OF NEW BOOKS.

-"Crumbs Swept Up" is the title of a book of short essays on familiar subjects by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, which has just been issued by Evans, Stoddart & Co. Mr. Talmage, both as a preacher and as a writer, has a short, snappy, and rather bumptious style that must be agreeable to the tastes of a very large number of men and women of average intelligence, for he has undoubtedly a multitude of admirers, and innumerable were the tears that were shed when the "dear man" abandoned his field of usefulness in this city to take possession of a more extensive one in Brooklyn. The style of Mr. Talmage, notwithstanding the fact that it is so extensively popular, is not one that can be cordially admired upon critical grounds, and the series of papers in the volume before us are open to the objections of being rather superficial in treatment and rather slangy in tone. They are, however, lively and animated, and here and there we find a gleam of genuine poetry that redeems many faults, while some of the descriptive passages are so good that they inspire a wish that Mr. Talmage had carried his pen a little more carefully in other places and given throughout as good writing as he was able. The essays have many of them been published before in magazines and newspapers, and the fact that they have been extensively copied proves that they appeal to the sympathies and tastes of a very large audience. Their general character can be guessed at by such titles as "Cut Behind." "Orange Blossoms Frosted," "The Kilkenny Cats," "Good Cheer," "Hobbies," "Star Engagements," "Children's Books," "Making Things Ge," "Saturday Night," "Prayermeeting Killers," "The Right Track," "Chills and Fever Vindicated," "Sublime Wretchedness of Watering-places," and "The Smile of the Sea." The book is handsomely printed and bound, and is filled with numerous clever illustrations by the Bensell Brothers.

-The following recent publications of Fields, Osgood & Co. have been sent us by J. B. Lippincott & Co.:-

"Talks About People's Stomachs," by Dio Lewis, A. M., M. D., is a series of brief essays the character of which is indicated by the title, but which have the merit, rare even in so-called popular medical works, of being exceedingly readable. If good advice with regard to keeping the human stomach in order be considered a pill that few would be disposed to take for its own sake, Dr. Lewis is entitled to the credit of having applied a sugar-coating with much judgment; and this little book of dietetic hints is not only good in itself, but it will be found infinitely entertaining to any one who wishes to beguile a leisure hour with really amusing

"Vagabond Adventures," by Ralph Keeler is a series of autobiographical sketches, of which "The Tour of Europe for $181 in currency," which first appeared in the Atlantic Monthly a few months ago, is a fair sample. In the volume before us are narrated his wanderings from the age of eleven, when he ran away from home, to the age of twenty-two, when he returned from his remarkable European tour, and commenced life in earnest by writing out his experiences for the benefit of the public. Mr. Keeler tells his story in a very straightforward way, and the rich vein of humor that appears to have enabled him to look upon the bright side of the most deplorable situations, and the strong individuality that marks the book, place the reader immediately en rapport with the writer, and although other travellers have had more important matters to tell, as entertaining a book of adventures as this has not been given to the public for a long time.

From the same house we have received the following recent publications of Lee & Shepard:-

"The House on Wheels" is a translation from the French of Madame de Soltz, by Miss E. F. Adams. It is a pleasantly written parrative of the adventures of a little boy who was stolen by gipsies, and the interest of the narrative and the clever illustrations ought to make it popular with the young people.

"Field and Forest," by Oliver Optic, is the first volume of the "Upward and Onward Series." In this series the career of a youth from childhood to manhood will be illustrated and described, and the hero will be represented as a young man of high aims and lofty purposes, which will preserve him in many temptations and enable him to pass with eredit through many stirring adventures. The seene of the present story is laid up n the waters of the Upper Missouri, and it gives the hero an excellent introduction to the reader.

"Who Will Win?" and "Going on a Mission," by Paul Corbin, are the two first volumes of the "Beckoning" series. They endeavor to inculcate sound religious and moral principles under the guise of pleasantly-written stories, and can be recommended as excellent books to be placed in the hands of young people, whose tastes are consulted not merely by interesting narratives, but by fine paper, neat printing, numerons illustrations, and very tasteful binding, that will make the volumes decidedly ornamental upon the shelves of a library.

J. B. Lippincott & Co. send us of their own publications a handsome volume entitled "Good Stories for Young People," which contains some of the best short stories that have appeared during the past year in Good Words for the Young. These are from the pens of able and popular writers, among whom may be mentioned Miss Mulock, Kathrine S. Macquoid, and Hans Christian Andersen. The illustrations are by artists of firstrate ability, and the book is altogether what its name implies, a collection of really good stories that both old and young may read with interest and profit.

