THE PEACE PROSPECTS.

THE prospects that a speedy peace will be concluded between France and Prussia are a little more assuring to-day than they were vesterday, although there has actually been no positive movement towards bringing about such a happy result. The Queen of England has written a private letter to the Queen of Prussia beseeching her influence in persuading the King to be satisfied with the magnificent victories he has won, and public sentiment throughout America and Europe appears to coincide in esteeming the present a favorable time for putting a stop to terrible carnage that has the shocked the world during the last six weeks. That France will receive any substantial assistance from any of the European governments, unless the situation changes very materially, is not probable. The establishment of a republic has served to place an awkward impediment in the way of some of the governments who might be disposed to interfere for the sake of preventing Prussia from realizing too great advantages from the war, and practically France has not a single friend among the rulers of Europe, however much the people who are ruled may sympathize with her. In this crisis the action of the United States Government, we are happy to say, has been in an eminent degree judicious and proper. The President responded promptly to the appeal for recognition and sympathy made by France, and the profound feelings of gratitude shown in Paris; when it was learned that the United States had recognized the republic and extended their good wishes, cannot fail to touch the heart of every American lover of liberty. and to draw the two nations closer than ever together. President Grant has also done another commendable action in deciding not to unite with any of the European Governments to interfere in any way, but offering the mediation of the United States if the belligerents should desire it. To do more than this would be a violation of the sound policy that has guided us in such matters from the foundation of the Government; but this much we may do without disparagement to ourselves or of the interests of either contestant. The King of Prussia, whatever else may be said of him, is undoubtedly a pious man; and all his despatches during the present war have shown that, in spite of his natural exultation at the magnificent success of his armies, he has been profoundly shocked at the terrible scenes he has passed through, and if the French now show a disposition to lay down their arms, we believe that he will not be in favor of imposing unnecessarily harsh terms upon them. On the other hand, the French can gain nothing by prolonging the contest except the gratification of wounded pride. and a further continuance of the war can only result in the further impoverishment of both nations, and an accumulation of slaughtered men upon the soil of France. We hope, therefore, that the present peace prospects may not be altogether illusive, but that both France and Prussia will endeavor to gain the applause of mankind by bringing the war to an honorable conclusion without more delay.

corrected, the conquerers will be in a better mood to offer moderate terms of peace. France, after all, has been victimized, as Germany was in former times, by the folly of a tyrant, and her people should not be held to too rigid a responsibility for events which they could not control. Mr. Strauss claims that while the Germans have been correcting their great national errors or weaknesses, the French have not lost their old love of glory, and their readiness to risk their own welfare and to disturb the peace of the world in mad efforts to win the honor of bloody and barren victories. But even he would scarcely press this point since the French armies have been so fearfully humiliated; and if France is suffered to peacefully establish a prosperous republic, she will find in assured liberty so rich a recompense for military supremacy that she may never wish to regain it.

THE RULES OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

WE published yesterday a lengthy review of the existing rules of the Republican party of this city, and of the systems of party management adopted in some of the interior counties. On Monday next a convention will meet to consider the whole subject, and it is to be hoped that it will be wise enough to purify and popularize the Republican partisan machinery in this city. There is a splendid opportunity to strengthen the Republican organization by infusing firmness and justice into its primary deliberations, and it should not be neglected. Half of the delegate elections under the present system are either farces or frauds. In many cases it is the greatest rascal that wins, and the will of the people has no more influence in bringing about the nominations which are proclaimed than the age of the moon. Such proceedings are a disgrace not only to the Republican party, but to the republic, and if they are not speedily reformed the nation must pay a fearful penalty for their continuance. Rowdies, blacklegs, thieves, drunkards, and loafers have too long monopolized the power and privilege of making nominations for decent citizens; and no pains should be spared to call out a better constituency at the primary meetings of the party. The Crawford county system has more fully served this purpose than any other which has yet been devised. In Lancaster county it brings nearly as many Republican voters to the primary elections as to the general elections, and when the people turn out en masse in this manner their will prevails over all the arts of intrigue and corruption. If the con. vention which is to meet on Monday will give us this system, we do not doubt that it will work good results to the party and to the city, but if the wire-pullers will not let the people have the privilege of arranging their affairs in this manner, let them see to it that ahields, and four years later, on the suggestion of Sir J. Brunch, placed the shield and gun upon a turn, table. This was the origin of the turret system-which was first used in the Royal Sovereign fronciad, and has since been adopted in all the other vessels of the British pavy. This improvement gave Captain Coles a reputation in all the naval powers of the world.

PARIS PREPARING FOR REVOLUTION.

English Views of the Orisis.

