MEW-YORRISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10, 1870. The Armed Neutrality of Boarding-Houses. One of the opportunities provided by the war in Europe is that of studying the manner in which the German nationality and the French nationality evince themselves at the club-house, at the hotels, in places of public amusement, and, above all, at the boarding-houses. The boarding-house of high tone is a very fair place in which to study this contrast of nationality, because people from all parts of the world, and of pretty good manners, go there to remain for a longer period than that for which they remain at hotels, and consequently there is larger room for the manifestation of character. And though during the course of the year almost every nationality is represented at the large, firstclass boarding-house, the German element and the French element are more often represented than any others. The war between Prussia and France has therefore operated very seriously in setting by the ears those Gallic slppers of absinthe and Teutonic swallowers of beer who had heretofore been the best of friends. Monsieur and Mynheer scowl at each other across the table, and confide to their neutral neighbors their sentiments about the Prince Imperial's "baptism of fire" and "Our Fritz" respectively. The dinner-table in general presents the spectacle of an armed neutrality, engaged, during the intervals between the courses, in watching the expressive shadows that float across the countenances of the rival nationalities. Peace has fied from every boarding-house dinner-table at which the French and the German element are brought face to face. Mutual sarcasm comes on with the soup, and reciprocal contumely marks the advent of the coffee. At the breakfast-table the Staats Zeitung and the Courrier des Etals-Unis lie peacefully apart from each other on opposite plates; but every lover of peace knows that when the readers of these respective papers take them up and open them, it is wise to try to get up a general conversation, without any pauses, on indifferent topics.

The Argus Society.

The Argus Society is the name of an association which was got up six years ago. A body of respectable citizens organized what they called "The Grand Order of Argus," their object being to convict thieves and to act as a sort of vigilance committee for the detection of felons in general. I believe the society is still in existence, but its movements are made with such secrecy that those who are aware of its existence and yet are not members of it are very few indeed in number. It has not been so long in existence without having accomplished some good, although the amount of that good may not be proportionate to its aspirations. The discovery of the Greenwich Bank robbery, which took place three years ago, is due to this association. If it had succeeded in identifying the robber, the public would have a more lively sense of its importance. Three years ago it was instrumental in the discovery of the men who committed a watch robbery at Cooper Institute. It has also, at various times, made heavy and successful onslaughts on the Broadway lotteries, and it is to its influence that the sweeping away of some of these abominations is due. But it certainly never had a better field for the exercise of its ability than that which it finds spread before it in the Nathan murder. As pass by and absolutely nothing new i developed from that startling case, public interest dwindles. For a few days more the first thing for which the newspaper will be consulted will be for the satisfaction of the question, "Who killed Mr. Nathan ?" But after these days have elapsed, and unless the inquest shall bring to light some fact undreamed of now, the crime will take its stand among the bloody traditions of the city, and begin to be surrounded by something of the obscurity of a remote past. In the United States there seems to be no Argus Society (that deserves to be called such) for the detection of crime. Of what use are the hundred eyes of Argus, if each be purblind ? That appears to be the condition of the entire police force, including the detectives. The End of the Season-Mr. Jefferson, When the theatres begin to open for the fall and winter season summer is virtually at an end. The dates at which the majority of the metropolitan theatres open and shut are an excellent indication of the tone of the citizens with respect to going out of town and returning to it. Niblo's Garden and Booth's Theatre begin the season next Monday evening. At Niblo's Garden Mr. Lawrence Barrett is to appear in The Duke's Motto, and is to be supported by quite a large number of actors who hold fair positions. One of these performers is Madame Ponisi, and another is Miss Price, recently of Mrs. Drew's Theatre. At Booth's Theatre Rip Van Winkle is to be played for a space of time to which no limit is announced. We all know that Mr. Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle" is a good thing, and it is, therefore, a pity that he should ever give the public reason to think that he has given them too much of it. The time for thinking so has not yet arrived, but no one need be surprised if it does arrive before the end of the approaching season. There are two ways of looking at the question whether an actor does right in making himself the actor of one character only. One of these ways is the money-making way, and the other is the artistic. If Mr. Jefferson desires to make money only, no one who admires his "Rip Van Winkle," and also approves of erecting money into a god, will growl with him for never appearing in any other character. But it is impossible to look upon a great actor merely as a money-making machine, and therefore it is inevitable that people who hold themselves above mere money-making-and there are a few such people! -should growl with Mr. Jefferson for what seems to be a sordid, lazy, and unambitious neglect of his art. Suppose Mr. Booth should insist upon playing "Hamlet" year in and year out; suppose Ristori should perform nothing but "Elizabeth:" or suppose Mr. Clarke should stick to "Foodles," and in that manner tacitly proclaim there was nothing beyond that in the entire repertoire? The public would very naturally complain. I confess that I am tired of Mr. Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle." It is generally conceded to be pretty near perfection, but then perfection itself is intolerable when it is repeated ad infinitum in the same line. Some day or other Mr. Jefferson will "Rip Van Winkle" the public into apathy-a disaster he may avoid by a prudent alternation of the character with others in which he is less familiar to us. I know that by the expression of these sontiments I am sinning against public opinion: but in this case I am not much afraid, because I believe myself to be in the right. Mr. Jefferson would be more worthy as an artist if, like Mr. Booth, he sought to attain an equal degree of eminence in characters diametrically opposed to each other; yes, this endeavor would make a worthier artist of him, even though he failed in it. ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 10 .- All who can muster the price of an excursion ticket should indulge in a trip to the sea shore while the splendid moonlight nights last. The attractions offered by such a place of resort as Atlantic City are sufficient to draw crowds of perspiring citizens from the hot and dusty streets for the sake of even a few hours beside old ocean, but with moonlight nights thrown in as an additional inducement the seashore is absolutely irresistible. Atlantic City has never been more popular than during the present summer, and all of the hotels are deing a rushing business. In spite of the crowd there is always room for a few (more, however, and the readers of THE TELEGRAPH who wish to refresh themselves by a dip in salt water will find but little difficulty in getting good accommodations. Although there are a great many people here for the season, the summer population of Atlantic City is largely made up of transient visitors, who stop for a day or two and then travel back to the city again. As a popular watering place it has no superior on the continent, as the admirable railroad facilities enable those who usually count themselves in as members of the Can't-get-away Club to run across Jersey and get a breath of fresh sea air and a bath and travel back again without any interruption to basiness. fact, the Camden and Atlantic In Railroad can be said to have made Atlantic City, and the manner in which every train that comes in is crowded with passengers proves how largely the facilities offered by the road are appreciated by the public. There are now four regular trains to and from Philadelphia every day-the express, which leaves Philadelphia at 3.30 P. M., and Atlantic at 7.24 A. M., 1870 1,596 90 Bills receivable—temporary loans on call. 19,199 7 running through in one hour and three quarters. Personal accounts..... They who cannot let business take care of itself during the hot weather can come down to the seashore in the afternoon and return in the morning without any difficulty. A great many Amount of losses resisted by the Company Amount of all other claims against the Company, contested or otherwise, curgentlemen who have their families here do this during the entire summer, and the benefits which they who are confined all day in offices rent expenses, say. Amount required to safely reinsure all outand stores derive from the arrangement which makes it possible can scarcely be estimated.

