THE DAILY EVENING TELEGRAPH-PHILADELPHIA, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1870

Evening Telegraph PUBLISHED EVERY AFTERNOON (SUNDAYS EXCEPTED), AT THE EVENING TELEGRAPH BUILDING. No. 108 S. THIRD STREET. PHILADELPHIA. The Price is three cents per copy (double sheet), or eighteen cents per week, payable to the carrier by whom served. The subscription price by mail is Nine Dollars per annum, or One Dollar and Fifty Cents for two months, invariably in advance for the time ordered. WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1870. THE EVENING TELEGRAPH, from Its original establishment, has been in the receipt of telegraphic news from the New York Associated Press, which consists of the Tribune, Times, Herald, World, Sun, Journal of Commerce, Evening Post, Commercial Advertiser, and Evening Express. The success which has attended our enterprise is, in itself, a sufficient evidence of the freshness, fullness, and reliability of the news which we have received from this source. We have now entered Into a special contract by which THE EVENING TELEGRAPH has the exclusive use of the news furnished in the afternoon by the Associated Press to its own members, the North American, Inquirer, Ledger, Press, Age, Record, and German Democrat, of this city, and the leading journals of the East, North, West and South; and hereafter THE TELEGRAPH will be the only evening paper published in this city in which the afternoon despatches of the Associated Press will appear. 47 The earliest regular edition of THE EVENING TELEGRAPH goes to press at 1 o'clock, and the subsequent regular editions at 24, 34, and 44. Whenever there is important news of the progress of the European war, extra editions will be issued after this hour, and before the regular time for the early edition.

NAPOLEON'S LAST DODGE. A CABLE despatch says that it is believed in London that Napoleon and the Prince Imperial will await the result of the impending battles between MacMahon and the Prussians, at Sedan, a town close to the Belgian frontier. The Emperor was asked a few days ago to either come to Paris or to follow the retreating Government to the proposed new capital at Tours, but he replied that his trae e was with the army, and that he intended to share its fortunes. In what sense he does this may be seen by the fact that he has placed the only available body of French soldiers between himself and the foreign territory to which he proposes to retreat if decisive new victories are won by the invaders. This is a new style of conducting a campaign, worthy of the genius of the hero of Boulogne. If Jeff. Davis, instead of being compelled to don a petticoat at a point near the Atlantic coast, had managed to carry out his intention to retire beyond the Mississippi, and had made a final stand in Texas with the Rio Grande as his base, and with a steamboat ready to carry him over that river into Mexico the instant that he received tidings of a final American victory, he would have been in a position analogous to that which the Emperor is now said to occupy. Cowardice and selfishness could no further go. We do not wonder that the Empress complains of Napoleon's want of pluck, or that the rumors that he is a bogus Bonaparte, destitute of Corsican blood, are revived. He acted like a murderous monster in establishing the Empire, and he is winding it up like a mean miscreant.

which demands that the negro shall be enfranchised should not tolerate the continued ostracism of millions of intelligent white men. Even minorities should be endowed with rights which majorities can be compelled to respect.

TRUMPETS AND DRUMS.

THAT strange sympathy that unites all mankind, from the greatest to the least, is almost Indicrously illustrated by the fact that the European war threatens to cut off our foreign supply of toys. The grand debate between the chassepot and the needle-gun is affecting the prices of trumpets at Buluth, and tha siege of Metz is raising the value of a maunikin on the banks of the Missouri.

The lucky man who said he would wish to write the ballads of a country rather than its laws is oftener quoted than Blackstone, and a great future reputation is open to that individual who will impress his own memory upon that of the children of this generation by inventing something really good in the way of a toy, something useful-not in a Gradgrindian sense-no child-trap with a lesson in it, but something that would confer lasting pleasure and be hammered and pounded, bitten into and stamped upon, without dangerous and destructive results.

Children love animals, and Noah's Ark can never be superseded in their affections; but why should the animals all have such thick bodies and such slender legs, legs made to break, and at best inclined to limp? Tin animals, too, are fondly treasured; but the color will come off, terrifying fond mothers with visions of lead-poisoning; and then a pretty tin horse invariably splits up the back, transferring himself, to the delight of infancy, into two horses as sharp as-knives ought to be. Placid, peaceful pussy-cats turn treacherously into plaster dust and fly into haby's eyes, and the deluded mothers look fruitlessly further, for even gutta-percha, in the present stage of development, is susceptible of much improvement.

Hood, with his poetic apprehension of the real needs of small humanity, described perfect bliss in the possession of "nine oystershells and a dead kitten by way of toys," but parents, thwarting the natural desires of infancy, always demand something else. The tender, angelic darlings would be satisfied with the oyster-shells, and enchanted with the kitten, but their simple tastes are early injured, and as the little innocents must have toys made for them, we can only hope that they will be made in better style. Now that Americans have an opportunity of controlling the toy market for a time, let us see what great improvements they can effect in this field of industry.

EVER since the siege of Paris by the Prussians seemed likely to be one of the speedy results of the war, the newspapers of the French capital have been filled with stories of Prussian barbarities and violations of the rules of civilized warfare. Many of the state

CUMULATIVE VOTING.

THE convention which meets to-day at Reading for the purpose of devising measures to increase the practical power of minorities promises to be an imposing and influential body. A preliminary vote in caucus indicates that Democratic as well as Republican delegates will be admitted; and such a course would be eminently proper, because members of both parties suffer under the present system, the Democrats of Lancaster county being as helpless as the Republicans of Berks. It is said, too, that Senator Buckalew, who has devoted much attention to this subject, is on the ground, and his explanations of the practical workings of the cumulative system could not fail to be at once interesting and useful.

The men who habitually act with minorities and who uphold Republicanism in districts, like the Fourth ward or Democracy in districts like the Tenth ward, are generally inspired by a deep love of principle. They may be wrong in their views, but they choose or cling to their avowed creed from disinterested motives. There are no Republicans so firm in the faith as those who have been proscribed for their partisan fidelity by Demooratic majorities, and no Democrats so warmly devoted to Democratic principles as those who have been punished for this devotion by local as well as national exclusion from office. The chances of gaining power enjoyed by majorities bring with them eagerness to feast upon the loaves and fishes, and tend to bestow ascendancy upon men who care more for honors and emoluments than principles of any kind.

If cumulative voting brings into prominence some of the good men of both organizations who have undergone a species of martyrdom for years, it will thereby help to purify our politics, and to banish the greedy race who have sought power for power's sake. and who have used it mainly for their individual advantage.

But, aside from this consideration, the age

ments of outrages perpetrated by the invading force bore evidence of being either malicious falsehoods or else the imaginings of terrified editors; and while the French have been accusing their enemies of outrages, the only authentio violations of civilized warfare thus far have been committed by the French themselves. The firing upon flags of truce by the French, which has caused the Prussians to send a protest to all the leading powers of the world, was disgraceful to the boasted civilization of France, and the suggestions of some of the Parisian editors that the Prussians shall be provided with poisoned food, and all women who do not wear mourning shall be insulted, are well calculated to bring the cause of France into even greater contempt than it is at present. The vaporings of the Parisians, with their threats of violence and their professed determination to die in the last ditch, cannot fail to remind our readers of the similar utterances that came from the Rebel States during our civil war. They are the cries of mingled rage and terror from men who suddenly find themselves checked in what they intended to be a brilliant war of conquest, and called upon to repel an invasion where they hoped to be the invaders, and the men who utter them are the last ones who can be relied upon to die rather than surrender. Judging the fighting capacity of the Parisiaus from the tall talk of their newspapers, the probabilities are that if the Prus-

it than is anticipated.