Emailsh Views of the Orisis. The London Tetegraph, of August 26, observes that it is "easy to understand how the unsatisfactory character of the relations between the French Par-liament and the French Executive operate at the present moment. The Ministry represents the in-terests both of the dynasty and of the country, and it is more than doubtful how far those interests are identical. The notion, indeed, that Prussia was making war against the empire, not against France, and that the restoration of peace could be at once secured by the abdication or deposition of the Em-peror, has long been dispelled by the evidence of fact, even if it was ever seriously extertained in France. The real danger which threatens the em-pire is from within, not from without; and the Mon-tauban ministry is bound, in every step that it may tauban ministry is bound, in every step that it may take, to consider, not only how that step may affect the fortunes of the war, but how it may induce the weilare of the reigoing dysasty. Thus, for in-stance, there is a prevalent belief in France that if the nation were aroused there would be such a levy en masse as would render the Prussian advance im-possible." The Telegraph sees no reason to imagine possible " The Telearaph sees no reason to imagine that this impression is correct. On the contrary, it believes that the wholesale armament of the nation would be at once impracticable and useless. The Government is probably of the same opinion. Un-iortunately, whatever result the distribution of arms and the enrolment of the whole nation might produce upon the campaign, it would be likely to produce armed outbreaks against the empire; and therefore the ministers are naturally suspected of a reluciance to do what is best for the country from reluciance to do what is best for the country from the fear of jeopardizing the dynasiy. The same remark applies with even greater force to the pre-parations for defending Paris against a siege That the capital can ever be held against an army which has marched through France up to its walls is an idea which doubtless finds no favor with practical menuits. Monthaber idea which doubtless finds no favor with practical men like Montauban. Nevertheless, it is still the firm conviction of the Parisians that they could rival the exploits of Sanagosa; and the obvious hesita-tion of the Ministry to arm, fortify, and provision a city of some two millions for a lengthened slege is popularly attributed to a terror lest the population of Paris should use their weapons to throw up barri-cades and proclaim the republic. Unless public ex-citement be soothed by an early victory or tempered into sobriety by an overwhelming defeat, Paris must soon take the first step in the path of revolution. soon take the first step in the path of revolution

THE MURFREESBORO' SHEPPARD.

Extraordinary Perseverance of a Negro Thief. The Tennessee Monitor of a late date says: --There is a negro in our county jad now who glories in the name of Amos Sheppard. He was sent there about a year ago for the larceny of goods from the store of Mr. E. Rosenfeid. He is the most incorrigible scoundrel within its walls, having been almost unceasing in his efforts to get out, notwithstanding the fact of his having been chained to the floor during most of his stay there. Not long ago he made a plot with some of his fellow-prisoners to kill his jailer in order to effect his escape. But his last effort, which was detected and brought to nought last Tuesday morning by Mr. Arnold, is an instance of a long, pa-tient, and persovering struggle for liberty which has rarely been excelled in the history of men who have made the most desperate efforts for that sacred boon. The story of Monte Christo cutting his way for fourteen years through the solid rock walls of his prison in the Chateau de F. is a fancy sketch of Alexander Dumas brain; but the story of Amos Sheppard, colored, outling his way through a threeinchoak plank floor, and through a sleeper tweaty inches thick, and a terwards burrowing through the ground like a mole for ten feet, with no other in-strument than a simple twenty-penny nail, is the history of an actual fact which was brought to a conclusion last Tuesday morning by Mr. Arnoid, the jailer. He had sharp-ened his nail on the iron gates of his cell until he got it into the shape of a chise!, and had been en-gaged in his enterprise about three months when caught. He had been in the habit of working at night and sleeping all day on his little pallet over the hole that he had made on the floor. He had already made his way to the back wall of the prison, and there is no doubt that in two more nights every obstacle between him and liberty would have been removed had it not been for an inauspicious move-ment of Mr. Arnold, which cut off his retreat. He has since been removed to another cell, and wears ground like a mole for ten feet, with no other inhas since been removed to another cell, and we in the way of an outfit a new set of shackles, and can at leisure cogitate over the vanity of earth

GERMAN UNITY.

WE publish to-day a remarkable letter from David Strauss, the celebrated German scholar, on German Unity, in which the underlying causes of the present war, as they are understood in the Fatherland, are stated with great ability. It will be seen that in his opinion the whole nation has been anticipating and preparing for the present conflict, and that. with the galling memory of French triumphs fresh in their recollection, they have nerved themselves for the tremendous effort which has told so fearfully on the French legions. Events have shown that this German resistance bore a fearful disproportion to the force it was called upon to combat, and it is plain that a people rose on the one side to crush the standing army massed on the other. An undoubted necessity for the preparations for a conflict existed, but the masses of France were not, like the masses of Germany, ready for the struggle. While the statesmen of the empire had grown jealous of German unity, and while French writers and French soldiers longed for an opportunity to reassert the supremacy of their nation, the great body of the citizens of France had become so accustomed to leaving State affairs to the exclusive management of Napoleon that they gave no heed to German growth, and made no individual preparations to check it. The war so suddenly and so foolishly declared by the Emperor may have been popular in a general sense, but it was certainly not imperatively demanded by the popular will, and it awakened no wild enthusiasm. This fact should be borne in mind in imposing conditions upon the new republic. There is a tendency displayed by nearly all German writers to exaggerate the responsibilities of the French people, and if this error can be a first-rate substitute is devised

THE destruction of the regular army of France was not an unmitigated misfortune. These troops were the bulwark of imperialism. Although they were incompetent, as events have proved, to resist invasion, they were invincible against insurrection. While Napoleon had Bazaine, MacMahon, and half a million of well-drilled soldiers under his command, he had nothing to fear from republican sgitators, and to ensure the downfall of the Empire it was necessary that he should first pave the way for the destruction of its powerful military defenders.
