BAZAINE.

The Case of His Accusers-The Charges The conduct of Marshal Bazaine while commanding the Army of the Rhine has been the subject of several communications to the French and Belgiau journals. The case of his accusers is placed in its most authoritative form in a report dated October 28, and addressed to the French Government by E. de Valcourt, an officer of the Mobile Guard, attache at the general headquarters of the Army of the Rhine.

relating to the military, and the second to the political question. The following is an extract from the second

This report is divided into two parts, the first

"As early as the 20th of October an order of the day was read to the officers, aunouncing to them that a treaty of peace was about to be concluded between France and Prussla; that the Empress Regent was to be restored to power, and would join the army with her son; lastly, that the army itself would be ordered to march on the rebellious cities, would subdue them, and protect the meeting of the former Chambers at Toulouse; and that these Chambers would ratify the treaty of peace concluded with the Prussians—a treaty the conditions of which, as will be readily understood, was not communicated to the soldiers.

"Unfortunately for Bazaine's plan, the adhe-sion of King William's Government was less certain than it was at first believed to be. Bazaine-wishing to surrender the army, and not the fortress, over which he had only a restricted power, General Coffinieres being then the superior commander-Prince Frederick Charles declared at last that he declined all arrangements on such terms, and that he would only accept a double capitulation comprising both the Army of the Rhine, that is, 100,000 men ready for immediate action, and the city and

"On the 21st the news arrived of the failure of the pourparlers; on the morning of the next day Marshal Bazaine attempted, for the first time, to communicate with the Government of the National Defense, the existence of which until then he had never acknowledged."

The conclusions of the report are these: -To recapitulate Marshal Bazaine's conduct during the two months and a half which have elapsed from the battle of the 18th of August (Saint Privat) till now, founding our statements on the above-mentioned facts, we shall say: -"1. That the Marshal since the 18th of August, never attempted any sortle of a serious character, and that his attempts to attack the Prussian lines were made only in order that they might afterward serve to his country and in history as excuses for his conduct.

"2. That the Marshal would not attempt a supreme effort which, even in case of a success. would have greatly disorganized his splendid army, and which would no longer have allowed him, the Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the Rhine, to be the arbitrator of the political

3. These considerations also explain why the Marshal never consented to recognize the Gov-ernment of the National Defen e, and sought, up to the very last, to collect the remnants of the Bonapartist power, with the view of esta-blishing a Third Empire.

"4. Once convinced that he could only bring France and the Prussians also to adopt ideas of a Bonapartist restoration by adding the disaster of the capitulation of Metz to the other misfortues which were already weighing down our unhappy country, the Marshal made it his business to hasten the hour of surrender.

To do this he refused to diminish in good time the forage rations, thus suddenly leaving the 29,000 horses, which composed his cavalry and horsed his artillery, without any kind of food, instead of taking measures for making the resources he had still in hand on the 1st of Sep tember, when he made his final great sortie last as long as possible. Also, after many de lays, did he consent to lessen the food rations and that, too, at a time when this measure could be of very slight use, as the quantity of provisions to which it could be applied was very

"5. In fact, Marshal Bazaine acted in every way with one sole object-namely, to be, and to remain, the master of the political situation in France; and, believing that he could make use the Prussians to assist him in the execution of his ambitious designs, he wittingly gave up to them the town and fortress of Metz, as well as the French army-110,000 men - encamped within the entrenchments."

THE PARIS DEFENSES.

The Electric Lights on the Fortifications. The weather about Paris (writes a London Times correspondent v. ho is in the army of the Crown Prince of Prussia) is and has been horrible-pelting rain and heavy gales: but, bad as it the besiegers profit by it to a certain extent, and work with greater success than would wait their efforts on clear, calm nights. The anxiety of the besieged is evinced by the incessant use of electric lights at the forts.

