THE ELE TIONS.

The Latest Returns from the Different States.

Adjutant General Russell telegraphs from Bedford to Governor Geary that Cessna has carried the district by a small majority. Donley, Republican, is defeated in the Greene district. Domocratic gain of one Senator in Huntingdon district. Dill, Democrat, is elected in Lycoming Senatorial district. The Republican majority in the State Senate is only one.

Shoemaker, Republican, has 1000 majority for Congress in Luzerne, and 800 in Susquehenna county. Harding, Republican, has defeated George W. Woodward for President Judge of Luzerne county by 1600 majority. The entire Republican ticket is elected in Luzerne, with perhaps one or two unimportant exceptions. This is one of the most astonishing political revolutions on record, Luzerne being heretofore a reliable Democratic stronghold.

The election of the Democratic State ticket in Indiana is conceded by all parties. Eightyfive counties heard from, most of which are official, give 1276 Democratic majority. The seven counties yet to hearfrom gave a Demo-cratic majority at the State election in 1863 of 416. The Democrats have 8 majority in the House of Representatives, and the Senate is a tie. General Shanks' (Republican) majority in the Ninth Congressional district will not exceed 200. The result for Congress in the Fourth district is still unknown. General Coburn's (Republican) majority in the Fifth district is 378. Special despatches give Judge Wilson (Republican) 26 majority in the Fourth Indiana district.

It is now claimed here that Smith, Republican, in the Sixth Ohio district will have fully 300 majority. Fifty-two counties heard from officially give a Republican majority of 6825. The remaining thirty-six counties will increase the Republican majority to 15,000. In the Fourth district McKinney, Democrat, has 121 majority. The Republicans held a grand jollification meeting here to-night, which was at-tended by 5000 people.

The official canvass of the vote for member of Congress in Colorado gives Jerome B. Chaffee (Republican) 1392 majority.

THE WAR. LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

BAZAINE'S TACTICS AT METZ-GERMANY DESIRES PEACE-BISMARCH IS READY FOR INTERVEN-

LONDON, Oct. 13.—It seems that the Empress Eugenie sent for General Bourbaki, and that her object was to propose through him conditions of peace, on the basis that Prussia should retain Al-sace and Lorraine, and leave the Prince Imperial sace and Lorraine, and leave the Prince Imperial under her regency to govern France. When she was told by Bourbaki that nobody in France would tolerate even the presence of the Prince Imperial, the Empress burst into tears. The letter from Eugenie to the Emperor, of which Countess Cowper was the bearer, doubtless referred to this project.

The preliminaries of marriage between the Princess Louisia, fourth daughter of Queen Victoria, and the Marquis of Lorne, eldest son of the Duke of Argyle, have been arranged, with the consent of the Queen. It is considered that the possibility of the Princess succeeding to the Crown is too remote to render the alliance dangerous.

The town of Ablis has been burned, according to the threats of the Prussians, because the people, not regular soldiers of France, had fired at the Prussians.

The people in Tours and its vicinity are reported to be rushing to arms. It is expected that the large masses of fresh troops called out by Minister Gambetta will take the field within ten days.

London, Oct. 13—It is reported that Prussia desires the restoration of Nice to Italy.

London, Oct. 13—(Special to the New York Tribune).—A letter dated Mezeires, on October 7, says to-day's battle was the most important effort that Bazaine has made since the Prussians have thrown their belt of guns and earthworks around the fortress. He had at least 50,000 men engaged, but the Prussians were much more numerons. The morning was dull and misty. About one o'clock I was sitting at lunch with two staff officers in an autor in General Kummer's garden, when the gains of the Prussian batteries, by Sam murt, began to give tongue, and the roar of guns grew louder and louder, and then came first one great boom and then another from the big guns lying behind a Frenecourt. To explain the tactics of Bazaine and the manner in which they were folled, I give a description of the ground.

From Metz to Mezieres there is a long trough, with a fist bottom or alluvial, the margin of the Moselle. The tract is about four English miles wide. On the west it is bounded by heights, and near Metz by Norwy and Saulney; on the east it is bounded by a lower series of binfis, on which stand the villages of Olgy and Mairoy, but between them runs the Moselle, infringing considerably on the flat expanse just opposite Olgy. Across the bottom at the narrowest part thus formed lies a series of villages, the two Tapes and Stremey, with Maxs and Ladomehamps respectively, slightly to the east and west front, more or less. There were Prussian troops in all these places. The dispositions detailed to me by the staff officers had been substantially maintained.

Eagaine had laid his schemes with great art.

Bazaine had laid his schemes with great art. Under cover of a dense fog he had made his dispositions with such adroitness, that when it lifted a little past one o'clock they were already all but complete. In the first instance he directed a strong assault on Ladomchamps. The landwahr outpostheld the place as if they were 10,000 instead of 100 men, and the French sent their infantry swarming late it. White spirits of smalls were visible all men, and the French sent their infantry swarming into it. White spirts of smoke were visible all around the valley on the right front.

The batteries at Senecourt were hard at work, and also others nearer the town, while the great guns at Frencourt were sending shells at low range, right over Ludomchamps, in among the advancing French. Then on our left, at Amelogue, two other betteries were maintaining a semi-crois fire, and from the bluff on the other side of the Moselle, between Olgy and Malroy, the Prassian field artillery was roaring. The attack on Ladomchamps was a diversion. Suddenly the villages of Grande and Petite Etaps, of Stremsy and Maxe, were overwhelmed by a cataract of French.

