THE WAR.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

THE ARMISTICE FAILS AND THE STRUGGLE AROUND PARIS RENEWED-GENERAL CHAN-GARNIER ON THE SURRENDER OF METZ. LONDON, Nov. 7.

A Prussian dispatch from Versailles reports that Thiers positively declined to conclude an armistice on the basis that the present status continue four weeks. He had no equivalent to offer for the proweeks. He had no equivalent to offer for the pro-visioning of Paris, which consequently would not be conceded. Thiers complains of the annoyance caused him by the eagerness of American corres-pondents to obtain news of the recent negotiations. The Barings have withheld the Prussian loan which they intended to introduce to-day.

The correspondent of the New York Tribune at Blois the 3d says the headquarters of the army of Blois, the 3d, says the headquarters of the army of the Loire yesterday were at Mer. To day a retro-grade movement is general. The headquarters moved from Mer to a village two leagues near Blois, on the Orleans road. Forty thousand Prus-sians are reported arrived from Metz to reinforce General Tann. On our side nothing is likely to be done unless attacked. The government dreads the General Tann. On our side nothing is likely to be done unless attacked. The government dreads the effect of a reverse, and has resolved to risk nothing. No attempt to relieve Paris will be made for six weeks at least.

This army equals the enemy immediately in front numerically, but shows a compltee want of confi-dence among the men, and indifference manifested by the officers, who are mostly without sympathy with the present government. I have travelled much in neighboring districts. The government everywhere is distrusted and disliked. The government everywhere is distrusted and disliked.

Letters and newspapers from Paris have been received from a special correspondent of the Tribune, dated the 30th inst. They are mostly occupied with Fleurens' coup d'etat, heretofore telegraphed. The National Guard of Mont Martre and Batigalles had held an indignation meeting to protest against being employed in forts. The volunteer movement started by Trochu had failed. Less than one-fifth of the number asked for responded. The discipling does not improve.

The discipline does not improve.

The recent reconnoissances were promenades in force. The troops marched out of one gate, kept well within the line of forts, and returned by another gate to the city. The grossest military offences pass without punishment. The national guard who quarreled with his officer, and drew his every deal of the received six days' imprisonment. sword on him, received six days' imprisonment. Officers of the Garde Mobile, on duty on the ram-parts, leave their men and go home to dinner. The theatres are gradually reopening. The govern-ment's systematic deceptions continue before the public, but privately they confess that the situa-tion is daily more critical. Trochu and other members are at loggerheads.

Every sortie yet made resulted in either a route or orderly retreat. Of the 300,000 National Guards or orderly retreat. Of the 300,000 National Guards perhaps 200,000 have guns that would fire without bursting. The government, though volunteering fails, does not attempt to carry out the law subjecting all men between twenty-five and thirty-five years to enrollment. The workingmen are so fond of the situation, getting a frame and a half a day and rations for their families, that factories valuely offer six france for skilled workmen. The govern-ment are so afraid of irritating the people that salt meat is distributed only to the garrison and the wounded. I saw Trochu yesterday. I found him utterly prostrated, and incapable of doing business. I asked why he did not act energetically against ultras. He replied that he wished to preserve his power by moral force.

A correspondent of the Tribune writes from Versailles on the 2d, that the expected reinforcements from Metz have not arrived, being detained by bad weather. Von Kendall, Bismarck's chancellor, says a very small proportion of the Metz army will come to Paris, the present force being considered sufficient to repulse any sortic.

A correspondent of the Tribune telegraphs from Versailles that Thiers has left Versailles for Tours In reality the negotiating parties never approached the basis of agreement for an armistice. The revictualing of Paris was insisted upon from the beginning by Thiers, but steadily refused by Bis-

LONDON, Nov. 7.—[Special to the New York World.]—A correspondent of the World had a conversation to-day with the French Charge de Affaires at London. He says that members of the government in Paris rejected the conditions made by Bismarck, because they are confident of the ability of France to finally repel the invaders, preserve all territory and save the honor of the country. France is now savagely in carnest. Every day try. France is now savagely in carnest. Every day she grows stronger and more conscious of her she grows stronger and more conscious of her strength.

Prussia can no longer get food and forage by simply overawing the population. They get nothing without fighting hard for it. As winter advances Prussia's difficulties in obtaining supplies will become greater, while the armies of Bourbaki and Keratry will have no trouble in receiving everything necessary. An attack upon the forts defending Paris will scarcely be possible before the 20th, and no bombardment of the city will be possible till the forts are taken. The forts are armed with more powerful guns than any that have yet been planted against them.

The Prussians have few guns of heavier calibre than sixty-four pounders. Should these now open fire, the guns of the forts would soon silence them, and even should the forts finally be taken, the grounds between them and the encients are honeycombed with inlines filled with powder, ready to be exploded by electric wires, and all the roads leading to the gates are defended by barricades of masonry constructed with scientific skill, and mounted with guns of the best description.

constructed with scientific skill, and mounted with guns of the best description.

The whole number of men now around Paris is 800,000, of whom 650,000 are armed and have arrived at a high state of discipline. The drilling of new levies is proceeding rapidly, so that 200,000 additional troops in excellent condition will soon be ready and capable of taking the field. The supplies of food will certainly be ample till the first of January.