The lighthouse serves to warn the mariner of his danger. These bright eyes pierce the gloom to detect the approach of an enemy. From north and south, east and west, the rays may be seen slowly spreading through the night like prodigious bull's eyes, and now and then the fiash of a gun announces that they have made some important discovery, and salute it with a shell. But, generally, the activity which the gunners displayed some time ago has abated. They seem to have given up the hope of staying the progress of the siege works, and to be preparing for a reply when the attack is made. That is some time distant. The reason assigned for the delay is not in any way connected with peace negotiations. It is simply the necessity feeding the men before all other things which has caused the impediments to the armament of the batteries. All the horses and carts have been employed in bringing up supplies, and it is or has been in intervals of that work and it is or has been in intervals of that work only that the transport of guns and ammunition could be effected. Just think, for example, of the transport needed for the supply of five hundred rounds of two hundred-pound shell for the large mortars, guns, and howitzers. The French may feel they have been too free with their ammunition. It will be an interesting duel between muzzleloaders and breech-loaders, and no doubt, if the former are beaten, the active partisans of the system in England will say that it is notorious the French guns are the worst muzzle loaders in the world. Their shells are very bad indeed. Cloud is full of monsters three feet long with Woolwich studs on them unexploded. If the muzzle-loaders make a good fight of it, as no doubt they will from their great size and stable platforms, it will be halled as a proof of the excellence of the system.

Effects of the Senantion Drama-A Man Robbed and Thrown Across a Railway Track to Die-His Rescue.
The Louisville Journal of Friday last says: -

A terrible affair occurred near O'Bannon's Station last night. From a gentleman who visited the place yesterday morning we learn the following particulars:—

Mr. Ross, formerly a captain in the Confederate army, and now agent for the nursery near Hobb's Station, in this county, got off at the station at O'Bannon's from the 6:30 P. M. train Wednesday night. While in the depot a letter was handed him, which he stopped to read by the station-house lamp. A negro came in during the time Mr. Ross was engaged in reading the letter, and picking up his (Mr. Ross') carpet-bag, read the name thereon, and then laying it down went out of the room. Ross thought nothing particularly of this at the time, but after reading the letter he took up his satchel and started for home. When some distance from the depot, and just as he was entering the woods near the track of the Short-line, he heard some one coming up rapidly behind, who ordered him to halt. As he was turning to see the person making such a peremptory demand, he was struck on the head with a fence rall, stunning him for the instant. Two men, a negro and a white man, then appeared from the surrounding darkness, the one with the fence-rail, with which the first blow had been struck, and the other with a large knife and pistol, and com-menced a furious assault upon Mr. Ross The negro struck him again with the fence-rail, knocking him down, but he was enabled to get on his feet again, when the white man attacked him with the knife, cutting his overcoat and wourding him in several places about the shoulders and bedy. He fell again, when the white assailant put the pistol to his head, but, for some reason, did not shoot. The negro then beat him again about the head with the rail until he lost all consciousness. When he recovered possession of his senses-he supposes about an hour from the time of the attack —he found that the whole pocket had been cut out of his pautaloons, and all the money he had with him, about $775, had been taken. The would-be murderers had dragged him to the railroad track and laid him across the rails, with the intention, no doubt, of leaving him there for the passage of the 9 A. M. train for this city to consummate their bloody purpose. A few moments before the arrival of the train Dr. Walker and a friend were passing by in a buggy, and heard the moans of the wounded man. They put him in the buggy and took him to a neighboring house, where his wounds were dressed. At an early hour this morning Mr. Ross was doing very well, considering the nature of his wounds.

A WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.

