NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. Naw York, Oct. 5, 1870.

Sounding the Yellow Fever Alarm. Now that the danger of yellow fever's becoming at this season epidemic with us is removed, no harm can be done in making public the cause which led good judges in sanitary matters to fear that we should not altogether escape. It appears that some cases of yellow fever occurred at Governor's Island, and that on the 1st of October all the infected there-sixty in number-were removed to the West Bank Quarantine Hospital. All such bedding, clothes, and other articles as could possibly have become infected were also taken to the steamer Illinois, in the Lower Bay, and burned. Those places upon Governor's Island where the fever had occurred were vacated, famigated, disinfected, and cleaned, and provision was made for the removal, day by day, to the Quarantine Hospital of all new cases. The strictest investigation has discovered that in this city all cases of yellow fever were absolutely restricted to persons who had visited Governor's Island as nurses or mourners, or who had left the island while the disease was spreading there, and who had come to this city. Since the welfth of September there have been in New York city ten cases of yellow fever in all. Sever of the infected persons were those who had : one to the island as nurses or mourners; the .. maining three were soldiers, who had left Governor's Island after the fever had began its devas ation there. The cause of the fever's breaking out is attributed to certain infected vessels v high had been permitted to land passengers, and to he at the Brooklyn docks, at various o'ts between Empire Stores and Hamilto s Ferry. Some infected article thrown overboard from one of these ships has probably be an washed ashore at Governor's Island. There is no reason for believing that, even among the few cases of yellow fever which have occurred, the disease has been of a type other than the mildest. Still, for a week past, vessels infected with yellow fever have constantly been arriving at Lower Quarantine. The vessels come from New Orleans and Havana, and a great necessity still exists for taking great precaution lest the disease should spread. If the truth were generally known, it would be seen that all summer long we have been peculiarly exposed to infection. This exposure was due to the cupidity of New York merchants and shipowners, whose trade interests bring them into communication with the infected ports. These merchants and ship-owners have endeavored to back themselves with the support of one or two newspapers, and have done all in their power to break through the enforcement of the Quarantine regulations. In the middle of August, for instance, although the city knew nothing about it, yellow fever broke out on Governor's Island, and had it spread in the city, the e merchants and ship-owners would probably have been to blame more than any one else would. But although the cases which during the last two or three weeks have occurred in New York city were mild in nature, this description does not by any means apply to the entire batch of cases that were removed from the island and taken down to the Lower Bay. Some of these were of the most malignant type, the horrible black vomit taking place just before death ensued. Such facts as are known prove that the disease was propagated in this country by various vessels that had evaded quarantine, and that the fomite, or poisonous principle, was probably conveyed to Governor's Island by the ebb-tide that washes that shore of the island near which the fever first broke out. On'y a short time before the outbreak, a number of barks, brigs, and other vessels were lying at some Brooklyn docks, in the very face of the fact that they were known to have had, during the passage, cases of yellow fever on board. When these facts are borne in mind, and realized as facts, a thoughtful man will feel that he cannot be too thankful that the Board of Mealth hand of the fever was stayed. Finding One's Level. With many writers on religion it is a favorite theory that every man was sent into the world for the purpose of performing a mission that no other man can perform as well as he can. This theory is plausible, and it ascribes a convenient and benevolent character to the Being who is responsible for our having been sent into the world. Neither am I prepared to argue that the assumption is not a correct one. All that I say is that it seems to have one or two weak points. For instance, how many people work as though they were fulfilling a mission? I do not ask how many people work as though they were conscious of having a mission, but how many work as if they had one? Consider the thousands of disappointed, poorly-paid, hard-working, and ground-down young men and women in New York who are compelled to work for employers whom they cannot but hate and despise. Has each of these people a mission? And if so, has he found it? And if he has not found it, would it not be better to have been sent into the world purposelessly than for the sake of accomplishing a work which one is forever disappointed in finding? In the few shining or moderate successes we recognize people with missions; but take the people whose lives are laborious and painful failures, and what shall we say of the mission theory then?

Grand Opera House Gossip. Gossip about the Grand Opera House is, from the nature of the case, gossip about the Erie Railroad Company, and gossip about either necessitates a mention of that indisputable notoriety, Mr James Fisk, Jr. Of one offense, however, I can never with justice be accused. It cannot, with truth, be said of me that I ever wrote a paragraph about so vulgar an article of jewelry as a diamond-pin while making mention of Mr. Fisk's shirt-bosom. No; I leave that for writers whom a shining stone dazzles, and the lustre of whose lucubrations is due entirely to the theme of which they treat. To go back to the Grand Opera House gossip, however. Fisk's attentions to the new opera-bouffe soprano, Montaland, are as notorious as his attentions to one or two of the soprani of Mr. Bateman's opera-bouffe troupe were. The stories which represent him as purchasing silks, satins, and laces for that splendidly "made-up" divinity are too true; and Silly, the other soprano, is said to be correspondingly jealous.

