New York, Sept. 30, 1870. Buckwheat Cakes and Hydrophobia.

I am fond of bunkwheat cakes. They are greasy, you will say. Granted.

Still, there has to me always been something wonderfully seductive in the spectacle of a market woman selling vegetables with one hand, and with the other dipping into a cup of smoking coffee a fragrant sausage, rolled up in a well-buttered buckwheat cake. It is a perfec picture of vulgar happiness.

It has recently been discovered that in New York an improvement has been attempted on the sausage. An investigation among the fatrendering establishments of Jersey City has revealed the fact that dogs and horses have been liberally used in the manufacture of sausagemeat. It has been proved that there are men who make a business of buying up diseased meat and manufacturing it into sausages. Diseased hogs have thus been bought. Perhaps that accounts for the "cured" hams.

I have little expectation that these discoveries will lead to a relinquishment of the sausage. We cling to our sausages through good report and evil report, and though dogs become scarce and sausage-meat abundant about the same time, we never dream of coupling the two circumstances. Who knows that this piece of caninel delicacy that I cat with my buckwheat cake is not tainted with hydrophobia? This beautifully browned saucisson may be nothing but madness chopped fine and fried. Well, what is to be will be. How satisfactory that is! New York must have her sausages, even if she goes without her dogs. So let us buy hydrophobia by the pound.

Dr. Bellows.

It is now many years since this excellent man and able Unitarian minister published a pamphlet, the general tendency of which was to defend the stage. I believe that that pamphlet embodied the substance of a sermon or lecture, and I know that immediately after it had been given to the world a delegation of actors, at the head of whom was John Brougham, called upon Dr. Bellows, and begged his acceptance of a very handsome service of silver plate, which they offered as a token of their appreciation of his eloquent defense of them. Dr. Bellows declined peremptorily receiving the plate, but offered to compromise the matter by delivering another lecture at the Academy of Music. The entire corps of actors worked hard in securing a vast attendance, and the proceeds of the lecture were, at the lecturer's instigation, given to the Dramatic Fund. Since that day the majority of such New York actors as take any interest whatever in religious matters have looked up to Dr. Bellows as to a friend. As he bimself says, he has buried almost every actor who has died since that time. Actors who would go to no other church go to his, and Dr. Bellows would frequently be seen at the theatre were it not that, being a public man, his appearance there would provoke such staring and comment as are scarcely agreeable to a man of truly gentlemanly instincts. He has been elected honorary member of numberless dramatic societies at home and abroad, and when he recently visited Europe he noticed that extracts from . his lecture were printed, in various languages, on the act-drops or proscenium arches of the different theatres. At the time at which that lecture was delivered and that pamphlet was printed, the stand which Dr. Bellows took was indeed a bold one for any minister to occupy. It brought down upon him the curses, almost, of the Protestant churches known as orthodox, and it left him almost alone as the clerical friend and defender of a profession that has been and is very much misunderstood, but which is slowly and surely growing purer and healthier. But, apart from his relations towards the drama, the religious ground which Dr. Bellows holds is extremely interesting both to those who agree with and those who dissent from him. So far as I am able to judge, not alone by hearing him in the pulpit, but also by the advantage of hearing him in his own study and in the freedom of conversation, his charity extends to all forms of religious belief. Although the friend of Theodore Parker, he is not an extremist as Theodore Parker was, and he never indulges in that strenuous sarcasm which, occasionally, when employed by the great New England pioneer bears some resemblance to abuse. But Dr. Bellows' liberalism is quite wide enough to brirg down upon him the malediction of the orthodox churches. He does not believe, for instance, that any one will be punished merely for entertaining a certain set of opinions, provided the life of such a person be good and noble. Neither does he believe that any man will be punished forever, unless the man deliberately chooses to go on sinning forever. The punishment, he believes, is the direct and inevitable result of the sin, and there never is, in eternity, a point at which repentance and absolute restoration are impossible. He occupies a middle ground between the extreme views of Theodore Parker (who, he believes, was a great and good man, holding a high place in the spiritual world) and the narrow-mindedness of the orthodox churches. He is not anxious to make converts, but apparently is of the opinion that it does not so much matter what a man believes as what he is and does. His religion is a hopeful and a happy one, and even those who do not agree with him sometimes envy him his steadfast trust.

NEWS SUMMARY.

City Affairs.