A New York Thief Done Female Toggery, Bires Out for a Maid of all Work, and Robs

a Family. A few days ago Mr. Albert Wild, of Williamsburg, advertised in a New York journal for a middle-aged woman who was willing and able to do general housework in his family. On Friday afternoon a tall, awkward looking person, about forty years of age, plainly attired in female costume, called at Mr. Wild's residence and responded to the advertisement. Mr. Wild was absent at the time, and his wife, after ques-tioning closely the "maid of all work," hired her on the spot and set her to work. She expressed a willingness to do any housework required, was not particular as to wages, had a smiling face and a gigantic frame, and appeared to Mrs. Wild to be just the kind of "help" needed in a family where there was a good deal of work to be done. On that evening the maid was treated as "company," and when it was time for the family to retire Mrs. Wild showed her the sleeping apartment provided for her and bade her an affectionate good night, saying that she would get up early in the morning and instruct her as to her daily domestic duties. The maid bade her mistress an attectionate good night also, and both ret.red. True to her promise, Mrs. Wild rose at 7 o'clock vesterday morning and called at the maid's room. The maid was not there. Mrs. Wild repaired to the kitchen. It had no occupant. The mammoth maid was missing. A further search showed that the following articles were also missing:-Three shawls, one set of furs, one gold neck chain, one set of gold armlets. one dozen of handkerchiefs and three children's safes containing about $10 in coin.

The robber is believed to be a well-known New York male confidence thief, who on this occasion gave the name of Minute Singer.

PARIS FASHIONS.

City Hats Crinoline Style of Make Bress Materials and Colors.

By the European mail we have the following report of the dress fashion styles which were prevalent and "coming out" in Paris on the 1st of November:-The Paris bonnet for the winter has a passe or front border, very much raised, and, in some instances, completely turned up; it has also a crown, and generally a curtain, the shape of which varies. A distinguishing feature of this winter's modes is the large colored ostrich feather, placed in a curve over the velvet or satin bonnet. Something very like the cap of former bonnets is also worn; it is made lace and flowers, and worn under the bonnet. Hats are not much worn in towi. by ladies, unless they be very young ones. The two most striking types of hats are the Franc-tireur, very high in shape and very much trimmed with feathers and velvet, and the Marin hat, black and mauve, with the tri-color ribbon. A kind of bobeche hat is also very becoming with brim turned up behind and lowered very much in front, very high crown, dented down a little in the middle, with lorsade of black velvet and red gros grain ribbon twisted together and placed round the crown, and in from the tips of black curled feathers, above which rises a panache of red feathers.

Crinoline is decidedly given up this winter: that is, it has become invisible, and is replaced by the tournure Imperatrice, which gives the fulness required at the back of the waist and supports the train of the skirt. This tournure short for the costume, and for the trainshaped dress a deep flounce is added to it is made with percale, and lined with very stiff

In the making up of the costume there is more simplicity than there was last winter. Usually it now consists of one skirt only and a jacket bodice with deep basques.

The new autumn costumes are made of soft woollen fabrics that are at once light, warm, and elegant; among these cashmere, satin de laine, and llama materials are the nicest. must also mention the shawl costumes, best in keeping for travelling or the seaside, but also very generally adopted for town wear.

The tartan, Scotch plaid, and vigogne shawls are all suitable for making up these costumes. The complete suit consists of skirt, tunic, and loose jacket with wide sleeves, or else of skirt and casaque. The fringes of the shawl are kept for the trimming of tunic and casaque or jacket

THE M'GARRAHAN CASE. GENERAL BUTLER'S VIEW OF IT.

General B. F. Butler has written a letter upon the McGarrahan claim, from which we make the following extracts:-My attention has been called to the several statements of the newspapers about the McGarrahan claim, and its relation to the controversy between claim, and its relation to the controversy between Secretary Cox and the President. I do not think the merits and the position of the case are exactly understood by the country; certainly one view of them has not, to my knowledge, been stated.

It became my duty, as a member of the Judiciary Committee of the House, to take part in the investigation of the case, and to hear the very long and able arguments on either side in behalf of the McGarrahan claim and that of the New Idria Company for many days during the last Congress; and after the fullest investigation and the most patient the fullest investigation and the most patient thought I could give to the subject—and, I will add, from motives of personal friendship to those urging the claim on the part of McGarrahan—I found myself unable to come to the conclusion that McGarra han had any rights in the premises.