-Clarton. Remsen & Haffelfinger send us

the following new publications:-

"Geoffrey the Lollard," by Francis Eastwood, published by Dodd & Mead, is a fictitions narrative based upon the facts with regard to the persecution of the early reformers who went under the name of Lollards, which are recorded by Fox in "The Book of Martyrs." Considerable ingenuity is displayed in the construction of the story, which gives a graphic picture of an important political and religious era.

"The Castaways," by Captain Mayne Reid, published by Sheldon & Co., is one of those exciting narratives of adventure, filled with the most extraordinary statements with regard to beasts, birds, fishes, reptiles, and vegetable growths-for the truth of which the author vouches most earnestly-that Captain Reid's many youthful admirers find so vastly entertaining. The best commendation we can bestow upon the story before us is that it is written in fully as extravagant a vein as any of its predecessors, and that its facts in natural history would be hard to believe if they were narrated by any one but Captain Mayne Reid.

"The Vivian Romance," by Mortimer Collins, and "Which is the Heroine?" are a couple of attractive English stories that Messrs. Harper & Brothers have just added to their "Library of Select Novels."

-"Two Ways of Doing It," by Miss L. Bates, published by J. P. Skelly & Co., is a discussion of some of the subjects relating to the woman's rights controversy, under the form of a fictitious narrative, and some of the views advanced have the merit of being more sound and sensible than those too often put forward by the women who talk a great deal about their rights without apparently having any very clear ideas as to what those rights

Hart, LL.D., which has just been published by J. C. Garrigues & Co., is an exposition of the principles which underlie the Sundayschool cause, and the relation which the Sunday-school bears both to the individual scho'ar and to the great work of Christianizing the world. Professor Hart has had many years' experience as a Sunday-school superintendent and teacher, and the book before us is full of hints of the highest value to all who are interested in the advancement of the

-From T. B. Peterson & Bros. we have received "The Initials," by the Baroness Tautphœus. This is one of the most charming love stories of modern times, and it fully deserves the extended popularity that is evidenced by the appearance of this new Messrs. Peterson also send us "Captain Simon Suggs," a series of sketches of life in Alabama in what we must now consider the old times. These sketches were very popular when they were first published, and they have enough genuine humor in them to repay a reperusal.

-No. 47 of "Zell's Popular Encyclopedia" embraces the titles between "Pontific" and "Psalmist." This encyclopedia is entitled to Six Per Cent. Bonds the regards of the public on account of its completeness and its cheapness. In no other work in the language is so much valuable information given at the same price, and now that it is fast approaching completion a clear idea of its great value can be obtained. In some respects it is the most satisfactory encyclopedia published, as it treats of many subjects not contained in any other work of the kind, and it is brought down to the very received the November numbers of The Sunday Magazine, Good Words, and Good Words for the Young, which contain excellent stories and sketches by some of the best English writers of the day, which are illustrated by numerous beautiful designs from the pencils of artists of reputation. The November number of Good Words for the Young commences a new volume, and it presents among other attractions the opening chapters of a new story entitled "The Princess and the Goblin," by the editor, George MacDonald.

walking (says a correspondent) on the banks of the Loire, when I discovered a dog, something of a setter, trotting up and down by the water's edge. He went and came with uneven steps, sometimes stopping short as if he were pondering some weighty matter.

His proceedings roused my curiosity, and, concealing myself behind some young trees, the same manner for more than a quarter of

Presently, having finally resolved on his course, he raised himself on his poor paralyzed paws, made a spring and threw him-self into the Loire. I ran to the place from whence he fell, and saw him carried off by the stream without making the slightest resistance. As he came near the bank I called him gently, and held out my cane that he might take hold of it. He made no sign. I tied my handkerchief to the end of my cane and threw it to him; he turned his head away sadly and drifted off. I lost sight of him at the end of a few minutes. He must no doubt

Feeling persuaded that this unfortunate dog had suddenly chosen death by a deliberate act of his will, I mentioned the circumstance to several persons, and inquiries were made which elicited the fact that the poor animal had belonged to a gardener, who, seeing him infirm and useless, had pitilessly driven him from his home. He had wandered for a whole month in the fields and about the farms, receiving more blows than crusts, till he preferred a violent death to his miserable existence.
