Bemanjee Byranjee and His Eight Little Bexes. One morning in the early part of last June, ringular looking gentleman might have been seen walking away from the ticket office in the broad marble-paved lobby that leads into Niblo's Garden. The gentleman was tall and slim, was dressed in black, and his clothes were of excellent quality. That which was most singular about him was his face. Its hue was very dark brown, his eyes were brilliant and black, and his head was covered with a profusion of jetblack hair. He was evidently a foreigner, and any one acquainted with Eastern tongues, and hearing him speak, would have pronounced him a Hindostanee. As he left the ticket office, where he had purchased two tickets for the evening, Mr. Zimmerman, the treasurer, looked curiously after him, remarking to an assistant who stood near that that gentleman was one of the best customers the theatre had. The proof of this was that he had been attending the evening performances at Niblo's every night for the past month, coming every morning regularly to engage his seat or seats, as the case might be, and, unable to express himself in English, invariably retiring with an aspect of supreme satisfaction with such a locale as was indicated by the tickets handed to him. Well, the play that was performed upon the evening in question, for which the tranger had been purchasing ten seats, was enitled NotGuilty, a melodramatic masterpiece for which Wutt Phillips and Mr. Hemphill, of the Walnut Street Theatre of your city, are concointly responsible. One of the acts, as every good. theatre-going Philadelphian knows, represents a battle between the English and the Sepoys, wherein the Sepoys come off second best. At this point in the play the Hindostance, who bore the melodious name of Bomanjee Byranjee Calab, was observed to grow very excited. He rolled his eyes, he gnashed his teeth, and fiercely tore at the backs of the seats in front of him, and uttered piercing screams. Of course, when this crisis was reached the officers of the theatre interfered, and Mr. Bomanice Byranjee Calah was removed and taken to Spring Street Station. Thence in the morning he was taken before Justice Dowling, thence to Bellevue Hospital, hence to Bloomingdale, and thence to apprivate insanc asylum. It has since been discovered that, previous to his arrest e had in his possession at the Hoffman House eight little boxes illed with gold that is supposed to have represented $100,000. Since his arrest those boxes and their contents have mysteriously disappeared, and the proprietors f the Hoffman House are said to be connected with the disappearance. Two porters who recently left there swear to having brought lown from Calah's rooms the boxes which contained the gold, and a Mr. Jarvis, Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, who had been appointed committee of Mr. Colah's estate, has rought to light a bill of lading, which proves that in the month of April last that gentleman shipped from Liverpool a number of boxes which contained at least $100,000 in gold and paper. The proprietors of the Hoffman House, of course, declare they are innocent, and throw themselves back upon their good reputation. On the other hand, there are the story of the porters (to say nothing of the re-porters) and the mysterious disappearance of the money in question. A brother of Calah is expected soon. to arrive to investigate the difficulty.

determined to break up the jealousy that has existed between the two for years past.

Domestic Affairs.

-Gold closed yesterday at 1142. -The President has gone to Long Branch again, to remain until October.

-The Western Union Telegraph Company has been sued at Washington for muddling a message intrusted to it.

-M. Berthemy has been informed by the new French Government of the appointment, by the republic, of M. Ledru Rollin as his successor at Washington.

-Secretary Cox has yielded to the pressure brought upon him by the politicians, and has consented to permit the clerks in his department to contribute toward certain election expenses. The enthusiasm among the poor cierks, many of whom have large families to support on small salaries, has not been tremendous in consequence of the Secretary's decision.

ADDRESS OF THE FRENCH MINISTRY TO THE ELEC-TORS-CONVOCATION OF THE ELECTORAL COL-LEGES-THE PARIS MILITIA ARMED-THE ARMISTICE PROJECT-ADDRESS OF VICTOR HUGO TO THE PRUSSIANS-PARIS AND THE FOE.

London, Sept. 9. The people to day attacked the office of the Macsellaise newspaper, on account of General Cluseret's reactionary article in yesterday's issue. and broke the forms and burned all the papers they could find. This action is doubtless due to Rochefort's denunciation of the course of the paper, and proves how great is his influence with e people.

The pounds this morning warmly praise his patriotism and sincere desire for the maintenance of public order.

