THE ENGLISH CENSUS SYSTEM.

How the People are Enumerated in Great Britain-The Gradual Perfection of the Machinery, and its Superiority to Our Iwa.

The glaring defects of the recent enumeration of the people of Philadelphia will naturally excite curlosity as to the census machinery of Great Britain, which enjoys such a high reputation for efficiency. The United States was the first country in which a systematic attempt was made to ascertain the number of inhabitants, a regular decennial enumeration of the people being provided for in the Constitution as originally adopted, and the first census taken in 1790, immediately after the machinery of the new form of government was put in mo-

In Great Britain the first regular census taken was in 1801. The population previous to that time was much in dispute until 1835, when an examination of the parish registers of births, marriages, and deaths was made by the clergy, the inquiry in some instances being extended as far back as 1570. On the supposition that the births, marriages, and deaths bore the same proportion to the total population before as after that date, an estimate of the aggregate population of England and Wales was made on this basis for various dates between 1570 and 1750, and these estimates form the most authentic clue extant to the population of the country previous to the opening of the present century.

The census taken in 1801 included the number of persons in each parish of the kingdom, distinguished by sex but not by age, the number of inhabited houses and tamilies tenanting them, the number of uninhabited houses, and some indefinite and unsatisfactory inquiries as to the occupations of the people.

In the second census-that of 1811-the same facts were elicited, except that, instead of attempting to ascertain the occupation of each person, the number of families chiefly supported by certain occupations was taken.

In 1821 the ages were ascertained for the first time, classified by five years under twenty and by ten over that age.

In 1831 many improvements were introduced in the census system, with respect to ascertaining the occupations of the people, the whole number of occupations returned being 598. The area of each parish and township was also taken this year, for the first time. Up to this date, the enumerations were superintended by Mr. Rickman, clerk of the House of Commons, the labor being performed by the overseers of the poor in England and Wales, and by the parochial schoolmasters in Scotland.

In 1841 the work of enumeration was transferred to the officers of the Registrar-General of births, marriages, and deaths, England and Wales being divided into about 35,000 different enumeration districts, each with not less than 25 nor more than 200 innabitants, so that the enumeration of each district was easily completed in a single day. The exact age and employment of every person were taken, and also the number born in and out of the county in which they resided, or abroad.

In 1851 still further improvements were effected, inquiries being extended to the marital and family relationships, the number of blind and deaf and dumb, and the statistics of religious and educational institutions. Under the Registrar-General of births, marriages, and deaths-an office which had long been in existence in England and Wales-there were at that time 624 superintendent registrars and 2190 local registrars. The latter divided their districts into 30,610 sub-districts, with an enumerator to each. There being at that time no registration system in Scotland, the enumeration in that country was made by the sheriffs, schoolmasters, etc., the number of enumeration districts being 7873, making 38,740 districts altogether, with as many different enumerators, to an aggregate population of 20,816,351. In the United States the number of enumerators in 1860 was 4417, to a population of 31,445,080an average of 7119 inhabitants to each, while in 1851 the average in Great Britain was but 537 inhabitants to each enumerator. Hence, while in the United States the enumeration is protracted through an almost indefinite period, in Great Britain it is completed in a single day, and a degree of accuracy is attainable which is altogether out of the question under the loose system of this country. Under the perfected English system which was put in practice in Great Britain in schedule was given to every occupier of a house or tenement, in the course of the week preceding the S1st of March, and every person to whom such a schedule was delivered was required by act of Parliament, under penalty for wilful default, to fill it up with all the information required. On the 31st of March each enumerator visited every house in his district-allowing five persons to a family, the average number of houses to a district was but 107-and collected the schedules, which he was required to correct when defective or apparently inaccurate, and fill up when returned to him blank. The enumerator was directed to ascertain carefully that no person was omitted from the schedule who slept in the house on the previous night, and that no person who was then absent was included. In some cases, this course would not have resulted in securing the actual population of a particular district, but in all such cases the enumerator was required to make an estimate of the number of persons only temporarily absent from their usual place of abode or temporarily in the house in which they were found to have slept on the night of March 30, to accompany the published statements as comments, and also to estimate the number of persons who had slept in the open air or in other unusual places, on the same night. Special schedules were also prepared for sea-going persons in all capacities. The whole task was thus elaborately laid out, and effectively and accurately performed within publication. But little improvement on the system so successfully carried out in 1851 was possible, and therefore there were no material changes in 1861. In that year, the perfected system in all its details was put in practice in Ireland, and the enumeration throughout the entire United Kingdom was made on the 8th of April, and completed in a single day, as before.

gate result in the whole kingdom was ready for

Not until Congress sees fit to provide for the same elaborate machinery in this country as in Great Britain can we expect to have an enumeration of the people which will approximate to the truth. The lamentable failure of the enumerators in Philadelphia, New York, and other large cities to perform their task thoroughly this year should make such a durable impression on public opinion as not to suffer it to be forgotten and ignored by our law-makers, when preparations are in progress for the census of

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The City Amusements.

