our report, the Naval Appropriation bill was taken up. An evening session was held, but nothing of general interest was transacted.

In the House a bill was passed allowing the Secretary of the Treasury to increase the pay of customs inspectors. The motion to recon-sider the vote in the Louisiana case of Darrell vs. Bailey, giving Darrell the seat, was tabled, and Darrell was sworn in. A conference report on the Pension bill was agreed to. Pending consideration of the case of Patrick Woods, the House adjourned.

AN ILL-SPENT LIFE.

The Belgian papers record the trial of an Englishman at Brussels for swindling. The primer, a venerable-looking old man with whte hair, arrived some time since at the Hoel de l'Europe, accompanied by a young woman, who he said was his wife. He gave the name of Richard Conway Seymour, and, after staying at the hotel for some time, attempted to leave the city without paying any of the bills he had incurred. The Etoile Bege states that the prisoner, under the name of Horace Belmore, was condemned to hard lator for life by the Assize Court of the Seine in 828; under the name of Amyas Deane he wa sentenced at Brussels to ten years' hard labr; and in the name of Williams he had ben sentenced by the Assize Court of he Pas de Calais to five years' hard labor. Itappears that he was pardoned in 1848, and in \851 or 1852 he was arrested at Calais when about to embark for England, and under the rane of Cavendish he was condemned to fifteel years' hard labor. While in prison he dedared that he was the righful Dake of Devombire, and having succeeded in corrupting one of the prison officers' made his escape, iguised as a woman. He was, however, recaltured at Havre and sent to the bagne, whre he fulfilled his sentence. In 1867 he we charged at Lambeth Police Court with haing committed bigamy, and underwent a tem of imprisonment. At other times he ha been convicted at Calais, Boulogne, Havre ar Nardes, under the various names of Sey-mor, Ponsonby, Duke of Devonshire, Ben-tink, and other aristocratic appellations. Hilmardiages were frequent, and it is cortain thathre, at least, of his assumed wives are stilliving The Brussels court upon this lastoccast n convicted the prisoner of swindlig and passing by a false name, and sen-tened him 's twelve months' imprisonment.

Hall in the London papers relating to the com-pletion of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" is as follows:--"We find that erroneous reports are in circulation respecting 'The Mystery of Ed-win Drood,' the novel on which Mr. Dickens was at work when he died. It has been suggested that the tale is to be finished by other hands. We hope you will allow us to state in your columns that Mr. Dickens has left three numbers complete, in addition to those already published, this being one-half of the story as it was intended to be written. These numbers will be published, and the fragment will so re-main. No other writer could be permitted by us to complete the work which Mr. Dickens has left.