The Siecle says it is assured from the best sources that, in answer to the representations of the inhumanity of bombarding Paris, the King of Prussia said that he would not have recourse to such ex-said that he would not have recourse to such ex-tremity. He would take the place by aid of famine, as it is evident at least 900,000 soldiers will be needed to entirely surround the city. The Siccle concludes: "All the Prussian reserves will be summoned for the siege," It says: "This is the reason for the creation of seventy-six new squadrons of cavalry," and adds "that it is time France also organize her cavalry." Switzerland recognizes the Republic of France. Victor Hugo has written an address to the Gar-

Victor Hugo has written an address to the Ger-mans, of which the following is an extract:

"You may take the fortress, you find the ram part; you may take the rampart, you will find the barricade; you may take the barricade, and then who knows the resources of patriotism in distress? You will find the sewers mines of powder, ready to blow the whole streets into the air. This will be blow the whole streets into the air. This will be the terrible sentence you must accept: To take Paris stone by stone; to slaughter Europe on the spot; to kill France in detail; in each street, in each house, that great light must be extinguished, soul by soul. "Germans, hold back? Paris is formidable! Think awhile. Before her walls are transformations of the part of the part in the part of the second strengther for her. all possible for her; her indolence gives you the measure of her energy. She seems to sleep. She will awake. Her thought will leap from its scab-bard like a sword, and this city, which yesterday was Sybaris, to-morrow may be Saragossa.

George Sand salutes the new regime in the fol-lowing words: "The Republic! She must have life in her, since she rises again from her ashes by the voice of all, by the will, of which she is worthy. Without the spilling of blood, without fratricidal strife, behold the third awakening! It is ideally beautiful; the third—say rather the fourth, for we must not iorget that 1830 was republican at the be-ginning. We have fought for her only to lose her. To-day she rises complete, with a single word— 'Vive la France!'

'Vive la France!' "This, then, is the normal state which the con-science of humanity desires. This is the inevitable end of the prodigious toll of humanity, It is well. It is the law of Intelligence, the maniness of man-can only develop in our freedom behind. God of armies-his name is our country and liberty. Hail to the Republic! Thou art in good hands, and a great people is now marching under thy banner. After a bloody explation thy task is hard, but should it happen to thee to tall once, thou wilt surely rise again. ber, 1870." The Journal Officiel makes the following report.

A meeting was held yesterday evening at the Hotel de Ville, attended by the mayors of twenty arran-dissements, city and sub-prefects of Scine and St. Denis. The mayor of Paris presided over the proccedings, supported by deputies The business of the meeting was to agree upon measures for the complete arming of the militia of Paris. No speeches were made, but practical observations were exchanged in a friendly minner. A large spirit of harmony, firmness and patriotic confidence animated the mosting, which lasted from 9 o'clock till midnight.

The Chief of Staff of the National Garde was present. He tenders ample justice to the intelli-gent activity of the mayors. Many things that appeared to him almost impossible were accompliched in & brief space of time. Since the provisional mayors entered upon their function, on the sixth instant, the organization of new battalions has been nearly finished, and their armament progresses to completion from day to day. In a few days the eager impatience of the people will be satisfied.

The question of an armistice seems to be gaining round. It is announced now that several memground. bers of the diplomatic corps are taking the initia-tive in the matter, which was mentioned by them to the Minister of the Interior and submitted today to the council which was held at the Hotel de

A great number of political meetings were held last hight, all of which were of the most orderly last night, all of which were of the most orderly character. They all agreed in a determination to to light to the last. Most of the workshops in Paris are closed. No business was done to day. The city is filled with troops drilling under command of experienced officers. A large force has gone out to meet the enemy. The forts are all prepared, and earth defences have been thrown up. It is rumored that Russia and Austria are negotiating for the partition of Turkey. It is also re-mored that a body of armed peasantry and France tireurs successfully attacked the Prussian line of communication between Bar-le-Duc and Vitry-le-

Francois, tore up rails for several miles and cap-tured a detachment of Saxons. <sup>8</sup> SEDAN, Sept. 9.-[Special to New York Herald]--The French paroleu officers are going to Africa and exchange with the officers there.

The French opera bouffe company are now in this city. Of course opera bouffe is to "be revived on a scale of spectacular splendor hitherto unknown in this country." The new roupe numbers one hundred. The principal prime donne are Madlle. Lea Silly, from Les Varietes, Paris; Madlle. Celine Montaland, from he Palais Royal, Paris: Madlle. Suzanne Thal. from the Athenee, Paris; and Madile. Juliette Jousse, from Les Folies Dramatiques, Paris. The male singers are Constant Gaussin, Paul Lermina, George Varlet, Jacques Anthony, and Paul Hittemans. The four artists who are relied upon to create any sensation are Silly, Montaland, Gaussin, and Hittemans, the last named of whom has quite a reputation as a buffo inger. Max Maretzek is to conduct the deparlment. Lupo, Albertina, ausical Mazzeri, and Ajase are to be in the ballet. The season will commence on Monday evening, September 26, with Le Petit Faust, and will be continued with Les Brigands and La Princesse de Trebizonde. Madile. Montaland is said to be the beauty of the troupe. Last night she sat in one of the proscenium boxes at the Grand Opera, and created a small sensation by wearing a tri-colored sash. She is an expansive woman.