-A meeting of colored citizens favorable to the election of General Thomas was held last evening at Twelfth and Buttonwood streets. General Thomas made a speech.

-U. S. Marshal Gregory had a conference with the census takers of the city yesterday, with a view to the perfection of the census. When the city was canvassed, a large number of the residents were from home, and their houses were closed. All such were noted, and instructions were given yesterday to make the visit to them now, and report in reference to them. As soon as that is done. the entire population of the city will be known, and the public will be placed in possession of the figures.

-Yesterday the Committee on House of Correction of Select Council, A. H. Franciscus, Chairman, to whom was referred on Thursday the contract with Richard J. Dobbins for the erection of that institution, met in the Clerks of Councils' office to perfect the document. City Solicitor Themas J. Worrell, Esq., Mr. Dobbins, and several members of Common Council were present. The committee made eliminations and amendments, the only essential ones among the latter being that whenever any difference of opinion between the Committee on House of tween the contractor and architect, the decision of the architect should be final, and that no architect should be named in the contract, and raising the amount to be paid to the city by Mr. Dobbins, in default of the prosecution of the work according to the contract, to $250 per week. To that section of the agreement requiring the contractor to make ready for occupancy the two radiating wings, the kitchen and boiler-house, within one year from the date of the contract, Mr. Dobbins put in a demurrer, stating that when the agreement was made, had it been promptly confirmed, he would have had sufficient time this year to lay the foundations of the structures and rear the walls. This would now, he feared, be impossible by reason of the weather. He, however, agreed to the contract as it stood. The committee will recommend the contract as now framed for passage on Thursday next.

THE WAR.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT, IF TRUE-FRENCH REPORTS OF A PRUSSIAN DISASTER NEAR PARIS-THE ARMY OF THE CROWN PRINCE SAID TO BE COM-PLETELY ROUTED.

Tours, Sept. 50.
A large number of private docum into belonging to the Emperor, which were recen'y seized at the Tuilcries by the officers of the n.w government have been published here in the official journal of the Republic. Many noted persons of the old regime are implicated in the scandals.

The provisional government at Parls has already dismissed M. De Vienne, president of the Court of Pardons, he having been shown to be mixed up in the scandalous transactions of the ex-Emperor and Margaret Bellenger.

The Jecker correspondence in relation to Mexico was unearthed, implicating the Duke de Morny and others high in the Emperor's confidence. Be-sides these were found letters from Persigny to Napoleon, proving the existence of a black tri-bunal; and another from the Queen of Holland, written directly after the battle of Sadowa, warnwritten directly after the battle of Sadowa, warning the Emperor against the very events now occurring. Allogether, the disclosures thus far made in regard to the private life of Napoleon have substantiated ail the charges that the opposition ever made; and it is thought the next lot, soon to to be published, will be still more scandalous.

Cologne, Sept. 30.—The Gazette of to-day, publishes the views of a special correspondent on the question of the terms of peace. A writer while admitting that the prevailing tongue in Alsace is German, calls the editor to task for the statement that the same is true of Lorraine. One of their cor-that the same is true of Lorraine. One of their cor-respondents who has passed the greater part of his life in that province, says that the German element is hardly perceptible, and that language is spoken only in a thin belt, adjoining the frontier.

The report is reiterated that Beauregard, late of the rebel army in America, is in the French ser-vice. It is stated that he first accepted a colonel's commission, but that he has since been appointed a general, and is at present organizing troops in the south of France.

St. Perensuuro, Sept. 30.—[Special to New York Herald.]—M. Thiers leaves to-morrow for Vienna a sadder but a wiser man. His mission, which was to convince Russia of the danger of suf-fering Prussia to become too great by the annexa-tion of territory and the eclat of uninterrupted victory over France, entirely failed. Notwithstanding the earnest solicitations of the veteran statesman for an interview with the Emperor, the latter politely and positively declined.

Gortschakoff represented to them the impossibil-ity of recognizing in him any official authority, and the inexpediency of the Russian government holding official intercourse with a person whose avowed mission was to create disturbance and enmity on the part of Russia toward a friendly Power. Thiers, since his interview with the Ministers, has expressed his conviction that France has nothing to hope from Russia. Great activity prevails in the military department, and orders have been issued for the concentration of stores at different points. An engineer commission has left the city to make an examination of the fortificationss in view of Contemplated alterations.

