

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, July 27, 1870.

Musical Trampers. The wandering musicians of this city can scarcely be called an outcrop of the hot weather, but they are growing to no other reason. When the pavement bakes into brittle flakes the mud splashed upon it, and causes the accidental drop of water to hiss and sputter like a kettle boiling over, musical trampers abound and bask and devote themselves to their beautiful art. With such a sun beating down upon them, no wonder their strains are melting. If it were true—as some one says it is—that Gothic architecture is made frozen, I should not expect to see an Episcopal church spire remaining in New York. But the vagrant musician is a phenomenon who defies the most strategic combinations of the thermometer, and, under an aggravating semblance of coolness, blows his instrument and eats his bread in the sweat, not of his own, but of everybody else's face. From morning until midnight he haunts the neighborhood of business offices and private residences, tortures you, while perpetually requesting you not to "boder" him, with his melodious adjuration of a familiar household insect inseparably blended, in common parlance, with the prefix "shoo"; and, while you are eating the most important meal of the day, informs you, in a musical refrain, of the remarkable diet upon which Captain Jinks, that veterinarian of the marines, put his horses. It is a great pity that the evil of street musicians, since it cannot be suppressed, is not regulated by law, as an evil of a somewhat more vicious type is in St. Louis. It is exasperating to know that a strict excise law prevents hard drinkers making beasts of themselves after midnight and on Sundays, while no similar regulation hinders hard workers from becoming victims to carbureted organ-grinders, hideous tamborine girls, and reeking performers on the harp and cornet-piston. When, commencing on your soup or fish, a cap smelling of the gutter is stretched toward you from the basement window, and the shadow of a muddy-faced Italian boy in tatters is thrown across the table-cloth, you find yourself doubting the existence of a perfectly wise and good Superintendent of Police, and emptying your pockets of their change, you thrust it upon the suppliant, and ejaculate, with a voice husky with emotion, and a face red with half-swallowed soup, "Go! and ne'er approach me with that strain again!"

I have studied these street musicians, and I believe them to be thoroughly unprincipled. I have watched them pounce upon pavements when the thick layers of tan proclaimed the fact that invalids in the second-story from needed only a touch or two of "Up in a Balloon" (executed with variations upon the hand-organ) to be sent down among the dead men. Sometimes street musicians, especially when several travel together, and one of them performs upon the piccolo or some other pleasant ear-piercing instrument, have a neat taste for the satirical, and I have heard a band of this nature play "Rock me to Sleep, Mother," just one hour after midnight. If you can imagine Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup being set to music and sung as a lullaby to a baby with the colic, you can form some faint idea of the effect of that lullaby upon the neighborhood.

Amusements. Much of what purports to be fact in regard to autumn amusements is merely conjecture. The little that may reasonably be relied upon may be found in the following items:—Nilsson gives her first concert in America at Steiway Hall on the evening of Monday, Sept. 14, seven weeks from next Monday. Her agents "take their cut" that the six-column biography which appeared last Sunday in one of the New York papers was Mr. Bennett's gratuitous tribute to her genius, although it was worth $5000 to them. Madame Marie Seebach, the German tragedienne, will make her first appearance in America at the French Theatre on the evening of Monday, Sept. 12. Her support will consist of Madlle Veneta, Madlle Antonie Bessinger, Madlle Marguerite von Ziegler, Madlle Elvira Bardenheer, Herr Heinrich Jantsch, Herr Hermann Harry, Herr Hugo Edward, and Herr Ludovic Geiger. The first piece presented will probably be Faust, in order to allow Madame Seebach to appear as "Marguerite," in which she is said to be astonishingly great. Mr. Jefferson is to play "Rip Van Winkle" for an indefinite number of months at Booth's, Saturday night, however, being set apart for The Lady of the Lake. The Olympic will open in a few weeks with Mr. Fox in a new pantomime. Wallace's will probably present School during the first week of the new season, and "stick to the legitimate" during the greater part of the term. Niblo's is in the hands of cunning workmen who gild and fresco, and when it opens its doors will base its attractions upon a play by Bret Harte, the California originality. It is rumored that Mr. Daly, as lessee of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, intends to galvanize Moliere, in a style similar to that in which he unwound the winding sheets of oblivion from The Good-Natured Man. Janaschek intends to appear in English, though when is more than I can say; and it is pretty well understood that Madame Lanner, the magnificent pantomimist and dancer, will dance at the Grand Opera House until the beginning of autumn, when an opera bouffe company will arrive. It is thought that Nilsson will be the fashion and sensation of the winter, and that the entire season will be unusually brilliant.

The Case of John Keal. John Keal, who is sentenced to be hanged on the 5th of August for killing Officer Smedick, has made one last desperate struggle for life. Under the advice of his counsel, ex-Judge Stuart, he has published what purports to be a detailed and truthful account of the circumstances under which the fatal pistol was fired. He declares in the most solemn manner that he was persecuted for months by Smedick in the most violent and meretricious manner; that Smedick, under show of arresting him for drunkenness, beat him and clashed him, over and over again, until he was one big bruise; that that officer, by representing him as a thief, caused him to lose several situations that were necessary to his livelihood. Real further declares that the pistol with which he shot the officer, so far from having been purchased for that purpose, was bought at the recommendation of a friend as a means of protecting a whiskey still on board a barge; that the shooting was unpremeditated and was the impulsive result of an outrageous, unprovoked assault of Smedick upon him; and that the second shot, which was the fatal one, was discharged unconsciously in the excitement of the moment. "In view of these circumstances, to the truth of which he calls upon God to bear witness, he prays that sentence of death may be changed into that of imprisonment for life. It is evident that he clings to life with desperate tenacity. Whatever the truth may be, the general reader cannot read this appeal without feeling that the unhappy man has expressed in it the fears and hopes of his whole being. With the rope round his neck the doomed one feels the wings of hope beating against his bosom, and thinks he sees a ray of light flickering around the scaffold whose shadow falls across the grating of his cell. ALI BABA.