M. Garrahan sought an act of Congress conferring the title of the land on himself upon the ground that he bought without knowledge of any defect in the Gon ez title, if any exists, after the judgment of a United States Court had been given confirming that title. The majority of the committee were not convinced of the valinity of his claim or of his equitable rights, because, first, Gomez did not appear equitable rights, because, first, Gomez did not appear ever to have had any title, and secondly, that the very ingenious and sole attempt to import the principles of law securing the rights of purchasers, without notice, of commercial paper before it is due, into the law concerning real property, could scarrely succeed. Upon that point the committee were included to hold that a purchaser of land bought no greater title than the seller had to sell a however nuch title the seller might have an and bought ho greater title than the seller had to sell, however much title the seller might have appeared to have; and for that, and because the matter had been fully adjudicated in the courts, reported against the pretensions of Mr. McGarrahau. Before going on with the hearing, however, the committee directed its Chairman o request the Secretary of the interior not to issue a patent to anybod, to the land until the committee had finished the investigation in the premises. This request of the committee the Secretary at first promised to comply with, but afterwards was very unwilling to achiere to his promise, being quite desirous, apparently to give a patent to the New Ioria Company, and asked the opinion of the Attorney-General, whether he was bound to withhold the patent at the request of the committee. Of course the Attorney-General replied that he was not so bound by law, but the committee came to the conclusion that they would

to them. The Secretary, however, upon considera-tion, thought it best not to issue 'he patent till the committee had finished their labors. In the waning hours of the session, just then closing, there was no time to summ on the New Idria Mining Company to make good in it lite, or further to investigate the same, and it was suggested that the whole matter lie over till the next Congress, and that in the meantime no patent should issue to any-body until the rights of the United States could be

make it very inconvenient for Mr. Cox if he would not listen to their suggestion and keep his promise determined. It appears that during the vacation the New Idria Company pressed upon Secretary Cox, and he was about, as his letter shows, to issue a patent to them which would have been good as against the United States. The President interfered to prevent it. It is generally understood that that interference is in behalf of McGarrahan. I do not believe that McGarthat has any interest in the question whatever, but that the people of the United States have of right millions of property in that claim, which an earnest and careful investigation, in which the Government should be represented, will snow to belong to it. The President has only been holding the title to the land in abeyance until the committee of the House of Representatives get through with the investigation, and determine what the rights of the United States are in the premises. For this I think he ought to have the thanks of all honest and judicious men. Benj. F. Butler.

Fifth, we guarantee that every bill looks like as if it had been carried in the receiver for some time and not one looks had the that every bill looks like as if it had been carried in the pocket for some time, and not one looks brain new. Sixth, we guarantee if you do not get grank and let anything out, no one will ever know it, and thus you will have no trouble. Seventh, we guarantee if you now go in with us and remain true, you will never find cause to regret it. We will go into business with you on these guarantees, and you have only to give a so emn pleage never to mention to any living person where you got the money from. On these conditions only we will formish you as much as you may order on the terms of enclosed

Be sure and address us personally, thus:— C. Bertinis, No. 688 Broadway, New York. The routine of business is for the victims to remit them $50 for $500 worth of spurious money, receiving in return a box filled with sawdust and containing the following circular:

Dear Sir: Do not get discouraged. This is only a Dear Sir:—Do not get discouraged. This is only a blind, and we slivays use this precaution for fear of detection—if the authorities should happen to get wind of our operations and possibly think to watch any c. O. D. we may send out, and seize the money as you were taking it from the express office. Now, to shield you from any possible danger, we have sent this empty box, which you have a perfect right to buy and carry home. But we have the money secure y packed in a different way, and as soon as we get the returns for this package all right we guarantee to send it forward free of charge, and in any event you have a perfect right to receive anything sent free, for there is no proof that you ordered it. We always work on this plan, and it is sure to protect us both, for you have a perfect right to pay for an empty box and also a right to receive anything sent free under seal. We also in this case do not sell the money. We give the money free and seil the empty box. This is a great secret, and we trust you will mention it to no one, as it gives absolute security to us both.