At the Chesnut Mad'lle Fanny Janauschek will appear this evening in the title role of Schiller's tragedy of Mary Stuart. This lady

s one of the few really great tragic actresses of the day, and as during her present engagement she will perform in English, an unusual interest will attach to her personations. The engagement of Mad'lle Japaneschek is limited to six nights and one matinee, and in addition to "Mary Stuart" she will appear as "Deborah;" "Bianca," in the tragedy of Fazio; "Lady Macbeth" and in The Debutante.

AT THE ARCH a new comedy entitled The Two Roses, which has achieved considerable success in London and New York, will be produced this evening, with new scenery, appointments, etc.
At the Walnut Mr. J. S. Clarke will appear this evening as "Young Gosling," in the new comedy of Fox and Goose, by Mr. J. D. Stockton, of this city, and the late William Brough. This piece achieved a brilliant success in London when Mr. Clarke brought it out there during his brilliant engagement at the Strand Theatre, and as Mr Stockton is a Philadelphian, the interest that is felt in its first performance here will undoubtedly crowd the Walnut to its utmost capacity this evening. The perform-ance will conclude with Nicholas Nickleby, in which Mr. Clarke will appear as "Newman

AT THE AMERICAN Mr. G. W. Jester, the man with the "talking hand," will appear this evening, in conjunction with a variety of other entertaining features.

ADAM FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE will commence its second week at the corner of Broad and Wallace streets to-day. This show includes a full troupe of first-class equestrians, acrobats, and trained horses, and a large collec-tion of wild animals. Exhibitions will be given this afternoon and evening:

AT THE ELEVENTH STIMET OPERA HOUSE new duet entitled "The Larboard Watch," will be sung this evening by Carneross and Russell.
The burlesques of The Philadelphia Firemen,
Dr. Schenck's Syrup, and Mad'lle Nilsson; or,
The Black Nightingale, will be repeated.
At the Arch Street Opera House Mr.

Hughey Dougherty, the favorite comedian, and Messrs. Sheridan and Mack, the character performers, will appear for the first time this evening. The farce of Forty Winks will conclude the evening's entertainment.

AT DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S OPERA HOUSE the drama of Christmas Eve; or, The Duel in the Snow, and the farce of Nicely Taken In are announced for this evening.

THE GERMANIA ORCHESTRA will resume its popular matinee performances at Musical Fund Hall on next Saturday. The "rehearsals" of the Germania a few seasons ago were among the most attractive musical entertainments ever given in this city, and it was a matter of gene-ral regret when they were discontinued. It is to be hoped that the effort now being made to establish this orchestra upon a permanent footing will be a success, and that its performances will receive such patronage as they deserve.

MADAME MARIE SEEBACH will commence a eason of six performances of German tragedy on Monday evening next at the Academy of Music. She is announced to appear as "Mary Stuart," "Jane Eyre," "Adrienne Lecouvrent," "Louisa Miller," in Schiller's Kabale und Liebe, and as 'Marguerite," in Goethe's Faust. Madame Seebach has a great European reputation, and although the experiences of Janus-chek demonstrated the difficulties in the way of making German tragedy popular, her per-formances will doubtless merit the attention of all real lovers of dramatic art.

ENGLISH OPERA.—A season of English opera will commence at the Academy of Music on November 14, when the combination under the management of C. D. Hess & Co., which includes all the principal members—with the excep-tion of Madame Parepa-Rosa—of the two troupes that were before the public last season, will appear in a round of favorite operas. This troupe is now the only one before the American public, and as the prospects for operatic performances, except for such as they give, are exceedingly slim, their season ought to be a brilliant success.

FAST LIVING AND ITS CONSEQUENCES .- When 'fast life" has undermined the strength, destroyed the appetite, impaired the digestion, and stolen the hue of health from the cheek-when the hand trembles, the spirits droop, and the whole physical and mental organization languishes, is it possible to repair the evil and restore the dilanidated system to full health and vigor? We answer that it is, Hundreds of cases have been cited, thousands might be cited, in which this regeneration has been accomplished by the regular and persistent use of PLAN-TATION BITTERS. Abstinence from the indulgences which have wrought the mischief is, of course, ene of the means of restoration. But it is not sufficient alone. The consequences remain after the cause has been abandoned. A wholesome and genial tonic is absolutely necessary to rouse the corporal and mental energies from their state of collapse. This good work it is the mission of the Plantation Bitters to perform. But no other stimulant must be taken.

A FINE THING FOR THE TEETH .- The fragrant SOZODONT has taken a very prominent place among the most approved dentrifices of the day. It is a very popular article for the toilet, highly recommended by all who have used it, as a beautifier and preserver of the teeth, refreshing the mouth, sweetening the breath, and arresting the progress of decay.
