NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, Aug. 11, 1870.

Heat and Health. Because there is no epidemic in the city, the majority of citizens imagine that, taking into consideration the Intense and long-protracted he it of the weather, New York is remarkably healthy. In view of that consideration it may indeed be remarkable that New York has not een visited by an epidemic; but, apart from the Singular absence of any visitation of that sort, this city has not enjoyed an extraordinary amount of health. The death columns in the newspapers are unusually long, and metropolitan filth, festering in the inflammations of the sun, has generated a number of dreadful diseases which are peculiar to that cause. One of these diseases is the relapsing fever, which is upon the increase. During the week which ended last Saturday there were no less than thirty-five cases of this disease. The cases of small-pox were comparatively few. only six having been reported as occurring w .hin the same dates as those between which the cases of relapsing fever occurred. In New York the average death rate at present is twelve hundred per week, or about three times as large as it usually is at this season. The presence of yellow fever, also, in Philadelphia does not add to our feeling of security. I do not know that our quarantine regulations are enforced any better than yours are. But whether or not we continue to be altogether exempt from yellow fever, it is certain that the long-lasting dirtiness of our streets gives us no guarantee, so long as the hot weather lasts, that the public health will grow better and the death rate exhibit a tendency to decrease. The street-cleaning authorities have lately voted themselves an increase of pay, and therefore cannot be expected to care much whether or not their duties are cischarged.

The Champion Dutch-American Dramatist. Mr. Charles Gayler is a successful dramatic car; enter. His intellectual tool-chest has been pretty constantly at work during the past thirty years, and he has done a good deal of very successful sawing, planing, and chiselling of a dramatic nature. He possesses at least one merit which writers for the stage attain only after long experience, namely, a real or a wellpretended indifference to newspaper theatrical criticism. No one knows better than he does (except Mr. Brougham, who, from being so perfect in it himself, has a thorough appreciation of hat grade of work) that his plays are trash. He is profoundly aware of that interesting fact, and the ingenuousness with which he admits his conviction of it is one of the most refreshing phenomena to be encountered in the history of modern dramatic carpentry. But the trash is good after its kind-a first-class specimen of a last-class thing. That utterly silly and worthless Dutch-American monster, "Fritz," the latest coinage from the bullion of his brain, has been shoved upon the American public for the last nine months, and engagements have already been made to continue the shoving for fifteen consecutive months longer. His success is creditable to Mr. Gayler's discernment of the fact that there are enough asses among the theatre-going public to make the writing of worthless plays a very profitable employment. He therefore adapts his literary fodder to the digestion of that large proportion of the public, and surrounds them with sounds and sights suited to the length of their ears and the shortness of their vision. For more than a year to come he and Mr. Emmet have made engagements at various theatres-East, West, and South-with the understanding that nothing but "Fritz" is to be played by him. About one year ago Mr. Emmet was a popular music-hall performer of Dutch specialties. Mr. Gayler thought he saw in him an aptitude that would show to better advantage elsewhere than on a musichall stage. Hence Fritz-one of the most popular, one of the most "paying," and one of the trashiest plays that ever disgraced American theatrical literature. Mr. Gayler, who is a right good, whole-souled fellow, and absolutely incapable of taking offense at any criticism, however harsh, provided it is not malignant, knows as well as I do that is a statement of the fact. But by writing such plays he puts money in his purse, and that contents him. It is a pity it should be so. It is a greater pity to be obliged to believe that nine-tenths of the critics who abuse him would follow precisely in his wake if they had the opportunity. A New Case for Mr. Dunphy. Mr. Thomas Dunphy is a prominent member of the New York bar, and, in conjunction with Mr. T. J. Cummins, of the New York press, is the author of a recent book published by Diossy & Co., of this city, and entitled "Remarkable Trials in All Countries." Of course the next edition of the volume will include an account of the Nathan murder trial; but there is one amusing incident connected therewith which Mr. Dunphy will scarcely care to name. That incident is his own arrest, which took place in Brooklyn, on Tuesday evening, on the charge of having committed the murder. The arrest took place as Mr. Dunphy was walking along one of the streets of Brooklyn, and is supposed to have been made at the instigation of some one anxious to play upon Mr. Dunphy a practical joke. Perhaps it was made at the instance of some spiteful client who imagined that Mr. Dunphy had neglected his interests, and who accordingly was waiting to "serve him out." At any rate Mr. Dunphy, who was pointed out as a Mr. Gilbert of dreadful reputation, was arrested by an officer of more zeal than prudence, and was borne in triumph to the Brooklyn Police Headquarters. Thence he was victoriously conveyed to Superintendent Jour- J. K. KERR & BROTHERS. dan's official sanctum in this city. The Superintendent was not there, and the remorseless officer therefore took Mr. Dunphy, at dead of night, to the Superintendent's residence, No. 1508 Prince street. The Superintendent was not at home. The rain was coming down in torrents, and the officer pulled the tongue of the bell nearly out of the throat of the house (attribute the violent figurativeness of my language to the excitement of my feelings) in his repeated appeals to the inmates. In this predicament policeman and captive remained until 4 o'clock in the morning, when Mr. Dunphy (who probably pleaded, in a certain sense, with quite as much eloquence as he ever did in court) prevailed upon the officer to take him back to police beadquarters and procure him shelter until a reasonable hour. When, at last, the full light of morning broke upon Mr. Dunphy it found him soaked to the skin, and still guarded by the faithful functionary, who felt certain of coming into the possession of the $47,000 that had been offered for the arrest of Mr. Nathan's murderer. In one moment that dream was dissipated. Superintendent Jourdan ordered the discharge of the prisoner, and the Brooklyn policeman, with disconsolate steps; returned to his melanchely beat.

LABOR.-Labor is capital. Bestow good health upon a man, so that he can labor every six out of seven days, and no matter how poor he may have been at the commencement of life's great race, he will be certain to accumulate a fortune, provided he takes care of his earnings, PLANTATION BITTERS is certain to make the weak ones strong, and to preserve the health of the healthy. From four to six hours is considered the ordinary limit for brain work. At the expiration of this time the phosphorus is carried off, and the man becomes irritable and nervous. If he is poor, and continues on at his task, as most of poor doctors, lawyers, and editors do, he will be certain to shorten his days and fill an untimely grave, as did Sir Walter Scott, unless he uses Plantation Bitters, which speedily restores his vital energy, repairs his indigestion, and corrects the sluggish circulation of his blood.
