The Situation—The Increased Folls and Prices
—The Resumption in the Lehigh Region—
Quetations, Etc. Etc.

The coal-consuming public are now being urged to lay in their winter's supply of coal at as early a day as possible on account of a probable rise in the price of the commodity in case of their fallure to do so. This advice, always proper at this season of the year, is much more so at the present time.

Though the miners have agreed to go to work at reduced rates, it appears that the public are not to obtain any benefit from the reduction. This, however, is what might naturally be ex-pected from former experiences. Cold weather is always made use of as an excuse for a rise in price, whether there is much of an increased demand or not. Consumers, if they are of the thrifty kind who have a lookout ahead now and thes, always purchase their winter's supply at about this time of the year, so as not to be troubled with the increased rates.

But some of these are holding back from purchasing just now, in expectation of a decline on account of the resumption, which, having taken place at a lower rate of wages, should put an increased supply in the market at low rates. The very abundance of the supply itself should lower the price if nothing else. But it seems that the reference of the supply itself should lower the price if nothing else. But it seems that the railroad companies are to advance the tolls for carriage proportionate to the decline in prices caused by the increased supply and the low wages, so that the consumers at this market will not obtain any direct benefit from the re-

Under these circumstances those who are waiting for the expected decline are urged to buy at once, as it is thought that the present are the lowest prices which we will have this season. The rates of toll and transportation will be increased fifty cents per ton on the first of September, and the other transportation companies are expected to follow this lead. It is said that these rates may be increased again on the 1st of October, which is not at all unlikely, seeing who it is that does it. Coastwise freights will in all probability be advanced also. For this con-cumers at large have to thank the Reading Railroad Company, who, not content with present rates, which barely if hardly allow Philadelphia merchants to compete with those of New York, are determined to stick close to the margin, leaving every inch possible for themselves.

The public is, however, warned not to rush into the market, and by so doing produce a rise, but to go in easy, as it were, taking it lightly, and being not at all anxious, as under usual circumstances, though a decline cannot be looked for, no advance in figures at this port will take place at present. A regular but not overwhelming trade, using up the increased supply, will tend to keep prices down. The holding back of all purchasers on the contrary will only tend to produce an upward tendency.

On Wednesday last the miners at Summit Hill, in the Lehigh region, resumed, work upon Hill, in the Lehigh region, resumed work upon terms satisfactory both to themselves and the company. These mines had been idle since February, and the effect of this idleness upon the workmen can be better imagined than described. In the Lehigh region the strike at the Lehigh Coal and Navigation mines is at an end, the men having decided to resume work on the company's terms.

The question of utilizing the coal dust and screenings is again being agitated, and a series of experiments are being made, with some shadow of success. An experiment vastly more important is now being made by a wealthy gentleman of Pittsburg to discover a perfect consumption of the smoke from bituminous coal. If he succeeds in his anticipation, Pittsburg alone will economize an immense amount in fuel, and will be rendered free from the heavy, dark clouds of smoke that forever hang gloomily above it, and which fill the atmosphere, fucating everything and giving the city a dingy, funeral-like appearance every day of the year.

CONSPIRACY.

The Alleged Officers of the Brond Mountain Coal Company Held to Appear at Court.

William Schmoele, Henry Schmoele, and A.
B. Jarden were before Alderman Delaney this

