

THE DAILY EVENING TELEGRAPH-PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1870

NEW-YORKISMS. From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5, 1870. Swielde of a Woman's-Rights Weman.

In the suicide, a few days ago, of Mrs. Mary Macdonald, a woman's rights woman of this city, the enemy of woman's rights women will discover an argument in his own favor. He will assert that the "rash act" was induced, not by sufferings that are common to all women, as of a portion of humanity, but by sufferings peculiar to the sex that hankers after a sixteenth amendment. He will declare that Mrs. Macdonald, however fit she may have been by nature to render a husband happy, had her fitness therefor destroyed by the false teaching of the class of feminine reformers among whom she enrolled herself. He will swear that in all probability she never sewed a button on a shirt; never baked a loaf of bread that was not heavy; never allowed her husband to smoke a cigar or pipe in the house; made herself not only mistress of the house, but master; constituted herself cashier, and controlled the domestic expenses; and did everything a "lop-sided" woman could do to make wretched the men and boys of her household, and to educate the girls to become prototypes of herself. In the absence of all positive information in regard to that most unhappy and mistaken woman, I am not prepared to maintain the truth or the falsity of such allegations. My knowledge and belief are limited to the fact that on last Friday evening Mr. Macdonald, upon coming home, found the windows and doors of his residence locked; that, the hour then being 6, he lay down in an adjacent wood-shed to rest until his wife, who, he thought, was out visiting, should make ber appearance; that, unconsolously, he fell asleep, and did not wake until ten; that then, seeing no change in the doors and windows, he became alarmed and sought an entrance by force; and that, upon penetrating to the bath-room, he found his wife dead in the bath-tub, with two razor wounds on her left arm and one across her throat. Some garments which she evidently intended should be used to bury her in were spread out in the adjacent room. Here, too, was found an unsealed letter, addressed in very affectionate terms to the husband. No one appears to be able to give any adequate reason why she should have killed herself. Her home-life is believed to have been happy. She was a woman of talent and influence. To charge with the responsibility of the act the doctrines which she had so long advocated would be a silly display of scandal and prejudice.

Still, an act like this, the foolishness of which is swallowed up and lost sight of in the profound and touching tragedy of it, is not calculated to increase the respect of the average mind for the cause of Woman Suffrage, which, just at this time, needs all the assistance it can get. The majority of the people with whom Mrs. Macdonald was brought in contact, and who neither had nor have any settled conviction of the good and glory of women's voting, will be blind to such moral and religious beauty as her life, otherwise, may have possessed for them, and the progress of the cause will be retarded in a corresponding proportion. I do not know what private grief she may have had to endure, and would not willingly say a word calculated to do injustice to her memory, but the manuer of her death obviously reads the warning that feminine suffragiets do not strengthen their cause by thus implying that their private lives and public worth living for. > Proclamation to the People of Paris. PARIS, Sept. 6 .- The Prefect of Police has issued the following proclamation to the policemen and inhabitants of Parisi-"After being for eighteen years crushed under cruel blows the traditions interrupted on the 18th Brumaire and 2d of December are at last resumed. The Deputies of the Left, after the withdrawal of their colleagues, have by a malority proclaimed A Decree of Decheance, and soon afterwards the republic was proclaimed from the Hotel de Ville. The revolution which has just taken place has been a pacific one. It was understood that no French blood should flow, except on the field of battle. It has for its object, as in 1792, the Repression of the Foreign For.

It behooves, therefore, the inhabitants of Paris, by their self-possession and the manliness of their attitude to continue to show themselves equal to the task they and the nation have undertaken. For this reason, invested by the Government with powers that have been so much abused under previous regimes, I invite the inhabitants of Paris to the exercise of those Political Rights which they have just reconquered to the fullest extent possible, consistent with wisdom and moderation, to show France and the world that we are indeed

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

Mr. Forrest as " Richellen." Mr. Forrest commenced an engagement at the Walnut last evening, with a large nucleuse in at-tendance to witness his personation of "R chellen." Bulwer's play, when placed best le the works of the Elizabethan dramatists, appears mean and poor as a piece of writing. Much of its sentiment is the merest chapterap, and its characters are those of a secondrate French novel, with the remotest possible con-nection with the actual historical personages whose pames they bear. With all its defacts, however, Richelies is a capital acting play, and viewed from Richelies is a capital acting play, and viewed from this one standpoint, it is superior to many of the historical dramas of men of far greater genius than Belwer, not excepting even a greater genius than Belwer, not excepting even a is interesting and admirably suited for exhibiting all the sides of "Richelieu's" many-sided character, and the portrait of the "Cardinat Duke" him-self, if not exactly in harmony with what his-tory tells us of him, is sufficiently tory tells us of him, is sufficiently near the truth for stage purposes. In the hands of a great actor it becomes a great and himosing figure that is fit to be placed beside the leftlest creations of the dramatic art, and by the general consent of Mr. Forrest's warnest admirers, it stands at the head of his repertoire. There is a grandeur and dignity about Mr. Forrest's "Richelien" that no other actor who has ever undertaken the role has approached. But while the serner fatures of "Cardinal" are impressed most for ibly upon the spectator, it is no common pleasure to watch with what fine art the actor delineates the softer side of his character, and blends his ambition, his love for France, his unsornonionsness, his contempt for the King and the coartiers who dispute his authority, his fatherly affection for the orphan girl committed to his care, his vanity, his humor, his cunning, and his undounted courage into one barmonious whole. Mr. Forrest was in splendid condition last evening, and it has been long since he has given a more superb personation of one of the greatest actors who ever played a part on the imposing stage of French history. Mr. Forrest was very fairly supported by Miss Lillie, who appeared as "Julie de Mortemar." This lady is more womanly in appearance than when she hast appeared here, and she has made a visible im-provement as an actress. Her performance was raceful, animated, and expressive, although a little iffected and stagy. Mr. Harris made a respectable "De Mauprat," and Mr. Morrison gave a g iod melodramatically villanous personation of "Baradas." Mr. B. W. Targer, a new member of the company, made a favorable impression by the intelligent man-ner in which he acted the part of "Huguet."