OSTEND, Sept. 30.—[Special to the New York World.]—Intense excitement has been caused here to-night by the arrival of special messengers from Valenciennes, with news of a great battle on ich resulted in the complete defeat of the Crown Prince of Prussia, under the guns of Fort Mont Valerian. This vic-tory was followed by the evacuation of Rombouillet and Versailles, and the rupture of the German line of investment, the Crown Prince retreating rapidly northward upon the army of the King at Meaux and Soissons.

Unofficial dispatches from Berlin, by way of Brussels, contradict the news, but it is certain that communication between Paris, Rouen, Amiens and Valenciennes has been partially reopened, and that official proclamations of the victory of Tues-that official proclamations of the victory of Tuesday, signed by Gambetta, have been received in the latter city.

A correspondent at Boulogne-sur-Mer telegraphs that exciting news has been received from Rouen of the crowning defeat of the German forces on the sonth and west of Paris by the armies of Generals Ducrot and Mauduit on September 27. The French forces, who, as previously reported, had driven the Germans out of Clamart, La Roche, Chattilon, Bogneux and Bourg-sur-Reine, destroying the fortifications thrown up at those places by the Germans, were heavily reinforced on Monday by Trochu and advanced upon the German position at Montreuil and Versailles early on Tuesday morning. Tuesday morning.

The battle began at Viroflay and Velay, the Germans contesting the French advance with desperate energy, until they were assailed by fresh columns advancing from beneath the guns of Fort Mont Valerian. At St. Cloud, through the Bois de Mont Valerian. At St. Cloud, through the Bois de Fensses and Vaugresson, a number of regiments of Baden troops mutinied on the battle-field and refused to go under tire. Nearly a hundred of these men were shot by order of the German commander. The rest still held back, many throwing down their arms, and dispersed through the forest.

The Crown Prince was finally compelled to order a retreat upon Bougival, abandoning Versellies to the victorious French. The German column which extended the research the Saine was been which attempted the passage of the Seine was kept under a terrible fire from Mont Valerian, which converted their retreat into a rout and they were driven in confusion beyond St. Germain en Laye, and night alone stopped the pursuit. The Germans lost 5000 prisoners, among whom are many officers of the staff of the Crown Prince of Prussia and fifty cannon and mitrailleuses. The road to Orleans and Tours is reported to be clear of the LONDON, Sept. 30 .- [Special to the New York Herald.]-It has been determined by the Cabinet to make a strong and last appeal to Prussia to consent to peace in consideration of the destruction of the fortreses in Alsace and Lorraine, without the dis-memberment of France. It is rumored that this position of England is taken in apprehension of the warlike movements of Russia, which occasion a disinclination to see the power of France too much

LONDON, Sept. 30 .- [Special to the New York World |-At a Cabinet meeting held to-day, the European situation came under discussion. The European situation came under discussion. The meeting was fully attended by the Ministers. Mr. Bruce, the Home Secretary, urged the importance of such action on the part of England as should associate her with Russia in the pacification of Europe, and pointing out the danger of leaving the entire initiative of what he described as inevitable interference to a Power which had much interest in devesting and year of enlarging the influence of in depressing and not enlarging the influence of Great Britain.

Great Britain.

Earl Granville and Mr. Cardwell, Secretary of War, were not indisposed to this view, but represented the impossibility of action without recognizing the French Republic, which they maintained existed only by the irresponsible acts of the galleries of the legislative body.

The Duke of Argyle objected that the Republic had been recognized formally by the United States government, and it would be a sort of constructive discourtesy to the United States to assume that a government which existed with sufficient warrant to command American recognition had no sufficient to command American recognition had no sufficient standing in fact to justify a treaty with and through t for so great an object as the settlement of

Argyll also dweit particularly upon the importance of such questions in Europe to Russia, whose policy in Asia was of so much consequence to the policy in Asia was of so much consequence to the present and future of Great Britain.

Mr. Gladstone inclined to the sentiment of the majority of his colleagues, which is believed to be the sentiment, also, of the Queen, that no government exists in France which can properly be recognized by Great Britain at this time. The advices of Lord Lyons, the British minister at Paris, vices of Lord Lyons, the British minister at Paris, were indeed very urgent in the contrary sense, but the course of the government could not be absolutely determined by reference to the views of any agent, no matter how well entitled to the confidence and respect of the government.

