WILHELMSHOHE.

The Prison of the ex-Emperor. Casser, Sept. 11.—Wilhelmshohe, or "the German Verssilles," as it has been often termed, has just now assumed a greater interest than it has since it was the summer palace of the Elector of Hesse-Cassel, Frederick the Second. No American is likely to forget or forgive this monarch for having acquired most of his wealth by selling the ives of his subjects to the King of Great Britain to fight his battles in America and elsewhere. From 1776 to 1784, 12,000 Hessians were sent to our country for the sum of $22,000,000; but this little claim, unlike the "Alsbama, was settled long ago; and as I watked about the Friedrich's Platz (the largest square in any German town), and admused the statue of the Elector after whom it is named. I was wicked enough to enjoy thinking how his own government had met precisely the tate he had wished for ours.

You may walk or drive three miles from Cassel through a straight avenue of limes to the palace of Wilhelmshobe, and beside it stands the theatre built by Jerome Bonaparte when King, and in which be himself used to act. Just behind it is the highest fountain in Europe (except that at Chatsworth), which throws up its fairy spray 12 inches in diameter and 180 feet high. It springs from its imperceptible jet in the centre of a bed of mossy lawn, and so light and airily does it I lay amid the sparkling sunshine that when the hour is over and you suddenly miss it, like a child hunting for a rainbow, you look up at the blue sky overhead, and wonder to what part of it it has flown away. Further up is an artificial waterfall, descending from a tall aqueduct over beds of stone arranged in exquisite taste, and on Sundays and Wednesdays, when the waters play, great crowds flock to see them.

The Aquatic Staircase and the Octagon Temple of the Winds, with the statue and other extravagances connected with it, are reported to have employed 2000 men for fourteen years. When their labors were completed, the cost was found to be so enormous that the accounts were burned to destroy all

The Cascade of the Karlsburg is another of the many wonders of the place-a flight of stone steps 900 feet long, over which a stream of water is at times permitted to fall. Half way up the stairs is the Giant Euceladus, rudely represented lying on his back, with a mountain of rocks heaped upon his breast. The artist intended a jet of water 50 feet bigh should spout from his mouth, but none plays there now. The staircase of this "Chateau d'Eau" is surmounted by an octagon building 1312 feet above the Fulds, surmounted by a pyramid serving as a pedestal to the colossal Hercules, 31 feet high, of beaten copper. Nire persons, it is said, can stand at one time in the hollow of the club and enjoy a charming view out of a little window formed in it. I have rarely spent a day more delightfully than in exploring all these morsels of art and extravagance; and, setting them all aside, the natural beauties of the Park are far beyond those of any other on the Continent. In the midst of it is a toy castle-"Luxemburg"-built to imitate a stronghold of the middle ages, with draw-bridges, battlements, towers and ditches. Among the rusty suits in the armory is one which belonged to the great Conde. There is also a very curious collection of drinking-glasses, a series of portraits of the Tudors and Stuarts, and a library filled with romances alone. The public are not content that the King has devoted so magnificent a refuge to his fallen foe, and I doubt if he will be permitted to remain there long. The women are particularly savage on the subject, so much liked to imitate. The grounds were in splendid order. Some women were cutting the lawn and clearing out among the shrubbery the day that we were there. The prettiest face I have yet seen in Germany peeped out from among the rose-busbes. She was trimming, as we passed out of the gate; and, but that I feared to lose the train, I should have looked longer at a picture that gave me so much pleasure. The coming of even an ex-Emperor and his suite will be an immense excitement in the lives of the present laborers; and I think if my pretty friend is standing where I left her when the French officers pass into their splendid exile, her sweet eyes may somewhat soften the hardship of their fate.

and I have beard a number propose that he

-There are not as many Germans in France as people have generally supposed. According to the Statistique de la France of 1866 there were, inclusive of Austrians, 106,606 Germans in all France, and of these 30,576 lived in Paris.

—The Prussian Minister of the Interior has arranged to have the lists of losses in the army displayed publicly in all the cities of Germany

In smaller towns the public officials will be well provided with copies, and the post offices are ordered to keep them on hand and supply copies to all applicants. —The English Government is making 30,000 ammunition boxes for India. These boxes are lined with tin, an improvement on those formerly used: they have rope handles and sliding lids. They are made of mahogany and teak. Their size is twenty by seven inches, and they are constructed to hold 1000 rounds of ball cartridge each for the Enfield-Snider breech-

The Turcos in the hospital of St. Hedwig, at Berlin, are said to be the worst of the whole crew, and it is they who have given a bad name to all the rest, and who insult the Sisters of Mercy who are ministering to them. Sometimes it is necessary to have a tile of soldiers when the Turcos get on the rampage; but the sight of the dreaded needle-guas quickly restores order among them.

Blores order among them.

—Receptly, at Glossen, a French captain of Zouaves died of his wounds, and was buried with military honors. A company of the 2d Prussian Infantry Regiment fired a safute over his grave, and the whole corps of officers, together with many citizens, followed the coffin, and immediately behind it, between the captain of the company and the company. of the company and the commander of the forces, walked a wounded officer of Zonayes. —At Munich the first captive who died was a Turce. Ben Coneder Mahomed. A Bavarian company of infantry, with drums and a number of citizens headed by a Catholic priest, followed the coffin, on which were placed the soldier's turban and a Bavarian sabre. The soldiers fired their pieces over the grave, and the officer and the priest each threw a shovelful of earth hato it, and the first Turco rested in German