B. Jarden were before Alderman Delaney this afternoon on a charge of conspiracy to cheat and defraud.

A. C. McCurdy testified as follows:—On August 23, 1864, when the country was engaged in civil war, coal, like everything else, was going up rapidly in price; I was tempted by circulars and advertisements issued by the defendants, as well as by verbal promises made by the Schmoele Brothers, to purchase six shares of stock in what was termed the Broad Mountain Coal Company; when I called on these gentlemen, they stated that the stock had been selling at $10 a share, but by order of the Board of Directors, the price was raised to fifteen dollars per share; so enticing raised to fifteen dollars per share; so enticing were the representations, that I was induced to venture $90 for six shares; shortly after that I called at the office and was shown a beautiful specimen of coal, of which I was to receive two tons on every share; I ordered two tons and re-ceived them and paid for them in advance; I was to receive them at cost of mining and shipping; the coal was delivered and so mixed up with slate that I would have paid them the price to keep it out of my cellar; I then went to the yard of the company at Broad and Wood streets, and made complaint; I got no satisfac-tion further than an acknowledgment that the coal was bad; about a month after that the yard and office were closed and since then there has been no place where could get my rights; some time back, say 18 months or so ago, I observed the sign of Schmoele & Brother on Third street; I went in, saw Henry, and asked for some explanation of matters; I told him that I had been appointed on a committee to investigate matters; a book-keeper gave me a sheet of paper containing a statement on which there was an item of indebtedness for $172,000; I asked him to explain. and he said it was money borrowed; from whom, I asked; he replied, some from myself and some from the secretary; how much from the secretary? I asked; he replied $6000 or $8000; I then asked him to show me the cash book with any such item, but he did not do so; I now charge that these men obtained my money and that during six years I have never been treated as a stockholder: although the election of officers was annual there has been no call for such a meeting; during that time the defendants have been working and developing the mine and shipping coal and have not fulfiled one of their many plausible promises.

On cross examination witness said that a bill in equity had been filed against the defendants and that suit was now in progress.

After an argument in which counsel for de fendants claimed that the time for such a suit had expired, but the act of Assembly was produced in which six years was fixed as the time of limitation. The Alderman decided to hold the defendants in $500 each for their appearance

GRANT IN ST. LOUIS.

The President on His Travels-Desire to do Him Honor-He Refuses a Public Demons tion, Etc., Etc.

The St. Louis Democrat of Thursday says:-Yesterday morning the idea which seemed to attract public attention, next to the thrilling European war news, was the arrival of General Grant, which was heralded in the morning papers as having occurred at 12 o'clock on the night previous.

As stated, the President is here on strictly private business, understood to be connected with his property interest in this county, and desires no public demonstration in his behalf. There seems a determination, however, to honor the distinguished visitor and his high office, and previous to the President's departure, on Satur-day morning, doubtless the opportunity will be embraced to extend him a proper and hearty greeting.

The President yesterday visited the court house and other places, and whenever he appeared upon the streets his presence was noted by wall, and respectful salutations greeted him on every side.

On 'Change many of the merchants expressed a desire to receive a visit from the President within the Merchants' Exchange building, when they might pay their respects to him collectively and individually. In pursuance of this univer-sally expressed wish, Mr. W. J. Lewis, President of the Exchange, appointed a special com-mittee to extend an invitation to the Chief Magistrate to meet the merchants of St. Louis informally at such an hour and on such a day as he might designate.

This morning early the President visited the office of Messrs. Lanham & Long, and remained there for over an hour attending to business connected with some property he owns below South St Louis.

After leaving Lanham & Long's office, the President visited the American Express Com-pany's office, on the corner of Fourth and St. Charles, where had business to transact, where Captain C. W. Ford, Collector of Internal Revenue, is manager, and where General Grant stayed to write four or five letters. At half-past 11 the President left the Express Company's office. During his stay there it got abroad that he was in the office, and a large crowd assembled, both out and inside the building, desirous of seeing and conversing with him.

Leaving, as he did, at half-past 11, in company with Captain Ford, he was followed by a large crowd, the majority of whom were unable to distinguish the President from the humblest

The President wore a plain dark business suit, silk hat, with the ever and oft-mentioned cigar in his mouth, and appeared to be desirous of evading notoriety.
On reaching Fourth and Locust, the President was met by Hon. John Hogan, who shook hands with him and bade him welcome to St. Louis. By this time the crowd increased, owing to the fact that the President had stopped for a second or two, but it was plain that the President was anxious to evade them.

The crowd followed on, men tumbling over boys in their anxiety to catch a glimpse of the head of the nation, and great confusion ensued. On reaching the corner of Fourth and Pine, the President struck diagonally across to the Planters' House, where it was clear he retired rianters' House, where it was clear he retired in order to escape observation.

He remained in the office of the Planters' House, hoping that the crowd would disperse, but 'he opposite was the fact, for the concourse became greater and greater, until it blocked up both ingress and egress.

Ultimately he left the hotel by the ladies' entrance on Chesnut street, and proceeded to Carondelet in a carriage.
