From Our Cwn Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26, 1870. "The Medern Thinker."

I will take it for granted that you are not aware that a new magazine has been started in this city. How often it is to be published, or whether it is to be published at all after this first number, is not known by any one, and will depend upon whether or not the money is forthcoming. It is called The Modern Thinker, and is called "an organ for the most advanced speculations in philosophy, science, sociology, and religion." The mottoes it bears upon its titlepage are selected from St. Paul, Auguste Comte, and Anonymous. The quotation from St. Paul reads, "Whom, therefore, ye ignorantly worship, Him declare I unto you." Auguste Comte is made to say, "Live for others," which may be set down as good for Auguste Comte, although he did lose his reason. Anonymous says, "There is no death-only change. Matter is indestructible; force imperishable. The form of personality disappears; the substance lives forever. We can demonstrate an objective as well as a subjective immortality, but not a personal immortality." Anonymous is quoted from twice, and winds up with, "Eternity should not be regarded as a straight line, but as a circle without beginning or end.'

Now there is a great deal that is curious in this magazine-in its general appearance, in the recklessness with which its principle, or what many would regard as its want of principle, is stated, and in the circumstances under which it makes its appearance. Its editor is D. Goodman, and the vehemence with which Mr. Goodman states his opinions is, to say the least of it, amusing. In accordance with some of his convictions the magazine is printed upon paper of various colors: green, pink, yellow, buff, and slate-color. He abhors the black and white of the generality of printed matter. In his very first article he says, indeed, that he does, "not hesitate to assert that white and black for reading matter are simply infamous and dimnable, They are murderous outrages upon the sense of sight." This is very strong language: but perhaps Mr. Goodman makes up for it by having very weak sight. He takes a very singular method of proving, however, that his plan is the best. I defy any one to get up from a perusal of this rainbow-printed pamphlet, and affirm, with truth, that his eyes are in a better condition than they would be had the printed page been plain black and white. Take the contributed essay, for instance, entitled "Steam as a Factor." It is printed with red ink upon paper which approaches buff in color. Will Mr. Goodman have the audacity to affirm that that combination is more agreeable and healthful to the eve than the ordinary black and white? I think, in view of the general tone of the publication that he edite, that he would!

Listen, however, to the names of some of the subjects upon which Mr. Goodman invites essays. One of these is, "Is there a beginning and end, or should eternity be regarded as a circle rather than a straight line?" Another is, 'Is there a 'language of man,' common to the whole race?" A third is, "Which should be the head of the family-the man or the woman?" A fourth reads, "Is Stupiculture practicable?" And a fifth is, "What do the laws of heredity teach us?"

Understand me. I do not want only to make fun of the beginning of an enterprise which it certainly required a good deal of moral courage to start. Of course it has its ridiculous side, and of course that side is very easily discoverable. For instance, there are in New York any number of metaphysical smatterers who have skimmed through the writings of Auguste Comte and think they understand all about "Positivism," and who jump at the opportunity for self-display which the starting of a magazine like The Modern Thinker bestows upon them. They are a set of half-talented people. who seem to have few or none of the prudent virtues of life, and who manage to scrape along. no one knows positively how, without ever laying up anything for a rainy day. This is the sort of people who write stories for the weekly and Sunday papers, make applications for the positions of literary editors or dramatic critics. endeavor to get up contracts for the contribution of didactic essays, addressed, under jovial and familiar guise, to the young, and spasmodically indite the dreariest and most incoherent poetry that ever found its way into the wastebasket. They may have read a great deal, but they cannot be called students; they may talk glibly and plausibly, but they succeed only in giving you the impression that there is a screw loose in them somewhere. They are never quite understood by the class of people among whom their lot is east, but they suffer compensation in the belief that they are pioneers and martyrs, and that their days of appreciation will come after they are laid in their graves. This class of people-among whom are some of the best-hearted to be found anywhere in the world-will make a dead set at The Modern Thinker. They hold themselves superior to the prejudices and sarcasms of society, and imagine that they are glorifying their lives whem they are simply exposing their ignorance and intellectual lop-sidedness.