In addition to the regular trains special excursion trains can be engaged, which leave Philadelphia at 6.15 A. M. and Atlantic at 5.35 P. M., thus giving a whole day at the seaside. There is also an extra express train every Saturday, which leaves Philadelphia at 2 P. M. and returns on Monday, leaving Atlantic at 9:40 A. M. This is for the special accommodation of those who desire to remain over Sunday, and it generally brings a goodly crowd of passengers. On Sunday there is a train from Philadelphia at 8 A. M., which returns at 4.35 P. M. It will be seen from the above statement that the railroad accommodations are most ample, and as the rates of fare are exceedingly moderate, there is no reason why any one who wishes to enjoy the sea breezes during the dog-days, cannot do so. It is an affectation with some persons to believe that Atlantic City is somewhat more plebelan than Long Branch or Cape May, but in reality there is as good society here as at any other seaside as above. resort, and common sense people can enjoy themselves as heartily as at more pretentious places of resort. The Atlantic City beach is one of the very finest on the whole coast, and the bathing is as good as can be desired, while the hotels are in first-rate hands, and the accommo dations they provide are such as will satisfy the most fastidious. It is not necessary, therefore, that a watering place so favorably situated in FRANCIS all respects should depend upon the caprices of fashion, as there are always multitudes of people who really leave home during the summer for the sake of rest, recreation, and healthful enjoyment, and for such Atlantic City offers every possible attraction. For those who have not yet taken a summer holiday now is the time of all others when a visit to Atlantic City is to be recommended. These are the last moonlight nights we will have during the best part of the season, and while the moonlight lasts the readers of THE TELEGRAPH are advised to travel across ANOTHER S Jersey and take a dip in the surf with JELLYFISH. THE PRUSSIAN ADVANCE.

At Les Etanges, within Ten Miles of Metz. The most important item of news by cable telegram this afternoon is the statement from London, to be found under our Second Edition head, that the French army on Wednesday night was falling back to the line of the Moselle, harassed by the Prussian cavalry, which has already passed Saarlouis, Falaisement, and Les Etanges. The last-named place is a village but ten miles east of Melz, thus corroborating previous advices that the Prussian advance are within a short distance of that stronghold.

The villages here, as in the neighborhood of Thionville, consist merely of one street, being built for the most part of plaster or mud-houses, roofed with tiles. The country in this vicinity is a pretty, irregular, and wooded one, the roads
