THE SLEEPING BEAUTY.

Twenty-one Years of Unconsciousness, with but Slight Intervals-A Case Unparalleled in the History of Science.

The St. Louis Republican of the 10th inst. tells the following remarkable story: -

The St. Louis Medical Society on Saturday night appointed a committee, composed of Dr. Gill, Dr. Edgar, Dr. Johnston, Dr. Mc-Pheeters, and Dr. Rumbold, to make inquiries respecting the case of Susan C. Godsey, who has attained no small celebrity as "The Sleeping Beauty," having been, as is alleged, some twenty-one years in a state of unconsciousness, with the exception of intervals of a few minutes daily. She was brought to this city last week, and is staying, or rather sleeping, at the house of Mrs. Davis, on Walnut street, between Fifth and Sixth. The fact that the Medical Society has thought it worth while to examine into the case removes the suspicion of anything like humbug, and so it becomes really a subject for a very interesting inquiry.

The committee called about 10 o'clock A. M. yesterday at the house mentioned, and soon after their arrival the girl awoke to consciousness for a few minutes, and then fell back into her state of insensibility and sleep. The physicians found that her pulse beat at about 108 or 109 per minute, and her temperature was from 93 to 97. Inquiries were made as to her diet, her conversation, and her past history. After making their observations and taking a few notes the committee retired. Another visit was made at three o'clock in the afternoon, and another at ten in the evening. The case was stated to be one which had never been paralleled in their experience. The report which they will make next Saturday will no doubt be interesting. The following particulars were ascertained of the girl's history:-

Susan C. Godsey, the subject of the inquiry, is twenty-nine years of age, and was born seven miles west of Trenton, Gibson county, Tennessee, where her parents kept a small farm. Her family removed to Obion county, where she was a sprightly, healthy little girl, and she went with them. After this she was occasionally taken ill with chills and fever, but was partially relieved by the use of quinine. On the first of August, 1849, when she was nearly eight years of age, she fell into a torpid, insensible, benumbed condition, in which, as it is veraciously stated. she has remained during the last twenty-one years, varied only by a very singular and un-paralleled series of phenomena, which goes on with the accuracy of clock work. Every morning, precisely at the first dawning of light, she is found awake. This state of wakefulness, however, does not ordinarily last for more than from four to eight minutes. Very rarely it has been ten minutes. During its continuance she eats and drinks and talks. After having been awake for the time stated. the patient is then seized with a kind of convulsion, her head moves from one side of the pillow to the other, in what is called a "lateral motion." These motions are very rapid, and appear entirely uncontrollable. She then bends forward her head, and a kind of hiccupping is heard in her throat, and she finally relapses into her former torpid condition; her eyes are closed, her lips are firmly compressed, and no motion is visible except a constant agitation of the hands, which move about parpetually. This process is repeated every time she wakes, and also at intervals whe asleep. Among the curious facts mentioned in connection with this case is that of the numerical regularity of the symptoms which precede the awakening. In a few minutes after she is seized with the convulsions and the lateral motion as described, she has twelve hiccups, then adding one each time until she has sixteen. This usually takes half an bour. The order of number is then reversed. After having had a convulsion, followed by sixteen hiccups, the number is gradually lessened until sixteen is reached, and then she awakes. From six to twelve in the morning she wakes once every hour. In next time is three in the morning. It will thus be seen that this lady, who is the subject of some strange nervous derangement, is going through a series of convulsions, in the midst of which she wakes at regular hours, and after a peculiar sound has been emitted. When asleep she is alike insensible to the effects of both sound and pain. During the last five or six years Miss Godsey has been subject to neuralgic pains in the head and spine, and in almost constant pain when awake to feel it. Her mind is perfectly rational while she is awake, and she readily distinguishes her mother and the friends who attend on her. Of course she has had no opportunity of enlarging her ideas, and her mind is in almost the same state with regard to knowledge as when she was eight years of age. She is unable to stand or walk, but can speak in a low tone of voice.

night she awakes at 9 and at 11 o'clock. The

She says she is never sleepy, and never hungry. Small portions of well-cooked food are supplied to her daily, but she seldom shows a preference as to what she eats. She drinks tea and conce sometimes, and very frequently asks for water. She breathes in a very low and subdued manner. Personally she has very frank, intelligent features, black hair, small mouth, and dark complexion. She has for years been attended by Dr. Glover and Dr. Phea. This is the first time she has been so far away from home, having been brought for the purpose of undergoing a medical inspection. The patient has been examined by numerous eminent physicians, and her symptoms are considered to be the result of an abnormal condition of the nervous system. unparalleled in the history of medical science.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND THE WAR. - A letter from Berlin says:-Victory followed victory, and the success of the Prussian arms became an evident fact of the most doubting, but the tide of travel did not resume its course. Nobody has felt like making pleasure trips when every mail might bring news of the death of a dear relative upon the battle-field, and those who have no friends in the army still feel a too lively interest in the progress of events to indulge in the wild gaicties of the sea or mountain side. John, the next door neighbor of your correspondent, is a restless mortal, who has fretted and fumed in the generally disturbed condition of the universities and schools of science. About twelve hundred of the students from the Berlin University had either been drawn into the army or had joined the volunteer corps, and nearly every one of the students of science were in the field. John and I had planned a campaign of country excursions during the summer vacation, through which we proposed to treat two genuine Americans to a little closer insight into the real life of this German Volk. But no live man with the slightest interest in the progress of events could leave Berlin durlin during these exciting days of August when the news of the declaration of war, the battles of Weissenburg, Woerth. Saarbrucken and Metz kept the city in fover heat.

AN OLD SOLDIER,-The story of an old French officer, coming to redeem a relic of his martial days, is thus told by a correspondent

writing from Vaux:—
We had just finished dinner, and were smoking the post-prandial cigar, when an orderly came in to say that a Frenchman desired to speak with the commandant of Vaux. "Monsieur le Commandant," said he, "and Messieurs les officiers, I beg of you to be seated; and if Monsieur le Colonel will grant me a few moments, I will not detain him long." A chair was immediately handed him, when he continued: "Monsieur le Colonel, I rm, as you perceive, an old soldier of France. although I am sorry to say that my years and my hard service compelled me long since to relinquish my profession and to retire to this peaceful village of Lorraine, not too far off for me to hear the reveille and retreat borne to me morning and evening from Metz, and country is in your hands. I am too much of a soldier not to respect orders. I had the proclamation brought to me that the inhabitents of Vaux should at once bring all their arms to the guard-house. Mine consisted of a fowling-piece and a dagger. It is on the subject of this degger that I now come to disturb you. Gentlemen, you all know how an old soldier prizes the relics of bygone glory, or the presents of some dear comrade who has fought and died by his side. I come to claim your forbearance and your kindness in such a cause. That dagger was given to my father by the Emperor Napoleon I on the bloody field of Austerlitz. I have worn it at my side in many a hard-fought action, and now I seem to miss my old comrade from the nail where he used to hang, and I come to beg you to give the old soldier back a memento that to you is useless, but that serves to remind him of comrades dead and gone, of hard-fought fields, and lonely bivouses. If I have asked too much, excuse the trouble I have given you in listening to my story; but if it is possible for you to grant my request, accept the thanks of an old soldier who, like you all, has fought and bled for his country. I need hardly add what was the sequel. An orderly was immediately despatched for the much-prized dagger; the old French gentleman smoked a cigar and drank a glass of wine; and when his much-prized weapon was returned to him by the Colonel, a tear glittered in his eye, as he drew up his tall figure at the door, and with a "Dieu vous benisse, Messieurs!" he bowed and left us.