At the final conference between Count Von Bismarck and Jules Favre the former, for the first time, declared that he would not consent to the admission of food into Paris during the trucs. The provisional government of France refused its consent to an armistice without this condition, which Bismarck had intended would be granted. The real cause of disagreement, however, was the utter refusal of the French government to promise the cession of territory.

A correspondent of the World at Versailles on the 3d, says the Prussian attack on Le Bourget on the 30th ult. was made by the second division guards under General Von Briedrictzki, 6000 men strong. The French, who occupied every house, wall and under General Von Briedrietzki, 6000 men strong. The French, who occupied every honse, wall and other defensible spot in the village, held the Prussians at bay for several hours, shooting thirty officers. Among those killed were Count Von Waldersee, of the Augusta regiment; Colonel Zaluskowski, of the Elizabeth regiment; Count Varkalla and four hundred men of the guards. The enemy was on the point of giving way before the severe fire of the French, when Briedrietzki, grasping the standard of the regiment, led in a charge which resulted in driving the French back to St. Denis. resulted in driving the French back to St. Denis. The new French works between the old forts begin to appear very formidable. Large numbers of men are working daily to complete them.

Lendon, Nov. 7.—[Special to the New York Herald]—The correspondent of the Herald telegraphs from Brussels, on the 5th, an account of an interview with Ceneral Changarnier, during which the latter made the following statement in regard to the capitulation of Metz:—Bazaine did not sell himself. His work was far from an act of treason. There was no treachery and no necessity for it.

There was no treachery and no necessity for it. Bazaine is incompetent to command a large army. Numbers bewildered him. He could not move his men; could not operate his forces; he had no judgment, no foresight. He was also a selfish man, all for self-personal glory and not his country's honor.

Bazaine thought all the time peace would be proclaimed soon, that Paris would never hold out, that the war would fall flat, and that his military reputation would not be impaired. He hoped to march out of Metz at the head of 150,000 men, the march out of Metz at the head of 150,000 men, the cream of the French army, and make the public believe him a hero. After Bazaine was driven into Metz on the 19th of August he could have escaped, had he marched boldly out with his entire army. During the thirteen remaining days of that month, thirty days of September, and the first fifteen days of October, he could have done this with absolute certainty.

During the last ten days of the investment of Metz sorties were impossible, and no attack nor at-tempt at escape could be made, because we had no artiflery, no cavalry and only 60,000 infantry. could do nothing against three branches of the could do nothing against three branches of the Prussian army.

At the surrender there were 135,000 soldiers. Of these 25,000 were wounded or disabled, and 10,000 sick. The cavalry and artillery were useless, because they had no horses. Thus reduced the effective force was 60,000 infantry. All our fine horses were caten up, our bread sour and we had no salt. The last ten days of the investment the soldiers walked in mud up to their knees. Heavy rains and starvation made us surrender.

Bazaine n ver made a serious effort to escape from Metz. Every sortie was only a pretended sorting the source of the sorting and the Bazaine never made a serious effort to escape from Metz. Every sortie was only a pretended sortie for appearance and nothing else. There were four high officers at Metz besides Bazaine. They were all for inaction. I saw all the military mancuvres. They were all shams, Bazaine and his friends not acting as soldiers, but only seeking their own future. The sorties were all in small force, and could not be successful. General Changarnier concluded with some remarks on the political situation, and declared that the only hope for France ation, and declared that the only hope for France was in the restoration of the Orleanists. Napoleon he considered dead.

VERSAILLES, Nov. 6. VERSAILLES, Nov. 6.

It now seems to be the general impression that Prussia has only sought to gain time by seeming to admit the possibility of an armistice, in order that the troops lately investing Metz could come forward to Paris without danger.

Vescelers. LONDON, Nov. 7 .- It is rumored that Gladstone will stand for London in the next parliamentary election in place of Baron Lionel Rothschild. London, Nov. 7.—[Special to the New York Tribune.]—The latest balloon post from Paris brings a number of the Figure of the 4th instant, containing a letter from Flourens filling two columns, and giving a description of events of the 31st of October. The arrest of members of the provisional government was not terminated by force but by an agreement concluded between Dorian and Schedaker on the one side and representatives of the government on the other, and subsequently ratified by them and Flourens. The agreement was that the elections from the commune should take place on Tuesday, under the direction of Dorian and Schedaker, and the elections for a new government on Wednesday. To avoid bloodshed and prove to our friends and partisans of the government that we were of one mind, we agreed to leave the Hotel de Ville together. On our side the agreement was completely fulfilled. The members of the government remaining in our custody were released. We quitted the Hotel de Ville in their company. Next morning all these sacred pledges were violated. The commune elections were abandoned or postponed, and there will be no levy en masse. A Paris journal of the 3d published some official the first being the failure to hold commune elec-tions, and second, the government's consent to armistice negotiations. Rochefort is equally alienated from the Flourens party. Favre, Trochu and five other members of the government wrote to Rochefort, asking him to return, but he refused.