The complainant—who is a verdant young man-endeavored to impress upon the minds of all present in court that he was acting out of pure philanthropy for the benefit of the people of this State, and had left his home in Jersey and parted with fifty dollars of his hard earnings to show these rascals to the public.

Mr. Howe-How would it have been if you had received $500 in counterfeit money?

Wall—I should! have run right down to the Fifteenth Precinct Station House as fast as I could and given it to the officers.

As the complainant admitted he had visited this city exclusively for the purpose of pur-chasing the money, Justice Shandley informed him he was no better than the prisoners, and he would not believe him under oath. He de clined to entertain any complaint from Wall, and the prisoners, who are a disreputable look-ing crowd, left the court room with their counsel, who has no fear of receiving his fee in the money his clients are in the habit of dealing in.-N. BYENING TELEGRAPH OFFICE, Monday, Nov. 31, 1870.

The active preparations for war now going on in various parts of Europe have created intense interest on this side of the Atlantic, and must have an important bearing on general trade. Already prices have been very much unsettled, and in anticipation of large orders for produce have advanced materially. Under the influence of the more pacific news to-day, we are prepared to learn that the activity on 'Change, noticed during the latter half of last week, has subsided, and that the heavy operators have been bitten. We are pleased to notice that the banks are cautious in taking up speculative

N. Y. MONEY MARKET ON SATURDAY. From the N. Y. Herald.

From the N. Y. Herald.

"In financial circles the speculative feeling has found most exercise in the Gold Room, owing to the fresh complications in Europe. Great disappointment was experienced, however, in the comparatively narrow fluctuations in the price of gold, the remembrance of last summer's movement in the precions metal being still too fresh to tempt operators to hold for a heavy rise, not to speak of the normal influences which at this time are adverse to a high price for gold. Hence, while the dealings were very large, the clearances one day amounting to nearly $120,000,000, operators were content with a small profit. The extremes of the week were 110% and 113%—the latter point being attained when it seemed morally certain that the Gortschakoff-Granville correspondence would lead to war between Russia and England. The excitement was as great almost as if war had been actually declared, so that such an emergency seems to have been almost fully discounted in the price of gold at 113%. The comparatively small rise is due to a wholesome apprehension of the interference of causes which, without the present disturbance abroad, would incline gold to a noint seem. ference of causes which, without the present dis-turbance abroad, would incline gold to a point seve-ral per cent. below 110. These are, briefly, the highly ral per cent, below 110. These are, briefly, the kighly satisfactory condition of our foreign trade, which, according to the statistics of the Bureau at Washington, left us on the 1st of September with the small balance of only $9,50,000 against us: the continued disbursement of the November interest on the public debt; the approach of January 1, when a further instalment of nearly $38,000 000 coin interest is coming out of the Treasury, and the heavy exports of wheat and cotton. Indeed, as the war in Europe has closed to us the sources if not the supply of many foreign goods which entered largely into our imports, and as the ensuing six weeks are in the many foreign goods which entered largely into our imports, and as the ensuing six weeks are in the height of our expering season, it would not be at all surprising if on the first of December next we shall have exported more than we imported during the year which will then close. Under these circumstances gold at present prices is far from being cheap, particularly if peace in Europe removes the danger of any sudden return of our Five-twenties.

"The Government list was unfavorably affected by the decline of five-twenties in London, the deby the decline of five-twenties in London, the depression being all the greater that gold remained so stationary—a condition of things that invited a speculation in the transfer of bonds from the London to the New York market. The peaceful aspect of affairs at the end of the week suddenly checked at a sharp improvement. "The agitation produced by the European compli-cations was made the pretext of more activity in money, but the rate on call, except in a few rare instances, did not run up above six per cent, while the general business of the week was at five and six per cent. On Government collaterals the rate was steadily four to five per cent, with exceptions on Saturday to the large Government dealers at three decline, however, and the market closed strong