Remarkable Interview with Count Bismarck-Bismarck's Views on the Mituation-Prussia

Remarkable Interview with Count Bismarck – Bismarck's Views on the Mitantion-Prassia to Hold Strasburg and Metz. Instead of the Strasburg and Metz. King of Prublick's Headquartens, NEAR Stras Sent. – The first question asked on the hill of Ohe vange after we knew what a magnificent victory we had wen was, what termswill be dem inded of France by Count ven Sismarck. There have been spectrations and ramos count of Count Sismarck's views as stated by him rol. I had a long conversation with him on the subject only four days before the victory at Sedan, that is, on the 25th of Annus. The substance of it I am at likestv or make public. I had received a the o' process from E-gland and and forwarded those of Iuost date, at the Chancellor's request for his perusal. On going to claim my papers in the evening at his Excellency's quarters, I was asked to step in and sit down. I found Count Sistarack at a dash table covered with papers, journals, orders, mays, and count his hims. — The apologized politely for keeping on his white and yst-fow for a long walk around the prettily situated town of Clement, where we were then quartered, and that he was afraid of this specus. The substance down in grant as to the recovery of his set, who has been slightly wonded. I be to its high a strand the prettily situated town of Clement, where we were then quartered, and that he was afraid of taking cold if he remained ancovered. After a be to to place bere, and requires on my part as to the recovery of his set, who has been slightly wonded. I broke ground by asking Count Bismarck what were likely to be the conditions of peace demanded by the King of Provent strands the war, very interesting but which would be the conditions of peace demanded by the King of Provent strands of peace demanded by the king of Provent strands the memory. I suppose the had had hyre-min your readers that Count Bismarck spaks

mind your readers that Could be inclusively speaks capital Finglish, so that there could be no possibility of my mis-inderstanding him.
"There are three courses open to us." he said. "with re-gard to peace with France. We must stop the possibility of another so unprovoked und uncalled for attack by the French nation or the French Government on our courson Fatherland. No Minister who failed to do this could hold office for a week, for the opinion of all Germany would be against him. There are, as I have said, three ways of stopping an attack on the Bhine provinces.
"First. We might make Alsace and Lorraine a neutral State like I usomburg or Belgium, extending from the former country to Switzerland, and so separating France and Frussia by a group of neutral States; but I coufees it appears to me that neutrality of the existing small States is already so difficult to protect and is at every moment capable of so many and such dangerous complications that I do not think it would be worth while to mike more neutral States, and with them new duties and corraines, and hold them as computed territory. But I am sure that this would not be looked on favorably by the misority of my German fallow countrymen. We are all next surious to complete our unity; but we do not want any people smong is who are unwilling members of the German ma-tion. That the Abachane would be most disloyal subjects of the King of Prussia, us spite of the great majority of thom speaking the German kinguage and being of Teu-tors erisen, theore can be no doubt.
"Thirdie, There remains to us there are a third course, to take Metz and Straaburg and to kase a third course, to take Metz and Straaburg and to kase a sa third course, to take Metz and Straaburg and to stop a French in-sesses Straaburg, there is pothing to stop a French inneedful for the protection of South Germany, which is at the morey of a French army. So long as France pos-sesses Strasburg, there is nothing to stop a French in-vading army. Now, it would be very unfair if we were to leave our South German brothren unprotected after they have fought so bravely and we'l by our side in this campage. Then scain by holding Strasburg we could always prevent any movement on the Rhine. We should be able not only to march an army by the valley of the Main on Paris, but to take a French army marching on Mayence or Collect, in their and rear. So we have be-siered Strasburg vigorously, and when we have got the old Germaniform back again we shall make a Gioraitar of it.

of it." "But allow me to suggest." I said. "that the cession of Strasburg is not a thing to which France will be easily reconciled (all the more because it is as you say "the key of France on the cast." "My dear sir," was the reply, "you have been with us continually since our entry into France. I have heard you constantly talking French. Now, have you not clearly sum that it would be difficult for the French to be more ange, with us for our witches over them then they alroady are: No, not it we were encamped in the Bois de Boulegne itself. And just because they are and will be for many a year to come very some against moves and will take care not to leave in their hands the means of doing us a mitchel."

The Princess Clotlide, sny the journals, was the last of the Imperial family to leave the Palace. She has gone to Prangins, where her children are. A Hasty Exit from the Talleries. It was evident from the appearance of the rooms in the Palace that the departure of the Empress was hasty. Trunks were piled about in various places, band-boxes and articles of apparel were lying about in disorder, and the bed was not made.

In the Emperor's Room

were a number of hats. On all sides were empty cigar boxes, a great number of phials containing phosphate of iron, books, papers, a revolver case and piles of journals.

In the room ot

The Prince Imperial

were his books, and an unfinished historical exercise written in a plain round hand. On the floor his leaden soldiers were lying about.

The Old Cry. It is stated that an official remaining in charge in the palace said that all those whom the Empress had so tavored deserted her, and not one remained to see her off.

Junkettings in the Palace.

Nothing inside the palace was injured. Some of the National Garderequired the cooks to prepare them a meal and drank some of the wine in the Imperial cellars, but nothing else was touched. The letter "N" on the railings about the palace was torn off or covered with rags and has dkerchiefs. A strong force is posted in front of the new Academy of Music to prevent the mob injuring that building.