I have spent more time than I could really afford to spend in examining this first number of The Modern Thinker. There is a wonderful essay, printed in bronze-colored ink on buffcolored paper, and entitled "The Scientific Basis of Orthodoxy." To read it is to take the shortest road to the question, "How I lost my senses?" The author winds up a long argument of twentytwo pages by remarking that "History is the struggle of the human in the direction of theanthropy, eventuating in incarnation, and having for its end the ultimate historical synthesis of the human with the God-consciousness."

By all means.

There is no question in the matter.

After admitting these simple premises, no one will be found to deny the consoling and lucid conclusion that the problem is, "Given the objective and subjective poles in matter to find the x of the grand unity."

Any schoolboy could solve such a simple algebraic question.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

BELGIAN NEUTRALITY-PRUSSIA CONFESSES TO ITS VIOLATION, BUT SAYS IT WAS UNAVOIDABLE -THE GRAND PARIS ADVANCE-CAVALBY ONLY FIFTY MILES FROM THE CITY.

Paris, Aug. 26.—(Special to the New York Herald.)—The subscriptions for the wounded deposited in boxes hung up in the streets of Paris amount to 4000 francs daily. Yesterday, 1020 oxen, 362 cows, 26,542 sheep, and 1012 pigs were taken into the city of Paris. Thirteen deputies have been drawn for the Clessinger, the sculptor, has volunteered in the army. The loss to German commerce by the French blockade is a million dollars daily.

The Constitutionnel denies that Germans have been expelled from France. At the beginning of the war they were prevented from leaving; subsequently, however, all restriction was re-moved, and those who left did so of their own accord. The men who pretend that they were expelled by force falsify. It, however, Paris is besieged, the authorities will take such measures as the public safety may demand.

The Constitutionnel wonders that Thiers should refuse to accept a place in the Committee of Defense. His great patriotism and connec tion with the construction of the walls of Paris made it natural to select him among the first for the position.

It is said Count Darn will be appointed in his

The town of St. Avold having failed, on account of the total exhaustion, to furnish the rations, forage and money demanded by the Prussians, was given up to pillage for one hour. Among the Prussians badly wounded in the battles of last week is Baron von Rahdin, busband of Pauline Lucca.

Le Public says important information was received to-day by the Government concerning the positions, numbers, and movements of the enemy. The corps of Prince Frederick Charles and a portion of the King's army is undoubtedly marching on Paris, while General Steinmetz is left to hold Bazaine. The enemy may reach Paris within six days, should there be no change in their plans. The Senate and Corps were to be notified of these facts to-day.

The Corps Legislatif went into Committee of the Whole last night and held a secret session, during which ample explanations were made by the Government in regard to the defenses of the capital. To-day a similar sitting will be had. Trochu did not attend the sitting last night, as the Minister of War, his superior officer, was-

Sixty thousand dollars have been received here from French residents in the United States for the wounded, and a large sum has been received from Constantinopie.

The latest news from Strasburg is that six persons had been killed, sixteen houses burned, and the cathedral slightly damaged. The people take refuge in their cellars. The fire from the town has killed a large number of the besiegers. As many spies still lerk in the city the commandant has ordered the soldiers to shoot any person seen on roofs.

Pfalzburg continues its heroic detense. A church and twenty-one houses have been destroyed by the enemy's shells, and the garrison have repelled two assaults in which the Prussians lost fifteen hundred men. The town is well supplied with provisions and munitions of They have been summoned repeatedly to capitulate, and its commander replies that he will blow the place up first.

In the Corps Legislatif to-day, the Minister of the Interior said the army of the Crown Prince seemed yesterday to have arrested its onward course, but it commenced advancing again to-day. It is the duty of the Government to warn the Chambers, France, and the people of Paris of the fact. Count Palikao, in the Chambers yesterday, broke out in bitter denunciation of the Prussian spies. That they abounded in Paris, he pointed to the recent judgment of the council of war as a proof. He had further evidence, which he could not show the members. He hoped they would rely on his firmness, and added: -"I have in my hands all the means necessary to repress disorder, and shall answer to the Chamber for the preservation of the public tranquillity.