At the close of the second act of Le Petit Faust is introduced a "real" horse, which is ripe for the hands of the knacker, a mass of skin and bone loosely hanging together. Possessing these natural requisites for equine burlesque, it is so painted as to seem to be scarcely more than a series of protruding ribs interspersed with that variety of sores to which equine nature is subject. Where this quadruped was obtained has, ever since the first night of Le Petit Faust, been a question with the Grand Opera House audiences. The simple truth is that Mr. Cole, Fisk's treasurer and business- I manager, bought him for fifteen dollars, and paid an additional fifty for the yellowpainted vehicle to which the beast is harnessed. That horse is dear at any price. I regard the fifteen dollars as extremely liberal. ALI BABA.

[COMMUNICATED.] Our Candidate for Register of Wills. The convention that placed in nomination William M. Bunn made a wise selection. His adherents de tected immediately after their organization that he would be the winning man, and without disparaging any of the other candidates before the convention, I think I may safely assert that the intention was from the beginning to nominate a man who had been in active service under the old flag, and who had acquitted himself with credit without having received a commission for his services. The communication which appeared in your issue a few days ago, signed "Twentieth Ward," did Mr Bunn justice in speaking so honestly of his military career. The Democratic party have, in some instances, honored the soldier in selecting him for position, but the cases have been very rare, and they have invariably chosen ex-officers for their nominees. Now our great party have an opportunity presented them for com; limenting a man who held the position of a private, and let them come up to the work nobly, and thereby show their enemies that they mean what they say when they assert that the soldier shall be rewarded. A PRIVATE.

The Cincinnati Commercial Convention. The Cincinnati Commercial Convention.
CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.— The convention re-assembled at 9.0 clock, President in the chair. The reports of committees were heard. The Committee on Direct Trade between Europe and the Southern 1Atlantic Cities reported, favoring granting aid to American shipping; adopted. The Committee on the Southern Pacific Railroad made a report recommending aid by Congress to the road near to 32d parallel, with branches terminating at Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans. Adopted.

The report of the Committee on River Navigation, Canals, etc., was a very lengthy one.

The report of the Committee on River Navigation, Canals, etc., was a very lengthy one.

A resolution was offered declaring rivers channels of travel and communication, belonging to the people of the country, and not to be obstructed by individuals or corporations.

Charles Reemelin, of Ohio, objected to this resolution. He said two classes of people have rights on rivers, those navigating up and down and those crossing. This resolution totally ignored the rights of transit, and was a revival of that old public opinion raised by the ordinances of 1737, which has opinion raised by the ordinances of 1787, which has been destroyed by the courts.

Mr. Stannard, of Missouri, had no design to obstruct railroads, but it was the desire of the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructive lives and the committee to prevent railroads from th mittee to prevent railroads from unnecessarily obstructing river navigation.

A motion to amend by inserting the word "unnecessarily" before "delay, abstract, and hinder," in the resolution, was lost. The resolution and report was then adopted by the following vote:—Yeas—Alabama, 8; Arkansas, 4; Fiorida, 3; Georgia, 12; Iowa, 1; Indiana not counted; Kansas, 3; Louisiana, 8; Mississippi, 7; Missouri, 10; Massachusetts, 1; Obio, 21; Pennsylvania, 4; South Carolina, 6; Tennessee, 8; Texas, 1; Virginia, 10; Nevada, 1. Total, 108. Nays—Kentucky, 11; Marylaud, 7; Michigan, 8; New York, 6; North Carolina, 2; Tennessee, 1. Total, 350. The report of the committee recommending free trade in money, and the repeal of the usury laws and habits by which money contracts are treated exceptionally, and an amendment to the banking laws so as to take the monopoly from banks in the supply of currency, was adopted and subsequently reconsidered.

The Willard Murder Trial

HARTFORD, Ct., Oct. 6.—At the opening of the Superior Court to-day the counsel of James Wilson, on trial for the murder of Warden Willard, of the Connecticut State Prison, retired from the case, as the prisoner desired to conduct his own defense. They will simply advise the prisoner on legal points. The evidence for the prosecution then commenced, and Dr. Jackson testified to the character of Willard's wounds, and Deputy Warden Martin testified to the fact of the killing, and also that prior to the killing Wilson had been confined for forty-eight hours in a dark cell for attempting to escape. The witness was sharply cross-examined by Wilson as to the length of time he (Wilson) was confined in the dark cell, but could only testify as to the time recorded in the punishment book. The prisoner then asked if he (Wilson) had been furnished for rations? The prosecution objected to testimony of that character, and the Court ruled it out. The Willard Murder Trial which had been furnished for rations? The prose-cution objected to testimony of that character, and the Court ruled it out. At this stage of the trial, as it did not tend to show that the killing was in self-defense, though it might be admitted at a later stage on some other question. Wilson said if this testimony was refused he had no further defense, but should leave the prosecution to go on as they saw fit. The Court asked the prisoner if he would allow his counsel to go on, and he replied that they would have nothing further to do; that it would save expense to the State to let the prosecution proceed alone. To a question of the Court counsel replied they had nothing to say. Wilson then turned his back to the Court and during the examination of the next witness, who was the Chap-iain of the Prison sat moody and obstinate till the Court adjourned, for a recess.
