Death by Piano.

Piano-drumming is an ism of the United States rather than of New York, but it has probably its highest point of development here. There is no other city of the Union where the scales are more mercilessly run, the gamut more implacably persecuted than in New York. If the census-takers would only put down the number of piano-players they would gratify the curiosity and receive the thanks of hundreds of invalids. I believe that many a convalescent has been planned into a relapse, and thence to the grave. Many a moribund has been hastened to the tomb at a much quicker pace than he would have otherwise been by "Days of Absence," executed by one digit. More than one brain fever has been generated by a long course of "Shoo-Fly." There be nervous sufferers who will not survive "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines." I dare say typographical has been promoted by "Walking Down Broadway," and I have little doubt that mental imbecility has been caused by "Tessels on her boots." I do not know that the piano has ever figured in health-office returns as a cause of death, but I have my suspicions that as many die from it every year as from sunstroke or drowning. You cannot treat it as you would a fat-boiling establishment and indict it as a nuisance. You may get over the melodious death, but you have to swallow it whether you will or not. You are like the drunkard whose physician punishes him by condemning him to have the taste and essence of whisky inserted into everything he eats and drinks. With every mouthful swallowed his disgust grows more intense until he frantically begs to be given his natural food again. The confining and piano practice—and I verily believe there are more of them in New York than in Philadelphia and Boston put together—is like the despot who ordered his slave to be put to death by being deprived of sleep. He beats the brains of slumber out with his flats, and sharp, and materials, and frightens pleasant dreams away with his perpetual loud pedal.

Amusements—Floating Fragments.

It is softly whispered through the lobbies of the Grand Opera House that that great and good man, Mr. James Fisk, Jr., who is notorious for two virtues—devotion to the public and abnegation of self—is shortly to welcome to Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue no less a novelty than old Offenbach himself. The "old man" having refreshed himself in and around Enns for some weeks, is pronounced by this time sufficiently well to mind his ps and qs and to return to business. It is reported that Mr. Fisk has almost completed arrangement with him, and offered him a sum large enough to induce him to lead the orchestra in person, with perhaps a very small perhaps—Schneider to do the principal soprano singing. Enns is very confidently named as having been engaged, and an early date in September is mentioned as the commencement of the opera bouffe season.

At Wallack's Mr. Emmet, whose performances until very recently have been confined to Dutch specialties on the minstrel and miscellaneous stage, is nightly appearing in that magnificent masterpiece by Mr. Gayler entitled Frits. In all the stupendous works of genius to which Mr. Gayler's mighty brain has given birth, nothing quite so degrading and disgusting has yet been apparent. Much of the plot consists in the efforts of the villains of the piece to drug, in a concert-saloon, an innocent girl whom they have captured, and this intention is presented again and again to the attention of the audience in all the most prudent forms short of outspoken indecency. Under the summer regime Wallack's suffers greatly. In the topmost gallery the soda-water bottles pop as perpetually as at the Bowery, and the enthusiasm of the public over the blunders and triumphs of "Frits" and over the havoc he makes among the idioms of the English language is of the loudest description.

Some months ago it was proposed to give a grand benefit to old George Holland, who is now in his eightieth year. Some of the reasons given for it are curious in their logic. When Madame Bishop returned to this country after an absence of no one knows how many years, her friends endeavored to create a furor in her behalf on the representation that, during her tour around the world, she had been exposed for thirteen days in an open boat. That was a very good reason for our extending our sympathies to a delicate woman, but scarcely one for giving our support to a passée prima-donna who was never first-class. In the same way for Mr. Holland. He has been a popular actor for more than fifty years, and has had ample opportunities for laying up a sufficient sum of money to yield him a good deal of comfort in his old age. He has been paid as well as any actor of equal ability ever was, and ought to have saved something—as every one ought whose means are above those required for the absolute necessities of existence. However, far be it from me to wish to detract from the good opinion in which he may be held in Philadelphia, or from the interest with which any piece of govt-tune happening to him would be received there. Only I do not see why a veteran actor who has neglected to provide for his old age should meet with more sympathy and assistance than veterans in other professions.

Balm for Working-Women.

