Anna Cora Mowait Ritchie.

The London Athenœum announces the death of Mrs. Mowatt Ritchie, the American actress and authoress. This lady was born in the year 1891 in Bordeaux, France, where her father, Mr. Samuel G. Ogden, of New York, was then engaged in business. She was the tenth in a family of seventeen. Her childhood was passed in an elegant residence in the neighborhood of her birthplace, where she often participated in amateur dramatic performances, with which her brothers and sisters amused themselves. These took place in a small private theatre attached to the house. When six years old the family returned to New York. At the age of fourteen, while at school, she attracted the attention of Mr. James Mowatt, a lawyer of New York, to whom she was engaged by her parents, with the understanding that she was not to be married until she was seventeen years of age. But before that time she made a runaway match with him. During the first two years of her marriage she continued her literary studies, of which she had been very fond, and published two lengthy poems. Her health beginning to fall at that time, she made a visit of a year and a half to Europe, where she wrote for private performance a play called Gulzora, or the Persian Slave, afterwards published. After her return, financial difficulties having overtaken her husband, she gave a series of dramatic readings in Boston, New York, and other cities, as a means of support. Her exertions in this line produced an illness which made her a confirmed invalid for two years. During this time she contributed to various magazines under the name of "Helen Berkley," and also wrote a comedy named Fashion, which was produced with considerable success at the Park Theatre, New York, in 1845. In course of the same year she made her debut at this theatre as "Pauline," in the Lady of Lyons, and for many years after she was a popular actress. In 1847 she made a professional tour to England, where her husband died. In 1854 she played a series of farewell engagements in the United States, and left the stage. Soon after, she married Mr. W. F. Ritchie, of Richmond, Va., and has since lived in retirement. She was the author of the drama of Armand, and of the novel "A Fortune Hunter," of the "Autobiography of an Actress," and of "Mimie Life; or, Before and Behind the Curtain." Since her retirement she has busied herself in literary pursuits, writing short stories and correspondence for the magazines and daily

From the N. F. Herald,

"11 e Wall street markets continue extremely dull.

Most of the prominent operators have gone to the country, and the leading spirits have taken a temporary departure for Long Branch to attend the races. At times to-day the Long-Room was almost deserted. The early board was startled by the announcement of the murder of Mr. Benjamin Nathan. By resolution, a special committee was appointed to assist in the search for the assassins, and a reward of $10,000 was offered for their capture. The flag of the Stock Exchange was half-masted out of respect to the deceased. to the deceased.

"The gold market was steadily depressed by bet-ter quotations from London, where, although some thirty failures have resulted from the present crisis, our bonds since settlement day have steadily im-proved. The 62's came 83 this afternoon. The German bankers were also large sellers on alleged speculative account and were also purchasers of bonds. They seemed unwilling to leave the street short of the market, however, for after gold had been depressed to 120½ by the news, bogus or otherwise, that the Duc de Gramont and Lord Lyons had a conference with a view to English mediation for news, they commenced buying gold and selling had a conference with a view to English mediation for peace, they commenced buying gold and selling to not, with the effect of putting the former to 120%. The street was disposed to sell gold on the quotation of 83 for Five-twenties in London, and hence the small rise attending their purchases. The higher quitations of the forencon, when gold ranged from 121%, £121½, were due to the report that the shipnen ent of specie by the City of Paris in the morning will be about two millions, and that the total export to-morrow will be over two and a half millions. Foreign exchange was fairly active but without change in rates.

"The duliness at the Stock Exchange prevents activity in the money market, despute the weakness of the reserve of the banks by the specie exports. The rate on call ranged from three to six per cant. Commercial paper was moderately active for prime double names at seven per cent. discount.

"The Government market was favorably affected by the foreign advices, and prices sharply advanced, the "67s touching 169% and "68s 116. The movement was so sudden as to arouse suspicion of speculative manipulation, especially as the foreign bankers were known to have already bought large quantities of bonds, for which, in the presence of merely nominal quotations at Frankfort, they were desirous of getting a market for here. Hence, when they bought gold to cover their "shorts," as above noted, they were also sellers of bonds late in the day, but the market not being firm at the highest prices, they found themselves unable to dispose of their load except at a concession. Hence, the market closed lower."
