

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14, 1870.

Not That Woman, but Another Woman. Yesterday I had occasion to mention the name of a woman who for months past had been employed in and around New York the arts of a system, for the sake of making a comfortable and pleasant living. I now discover, to my horror, that it was not that woman, but another woman, and that the other woman is divisible into three distinct personalities representative of three distinct degrees of crime.

It has come to light that the real name of the woman whose death I yesterday mentioned is Mrs. Rebecca C. Jones, and that she was known as the Williamsburg Adventress. The three personalities who appear upon shifting the story to the bottom, may be specified as follows:—

First, There was this Mrs. Jones, who appears to have been merely a vulgar sort of swindler, possessing no great attractions of person, mind, or manner, and employing no arts that were much above those of mediocrity.

Second, There is a Mrs. Patterson, whose real name is Smith, and who possesses considerable good looks and a good deal of grace of manner, and a rather piquant art of improvising and leading her hearer to believe what she tells him. She is a little over thirty years old, well-formed but not very well-informed. Whatever means she uses to deceive with are those with which nature alone has provided her. She has no culture and no accomplishments. Still, her natural flow of language is great, and her natural cunning enables her to make use of this gift usually to her own advantage. She is far from being a first-class swindler, however. She does not adhere to one line of falsehood; she does not possess the unpeppable advantage of possessing an invisible accomplice; she recklessly encounters herself with luggage which, when a crisis comes, she is compelled to abandon and sacrifice, unless she remains and sacrifices herself; and she does not tell a perfectly straight story, and is easily "cornered" by anyone resolved to fathom the fraud. Each of these women, smart though she is, is incalculably inferior to Number three, whose favorite alias is Mrs. Patterson, but who is known as Mrs. Warner as well. Mrs. Patterson-Warner is one of the most accomplished frauds that ever lived. She has most of those natural and artificial graces that "go down" alike with women as well as men. She has, behind the scenes, an accomplice who never for a moment comes in sight, but who apparently keeps her accurately posted with respect to every movement made by detectives with her disadvantage. She is well educated, converses charmingly, has an air of innocence, respectability and frankness, not to say Christian virtue. She adheres absolutely to one line of operations, and sticks to it through thick and thin, no matter what the obstacles may be. She moves from place to place encumbered with no useless baggage. When the moment for flight arrives, no time is lost in piling over cherished articles that must be sacrificed. Her self-possession is wonderful. Her stories are told with such confidence and adroitness that to trip her up in one of them is an impossibility. In her you have a confidence woman in whom swindling amounts to genius, and the enormity of whose sin you lose sight of in your admiration of the artistic perfection with which sin is rendered of use to her. And so I drop the confidence woman question for the present.

Crowbars and Cold Potatoes. The case of Mr. and Mrs. Babington came up yesterday in one of our courts, and presents several points that are peculiar enough to deserve mentioning. Mrs. Babington is the plaintiff and Mr. Babington the defendant. The plaintiff brings the action to obtain a decree of separation and separate maintenance. They have been married about fifteen years, and continued living together until the fall of 1868, when Mrs. Babington left her husband because of his cruel treatment of her. His cruel treatment took the form of getting drunk, and, while he was in that condition, of subjecting her to a rain of crowbars and cold potatoes. Why marital violence should have assumed this particular form is not satisfactorily set forth in the complaint. Perhaps Mr. B. objected to potatoes with the skins off, and in that case, if Mrs. B. had devoted the same attention to keeping her eye "peeled" that she did to keeping the potatoes so, it would have been better for her in the end. Mr. B., on his side, avers that it was Mrs. Babington, and not he, who got drunk; that she called him all sorts of abusive and indecent names; that as a mild endeavor to frighten her off, he once picked up a crowbar, which, dropping out of his hand, rolled over on the floor and touched her ankle; and that he on one occasion threw at her one potato when she was visiting the family, and who, she insisted, should get from the table, "and get." "Man and Wife" is the same old story being told in all degrees of life. In this case the parties seem to occupy a respectable position in society, and to have been very comfortably off so far as money is concerned. Perhaps, indeed, that is what's the matter.

Miscellaneous Mention. The division of the city into three police districts is talked of. The peculiarly significant death of Superintendent Jordan has suggested the propriety of this division, since the duties that have hitherto devolved upon the Chief of Police are too arduous for one man to perform without injury to his brain and body. Miss Netta has been "put out" of the Saleswomen's Early Closing Association. The reason for her being put out is that she peremptorily refused to hand to the association, until it should be more permanently and securely established, such money as, through her personal exertion, she has collected from Mayor Hall, Commissioner Tweed, Sheriff O'Brien, and County Clerk Loew. Fisk's body-guard has been busy receiving three antique military delegations from New England, namely, the Newburyport Artillery, the Ameskeag Veterans, and the Putnam Phalanx. The men composing these delegations are extremely staid and solid-looking. What there can be in common between them and the consciences of Proteus of opera and railroad it is not easy to understand. Perhaps it is to be accounted for on the old principle of extremes. The approaching arrival of French artists in this city is mentioned. Among those spoken of as about to arrive are Rosa Bonheur, Jerome Meissonier, Salentine, and Galant. At present Paris is closed to art. The muses never flourish among the accoutrements of war. Canons in art and cannon in artillery have little sympathy with each other. Some of our millionaires might, by giving orders to those artists, do a great deal for art at home by recognizing the art which comes to us from abroad.