The question whether the working-women of New York are so badly off as they are represented to be, or need remain so if they are, is one worth considering. For instance, in many of the stores on Broadway six dollars are asked for an organdy dress, the material for which cost only one-third that amount, and which had only three days' labor bestowed upon it. A woman who has a little money to invest, instead of taking boarders (O boarding! how many crimes are committed in thy name!) might hire some very modest premises a block or so from Broadway, pay a woman from two dollars and fifty cents to three dollars and fifty cents per day for making just such dresses as this, which she could dispose of for forty dollars at a considerable profit. In the same way with still cheaper dresses. Those which sell in Broadway stores for twenty dollars might be sold at a reasonable profit at twelve, provided the seller was content to have modest quarters out of Broadway, and would also allow the working-woman to be paid a much more remunerative sum than under the present system finds its way into her pocket. The love of paying exorbitantly for articles in Broadway stores is not inveterate when it is discovered that as good an article may be obtained at a cheaper rate elsewhere.

Extensive Bank Note Forgery—Spurious Paper and Counterfeiting Apparatus Seized.
From the San Francisco Bulletin, July 13.

The record of arrests at the City Prison, yesterday afternoon, contained the following entry:—"Ah Tuck and Ah Tan, forgers, arrested by Crowley & Ellis." The prisoners are charged with causing to be printed in this city a counterfeit bank note of the denomination of $5 on the "Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China." In making the arrest the lithographic stones and apparatus for printing and notes to the amount of $35,000 were secured by the police. The enterprise, although conceived and executed by a Chinaman, is one of the most remarkable in the counterfeiting line which ever occurred in the country.

The bank the paper of which was to be counterfeited, has its principal house in London, with branches in Australia, Hong-Kong, and other cities in India and China. Its notes, of course, are made in England, the process being very complicated. In the two upper corners of the five-dollar note are the figures "50" on a dark background, which is executed by machinery before being transferred by the lithographer to the stone. Should few lithographers have the necessary apparatus for the execution of this kind of work. About two months ago Captain Ellis, of the detective force, had occasion to visit the lithographic establishment of George H. Baker, of this city. While there Mr. Baker called his attention to a small specimen of very fine work executed by him for a Chinaman. It consisted of a figure 50 on a dark ground, but without the "50" on a dark ground. Mr. Baker, at that time, was unacquainted as to the use the design was to be put to. Captain Ellis became suspicious that there was something wrong, and, on consultation with Chief Crowley, it was determined that the case should be closely watched. Mr. Baker kept the officers promptly informed of each new incident as it was developed. The work had been ordered by Ah Tuck. Being greatly pleased with the work so far as he had progressed he directed that the $5 note be printed. The note was then being printed in a superior article of tea from China, and he desired to use the design as a trade-mark for all tea of that quality. From one step to another Ah Tuck advanced with his enterprise, and finally ordered a complete lithograph of a five-dollar note.

In explanation of this project, he stated that his father was a stockholder in the bank and a director of the Hong Kong branch, and he desired to show him that the counterfeit could be better work of this character than the artists of England. The lithograph was completed according to order, and a large quantity of the notes were printed. A small portion of them were given to Ah Tuck and the remainder were retained by Mr. Baker. The note was then being printed in a superior article of tea from China, and he desired to use the design as a trade-mark for all tea of that quality. From one step to another Ah Tuck advanced with his enterprise, and finally ordered a complete lithograph of a five-dollar note.

Soon after the two officers became satisfied of the character of the transaction which they were watching, they communicated the facts to Mr. Kelson, of the California Bank, and he communicated by telegraph with the London bank.

It was the design of the San Francisco officers to let Ah Tuck sail with his $35,000 in notes and the lithographic stones, for future use, and send a detective on the same steamer to make the arrest, after a more full development of the scheme, and perhaps the discovery of other accomplices. But when the London bank was informed that a large issue of the spurious notes had already been printed they became excited, and sent on a despatch by cable urging the immediate arrest of the counterfeiters and seizure of the notes and counterfeiting apparatus. In accordance with this desire the arrest was made at San Francisco. Ah Tan was arrested as an accomplice of Ah Tuck, and so far as is known, he is the only accomplice in the city. The arresting officers found in the possession of the prisoners the signatures of the officers of the bank who had been printed, and the necessary material for printing notes by wholesale in China. It has been ascertained that Ah Tuck went at first to the Eastern States to carry out his designs, but he was unable to obtain the same facilities there as he had in Philadelphia. He returned to this city nine months ago, and has since that time been assiduously engaged in attending to the details of his business. Among other difficulties which he encountered was that of procuring the right kind of paper. American bank-note paper would not do, and one of two kinds first tried were found to shrink in size. He at last procured a quantity of the right kind from England. Of the $35,000 which had been printed, Mr. Baker had delivered about $5000 to Ah Tuck. Some experiments had been tried with a few of them by smoking and handling, to give them an old appearance, as though they had been repeatedly handled.