French.
The 59th landwehr in Stremey wouldn't fall back, as it should have done in common pruleuce, but stood up there in the street until the French, baving played upon it with their artillery and rained chasecpot and mitrailleuse bullets, and tinally forced backward the shattered remnant by dint of sheer numbers. The fussilier battalion of the 58th regiment occupied Grande Etape, and it occupies that village now, but the occupation consists of the dead and wounded. The battalian would not give ground, and may be said to have been annihilated as it stood, the men being with their backs to the wall and their faces to the foe. Other battalions of the same regiment suffered

So far Bazaine had succeeded. He had occupied so far Bazaine had succeeded. He had occupied the chain of villages and had got batteries of artil-lery out on their from to reply to the Prussian fire, but the statu quo had neither replied to nor could return, the Prussian artillery, throwing their pro-return, the Prussian artillery, throwing their projectiles from three sides of parallels, interfered with the comfortable realization of the latter's conception. As regarded the former, it seemed clear that Bazaine could not have done what he had if he had not contemplated something more. That something. I have not the remotest doubt, was a sortle to establish connections with Thionville.

His tactics were well conceived. From Stremey, and Grand and Petite Etape he kept the Prussian line engaged with musketry and artillery, and sent forward from Grande Etape great swarms of trailleurs, who fared very ill at the hands of the landwehr men, and besides this he moved a great body of men, nearly 30,000 in all, on the bank of the Meselle, under cover of the houses of Maxe, and Moselle, under cover of the houses of Maxe, and sent them forward to cut through the Prassian environment where it was weakest, close to the river.
The moment was a critical one.
The landwehr had all been sent forward agains:

the villages, with the exception of one brigade, and that was in reserve; but the tenth army corps and that was in reserve; but the tenth army corps had been crossing a pontoon bridge and massing between the river and Amelogue. There General Von Voight was in command of operations in the rear, and gave the order for several regiments to advance, a sight never to be forgotten.

First came the fusiliers, extending at a rapid run into skirmishing order, and covering the whole plain with their lines. Then dense columns of grenadiers, the bands playing and colors unfuried. But all the work was not left for the infantry. The artillery entered the village alone, and concentrated their fire on the French columns advancing along the Moselle.

along the Moselle. Bazaine is singularly weak in field artillery, and the only reply came from the sullen sides of Mount St. Julian, or from the ramparts of Fort St. Eloi, but the mitralleuses venomously sounded their angry whiz, compelling the skirmishers to resoil as they crossed the line of fire, and tearing the chasseurs in front of the solid masses, of which mishers were enough for the French. The dense column staggered and then broke, but when they had once got stone and lime between them and the Prussians, the French were obstinate and would go no farther. In vain the Prussian artillery fired on Advancing closer and closer in alternate order of advancing closer and closer in atternate order of battalions, with a precision and rapidity that could not have been exceeded on parade; that obstinate battery in front of Grande Etape could not shut up, and the French Tiraelleurs still lined the chaussee and its front. By this time it was nearly four o'clock, and a staff officer galioped along the line with or-ders for a general advance to take the villages by storm. The advance was to consist of four brigades of Landwehr, with two brigades of the 19th army corps supporting.

In a few minutes more the command came ad-In a few minutes more the command came advancing along the line and the men springing from their cover went forward with a steady, quick step. The shells from the battery in front of Grande Etape tore through the line, and mitrailleuse and chassepot bullets poured against it their leaden hand, but still the landwehr, silent and stern, went steadily to the front. Gen. Wm. Brondersteen, commanding the half brigade, was shot down, and several of rg the 3d brigade, was shot down, and several of

At length the intrenchments were reached, be-At length the intrencements were reached, behind which were lying the shattered remnants of the 58th and 59th landwehr. The fratemization consisted of a cry of "Hurrah Preusson," and then "Vorwartz emmer Vorwartz," and then the line thew itself to the front on a run. The Freach gurs had barely time to run round a corner before the landwehr were upon them and the guns they left perforce. In the villages the French made a last stand, but it had been better for them had they left perforce. In the villages the French mady a last stand, but it had been better for them had they ren away at first.

The landwehr, with less of the conventional warrior in them than the line, were not so much inclined to give quarter as are professional soldiers, and with many Frenchmen, this afternoon, the first shock consisted of the bayonet thrust. They fought like devils, in the narrow ways of the villages, and used the mitratileuse with fair judgment and effect; but then there came this steady, inexorable stride forward of landwehr, with the bayonet, and the villages were cleared of all, save the victors and the dead and wounded. To the landwehr must be conceded the honor of the fray. They it was who checked the right of the French advance, by holding the villages until they had not a man who could stand and fire.

London, Oct. 13.—[Special to the New York World.]—A correspondent at Versailles says that Bismarck has caused an intimation to be conveyed to London, St. Petersburg and Vienna that intervention to secure peace would be acceptable now to Prussia. The conclusion was reached by a council of war yesterday that Paris cannot be successfully attacked, but must be reduced by a siege of many months' duration. The advance of the French army of Lyons upon Metz has been resumed, and rumors are current that the siege of that city has been raised. The appeal of Bismarck has been met by Russia with a proposition through Prince Orioff for mediation by a Congress of the great Powers at Brussels.

No official news has been received from Orleans or Chatcaudun, but it is reported that the Prasians have over 60,000 troops now at the former place. They are in great force at Chatcaudin, where a strong corps of the French army has congregated. The general expectation has been that a battle would take place there to day.

The government has issued decrees for the ourpose of stimulating all ranks to enter the army, and to encourage young talent, making appointments and advancements according to skill displayed or services rendered. The former rules

It is decreed that workmen in the government armories and arsenals are not to be forced into military service. They must, however, form com-panies and drill, but not to interfere with their work.

When the Prussians shelled Orleans, Bishop Du-panloup and the mayor of the city sought the Prussian commander, and requested a cossation of the shelling, as the town was open. The attack was successful, and at 7 P. M. the Prussians entered Orleans and established batteries commanding the