The final decision arrived at was that nothing could now be done, as it was not expedient to recognize the only government with which any relations could be at present established in France. This result has created great excitement throughout London, and new demonstrations are looked to so a more serious character than those already Correction and the architect arose, or be- chronicled. At the Cabinet meeting correspondence was laid before the Ministry which has just taken place between Granville and the Prussian ambassador. Count Bernsterff, two weeks ago, addressed to Eari Granville a formal complaint against the continued shipment of arms from England to France.

To this Earl Granville replied that under the existing laws of England, nothing could be done to prevent such shipments, which might be made to one Power as well as to another, and that Parliament alone could change the existing laws.

On Wednesday last Count Bernstorff addressed a second note to Earl Granville, specifically stating that the Prussian embassy had positive evidence of the recent shipment of four hundred cases of arms from Birmingham to France. This, said Bernstorff, is certainly no neutralily, as your excellency's government must be perfectly aware, in the present state of affairs on the Continent, that these arms are intended for use in the field at once against russia.

To this note Earl Granville replied by requesting cant Bernstoril to lay the proofs of these state-

Count Bernstorif to lay the proofs of these statements before her Majesty's government.

Yesterday Bernstorif, without delay, furnished proof in support of his statements, and Granville replied, acknowledging the receipt of the ambassador's last note.
No action was taken by the council on the mat#### ter, which rests with the Foreign Office. THE BURNING OF BAZEILLES.

Alleged Horrible Brutality of the Prussians 1700 Women and Children Rousted Alive. The following is a translation of the text of the Duke of Fitz-James letter on the burning of Bazeilles, addressed to the London Times in French. The Duke of Fitz-James, it may be observed, is neither a Napoleonist nor a Republican. He is the head of the semi-roval family of the Fitz-Jameses, head of the semi-royal family of the Fitz-Jameses, descendants of the great Marshal Duke of Berwick, the son of James II of England:—

Sir:—I have come from Sedan Since we left Chalons I have not quitted our courageous though unfortunate army. Charged, in company with the Prince of Sagan, with the duty of placing the ambulances of the International Society for aiding the wounded wherever they might best render the services which entitled them to general gratifuld. vices which entitled them to general gratitude, I have seen every field of battle from Beaumont to have seen every neid of patte from Beaumont to bedsn, upon which our soldiers, crushed by num-bers, have fallen gloriously for France. I might, sir, give a long, mournful recital of all that I have seen; but in the face of the new dangers which menace my country, I will only speak of what took place at Bazeilles. I wish to utter but one cry of indignation. Bazeilles is near the Meuse, about eight kilometres from Schan. On the eventor about eight kilometres from Sedan. On the eventag of August 31 the brave villagers, seeing the enemy arrive, assumed their uniforms as National Guards and aided the army in their defense against a Bavarian corps and against the Division Shacler and Erfut, of the 4th Corps of the Prussian Reserve. The French army was repulsed. The enemy entered Bazeilles, and then began scenes of horror and of excess without name which stain forever those who commit them. The Bavarians and Prussians, to punish the inhabitants for defending themselves, set fire to the village. The greater portion of the National Guards were killed; the population had taken refuge in the cellars; women and chidren all were burned; of two thousand souls, scarcely three hundred are left, who tell how they saw Bavarians pushing back whole families into the femes and shooting down women who wanted to run away. I saw with my own eyes the smoking ruins of this wretched village; there is not a single house standing. A stench of burnt human fiesh makes the stomach revolt. I have seen the bodies of the inhabitants calcined on their doorsteps. This, Mr. Editor, I cannot allow to remain unknown. War has its rigors, but it has also its rules based on the laws of honor and humanity. Those laws, you Ba-varians, you Prussians who were at Bazellies, have been violated by you. You have disgraced your victory. I appeal to the world, to history, to judge you. I ask whether you have the right to lay down a principle that you may slaughter the women and chi'dren of a village whose inhabitants, seeing you arrive, defend their homes and their country. In every case the National Guard is a regular troop, as regular as the fourth and fifth ban of your Landwehr. You had even, in the name of your own terrible system, the right to burn Bazeilles; you killed for killing sake; you conducted yourselves like savages, and not like soldiers. This, Mr. Editor, is what I feel a duty upon me to write and to submit to the judgment of a men. Most respectfully, Duc DE FITZ JAMES, Paris, September 12, 1870.