Jules Fayre, in the course of debate, trusted there was no citizen in France so base as to look for defeat and national ruin as the foundation of his hopes. Such a person he denounced as thrice cursed.

MEZIERES, Aug. 26, via Paris.—Details which are coming in here show that the Prussians received a serious check and suffered enormous losses in the battles of last week. After the last battle the wounded of both armies were brought here. There were over 12,000 Prussians, who were treated as well as our own wounded. The battle of the 18th was a real success for our Its result was to render it impossible for all of King William's army to join that of the Crown Prince. Only a small portion of the King's troops went from Pont-a-Mousson to Bar-le-Duc to take part in the movement on

LONDON, Aug. 26,-MacMahon is trying to reach Bazaine by way of Mezieres, Montmedy, and Thionville, but the Prussians have cut through Varennes and Dun. There is fighting going on between Dun, Buzangy, and Mouzay (Vouzieres). According to all probability there will be an important action before long not far

The following are the particulars of the recent violation of the flag of truce on the 19th of August:—A farm housein the field was filled with French wounded. Our surgeons were so busy they could not immediately attend to them, and Colonel Verdy, with a flag of truce, went to the enemy's lines to get the French to send surgeons to the sufferers. As he approached, waving a flag, he was fired upon, as before reported, and his mission of humanity was described. feated. A similar care occurred at Marsal, where the besieged fired on a flag which brought a summons to surrender. There are now 20,000

French prisoners of war in Germany. The New York World's special correspondent at Bar-le-Duc writes that Bazaine is surrounded in Metz by the Prussian troops, and it is expected that he will be compelled to capitulate, his troops being short of provisions.

LONDON, Aug. 26-10 P. M.-Prussian cavalry are reported at Doulevant, St. Remy, Brienne, Sandres, and Chateau Thierry, the latter fifty miles from Paris.

The Sircle, contemplating the probability of the bombardment of Peris, urgently recom-mends the removal of the pictures from the galleries of the Louvre and the books from the Imperial Library. A letter from Berlin says the French, in all their actions, begin to fire so soon that they cause great slaughter before the Prussians are within charging distance. It is admitted that the French light bravely, but it is asserted that the positions they leave would have been retained under the same circumstances if occupied by the Prussians. The King of Prussia left the battle-field at Rezonville at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. As he passed through Gersee he was attended by Moltke, Trochu, Verdig, Prince Frederick Charles, the Duke of Mechlenburg, and Count Kuklsoff. Count von Bismarck, who was ex-ploring the field of battle in a carriage, with General Sheridan, was not to be found when asked for by the hing, and did not come in until

LONDON, Aug. 26 .- (Special to N. Y. Tribune) The best information about Bazaine's army, which a German official telegram now proves is shut up in Metz, makes his strength about 60,000. MacMahon's army cannot exceed 100,000 really good troops, the remainder being raw levies. The Prussian force left at Metz, or within supporting distance, is computed at 253,000, after deducting 100,000 sent to reinforce the Crown Prince.

LONDON, Aug. 26-(Special to New York Herald).—A special despatch from Ber'in has been received in this city, which says that General Von Falkenstein is reported to be moving with a great part of his army to relieve King William and join the Crown Prince. The North German Government has offered

Mr. Washburne, through Mr. Bancroft, further supplies of means for the support of indigent Germans expelled from Paris. Among the killed by the unmasking of a bat-tery of mitrailleuses at Mars-la-Tour were Counts Westerp and Wesdalan, Barons Kieist, noblemen of high rank. Advices from Paris report that eight departments in possession of the Prussians, lower and upper Rhine, Moselle, Meurthe, Meuse, Vosges, Marne, and Haute Marne, contain 3,361,000 inhabitants, and great suffering exists in consequence of Prussian requisitions.