The other day I gave you reason to believe that Madame Lanner and Bertha Lind would soon visit you. That information, however, is incorrect. Engagements await the troupe in Europe. Their last performance in America will take place two weeks from to-morrow, and on the ensuing Saturday, October 1, they sail in the Ville de Paris for Europe, perhaps never to return. Considering the season at which they came, their success has been astonishing. Madame Lanner will leave behind her the reputation of being one of the most intellectual dancers and Bertha Lind that of being one of the most beautiful women ever seen upon the American stage. ALI BABA.

It was built about 1783, by the Elector William, at a cost of fourteen millions of thalers, which he received from England for the thousands and thousands of his subjects that were sent by England to fight against her then colonies in North America. Elector William died here, but very few of his successors had the same fate. His son and heir was driven away from Cassel by Napo-leon I, who appointed Cassel the capital of the Westphalian kingdom, which he gave to his younger brother, Jerome Napoleon, father of the Prince Na-poleon and Princess Mathilde. During the reign of King Jerome the Wilheimshoche saw such shameful orgies going on that they cannot be described. King Jerome of Westphalia is the same known in America in connection with the Patterson affair. When in 1813 the Westphalian kingdom crumbled down in consequence of the German uprising, King Jerome was one of the first that reached and crossed the Rhine and made room for the grandson of Elector William. This grandson was left in peace until he died, but his son was com-pelled to leave his country in 1846, and once more 1866

It was in the large round saloon in the middle tower of the Wilhelmshoehe, which will be remem-bered by many of our readers, that the Prussian General Roeder announced to the Elector that he would be considered as a prisoner of state by Prussia. The present Elector living actually on one of his estates in Bohemia, refused to allow himself of the few hours' respite the Prussian General had granted him, and was subsequently taken prisoner and conducted to Stettin, which place he soon left to repair to Bohemia, where he possesses large states, iron works, etc. Having shortly sketched the history of Wilhelmshoche, we now proceed to give a little description of the place itself. It is situated on the top of a hill, commanding a beautiful view of the country all round. The hill is covered with splendid old trees, which make the forest one of the fluest parks in Europe. We can only compare it with the Park of Versailles, with which it has another thing in common, viz., beautiful waterworks. The castle is at a distance of about three miles from Cassel, the former capital of the Electorate. The road from Cassel to this castle is level, and leads through magnificent poplar alleys. Shortly after arriving at the castle these poplars ascenda hill, and from the brow of this hill Wil-helmshoehe can be seen at a short distance. It is built up of white sandstone, which makes it look as if it were white marble. It consists of a large tower in the middle, flanked on each side by a massive plain building. The cupola of the tower, covered with bright copper plates, is supported by two ranges of Doric columns. Right at the foot of the tower a large flight of steps leads directly into the garden, laid out in the most picturesque manner. This palace has not been used since 1866, as the Prussian Government allowed only one old servant to remain there and keep everything in order.

MR. GREELEY'S TROUT.

An Instructive Fish Story.

The Boston Post audaciously, malignantly, and diabolically (we speak the speech of H. G.) charges Mr. Greeley with having fished in the troubled waters of the Adirondacks, caught a large trout, lost his leader in trying to reel the trout in, and, finally, with having been compelled to choose between letting the trout go or going overboard him-self into the lake. Mr. Greeley, with all, and, indeed, more than all, the emphasis of injured innocence, denies the charge; declares that he never fished for a trout; that he never lost his leader in reeling the trout in, because he didn't use a reel at all in fishing for the trout which he didn't fish for: and denounces the author of the infamous fabrication as a "poor silly coward" who thinks so contemptible a story deserves to be "treated with gravity." All of which is sweetly consistent and characteristic, and receives our most hearty approbation. But the truth is that the Post was only reciting a parable. The trout which Horace Greeley fished for and didn't get in was not fished for in the Adirondacks, but at Saratoga. The leader which he lost in trying to reel his trout in was made of brass, and is known by fishers of men as a Conkling; and that Mr. Greeley was eventually compelled to choose between losing his trout or taking a souse in the waves himself clearly appears from his final endorsement of one Mr. ford, who recled in the fish.