OBITUARY.

Mourn with me, O ye sisters in faith! for the hand of death hath removed from our midst a faithful and blessed mother in Israel.

Weep! ye poor widows and orphans, for one whose ear had ever attended to your cry, whose hand was ever wide open to your wants, to you and all ye poor petitioners, be ye Jew or Gentile, will the memory of Mrs. J. L. Florence be keenly felt.

No one could have known Mrs. Florence without being deeply impressed with her sterling merit. As a mother, she exercised the sweetest influence by loving tenderness and forbearance. Moderate, yet firm in her demands of her children, from the earliest period of their existence she was mindful of their spiritual as well as mundane requirements, ever watchful of their comforts, and strongly tenacious of their firm adherence to our holy faith, to which she steadfastly clung in weal or in woe.

With her pious sisters, she ever associated herself in diffusing the blessings of charity. In her home, in her walks abroad, and on her bed of death, we behold the beauty of holiness.

May God in His infinite mercy and love cause the mantle of Mrs. Florence to fall wisely on all her descendants, so that they may be fully imbued with her faith, hope, and charity!

Be comforted, ye bereaved ones! The disembodied soul of this pious, honored mother and friend now wings its way to Paradise, where in ecstasy it will unite with angels, exclaiming "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts!"

FROM WASHINGTON.

Illegal Trade in Tobacco.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A circular letter from the Internal Revenue Office has been issued, stating that for some time evidence has been accumulating of a constant and increasing illegal trade in manufactured tobacco in the rural and border districts of the South and West, largely through the instrumentality of peddlers and small manufacturers, who, it is said, sell tobacco at prices which preclude the idea of honest payment of all tax due thereon.

These tobaccos are put on the market by using—First, Counterfeit stamps.

Second, By the use of genuine stamps which are removed from packages which have been emptied; and Third, By the getting up of empty stamped packages of stamped portions thereof and using them a second time.

The Commissioner therefore calls on all local internal revenue officers to use the utmost vigilance and energy to break up this illegal business, recommending them particularly to keep a close watch over the doings of tobacco peddlers, examine their stock as often as found travelling through the country selling tobacco, compel them to destroy the stamped portion of every box as soon as emptied, and on refusal to do so institute proceedings for fines and penalties.

Several other remedies to prevent violations of our law in this respect are cited, the Commissioner asserting that, by vigorous and unceasing efforts on the part of local revenue officers, these frauds can and will be suppressed, and it is the expectation of the revenue office that such will be the case.

The officers of the latter steamer make no mention of having been disturbed.

A woman near Quincy, Illinois, has been weeping continually for three weeks. PRESIDENT LINCOLN, AT THE OUT break of the War, by proclamation, called for forty thousand volunteers to suppress the Rebellion, and the War Department promised that each soldier should have a bounty of $100, when discharged.

THE SUPREMACY OF THE UNITED STATES HAS DECIDED THAT THIS PROMISED BOUNTY MUST NOW BE PAID. We are prepared to pay for every soldier who enlisted before July 22, 1861, for three years, and was subsequently honorably discharged, whether he served for a short or long time.

It is desirable to have the soldier's discharge, but the bounty can be obtained without the discharge if lost or cannot be had. No collection, no charge. Call upon or write to the General Civil Agency, No. 135 S. SEVENTH Street, Philadelphia.

THERE ARE MANY SOLDIERS AND Sailors, their orphans and widows, and their heirs, who have good claims for arrears of pay, bounties, money, commutation of travel or commutation of furloughs, which ought to be paid.

In many such cases applications have been made, but remain unsettled for want of proof or from neglect, and frequently from incompetency of the agent who filed the claim. We will give advice to our comrades when written to for it or called upon, free of any charge, gladly.
